1. Essential for the offence.—The essential point in the offence of theft in a building is that the property should be under the protection of the building and the offence may be committed by the owner of the building or other person who has lawful access to the building. Hence, there is nothing in the above section to prevent a person from being convicted for a theft committed by him in his own house. LBR (1872-1892), 367. This is an aggravated form of the offence mentioned in Section 379, and the culpability is not diminished by the presence of the owner. Rat Un Cr C 56. Before convicting anybody of an offence either under Section 380, or Section 411, it is essential that the goods should be proved to have been stolen or misappropriated. Under Section 114 of the Evidence Act, the court may presume that a man who is in possession of stolen goods soon after the theft is either the thief or has received the goods knowing them to be stolen, unless he can account for his possession. Since both the presumptions are possible as per illustration (a) of Section 114 of the Evidence Act, it is safe to raise the second presumption in the absence of any other evidence against the accused. There is no evidence on record that the petitioner was seen near the house of the complainant on the day the theft was committed. It is also to be noticed that the recovery was made some three months after the alleged theft. The conviction of the petitioner, therefore, under Section 454 and 380. I.P.C is not sustainable. He can be convicted only under Section 411. I.P.C. Karam Singh v. State of Rajasthan, 1999 Cri LJ 1791 (Raj).

2. Sentence.—The property is involved in a sentence for an offence under Sections 380 and 457, Penal Code, is rice worth Rs. 10/-. Three month's rigorous imprisonment was held to be sufficient. (1954) 2 Mad LJ 226.

In State of Sikkim v. Tek Bahadur Tamang, 2001 Cri LJ 4617 (Sikkim) the Chief Judicial Magistrate awarded a sentence of imprisonment till rising of the Court. The Hon'ble High Court on the point of sentence observed as under—"The offence under Section 380, IPC is punishable with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years and to fine. No cognet reason has been given by the learned Magistrate to justify undue leniency in the award of the sentence. The reason given is that both the accused were first offenders and villagers having no regular source of income. This was hardly a reason to justify leniency. Another reason given in respect of Tek Bahadur Tamang is that he is young boy of 22 years. But the most relevant factor. that the theft was allegedly committed of an unlicensed gun was not mentioned. Reasons given for the leniency in the award of sentence were virtually no reasons. The impugned order of the learned Chief Judicial Magistrate shows undue leniency in the award of sentence besides being contrary to the statutory provisions."

4. Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows :—

That on or about the.........day of...........at.......you committed theft of...... (mention the property stolen) in a building (or tent or vessel) used as a human dwelling (or for the custody of property) and thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 380, of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

5. Conviction.—The stolen goods were found in possession of applicant soon after theft. It is presumed that he is either thief or guilty of keeping stolen property. Case is proved and hence conviction upheld. Hom Singh v. State of U.P., (1995) 3 CCR 335 (Alld).

6. Acquittal.—There appear to be several patent and latent infirmities in instant case which are insufficient for establishing link in between accused and commission of offences charged against him. On the fact of these infirmities, while looking to all the facts emerging from record it is not proper to interfere with finding of acquittal arrived at by trial Court. State of H.P. v. Raj Kumar, (1994) 1 SLJ 193 : 1994 Cr LJ 894 : (1994) 3 CC Cases 76 (HP).

Where the appeal was heard and decided in absence of parties was liable to be set aside. Present revision being taken up after about 21 years of incidence. Feeling that remand would result in further delay revision being decided on merits and two versions about place of arrest of accused and time of filing FIR and there infirmities create doubt. Accused given benefit of doubt and acquitted. Nanuman Kehar v. State of Bihar, (1995) 2 BLJR 749 (Pat).

Where the conviction was based solely, on recoveries made. But the recoveries were factually made from open spot accessible to all. The identification parade of articles were not in accordance with law. Hence, acquitted. Sona Ram v. State of Rajasthan, (1995) 2 WLC 333 (Raj).

7. Cases.—Applicant charge-sheeted by Magistrate but discharged in revision against order of Additional Sessions Judge. It was held that the applicant is a bill clerk in District Court. Being a bill clerk his trial is necessary to find out guilt. At the stage of framing charge, evidence cannot be weighed and tested. Hence, revisional court was not justified to conclude that no case is made out against applicant. State of U.P. v. Akhilesh Kumar Srivastava, (1995) 3 CCR 783 (Alld).

The appellant was in dire need of money as established. The Accused/appellant knew that his visa had come on and that a large amount of money was required. He had also tried to arrange for loan.

According to accused in the house of the deceased, a large amount of cash and jewellery was available which could have been taken away by the accused/appellant and that he, as a conscientious man, had taken so that he could repay before his departure. The contention is devoid of any merit and has been found to be incorrect by the Courts below. It would be pertinent to mention here that the trial Court has adverted to the fact that the jewellery and cash were lying in hidden condition and thus knowledge of its existence cannot be attributed to the accused/appellant.

At the stage of recording of statement under Sec. 313 of the Code, the accused had come with another explanation that the deceased Augustine had paid him amount. No evidence at all has been adduced to show that he was present in the shop of Augustine and had been given the said amount. Furthermore, even wife of the accused/appellant has not stated that she was told at any stage by her husband that he had received amount from the deceased Augustine. The trial Court and the High Court both have disbelieved it.

The analysis of the evidence shows that the accused/appellant was in dire and urgent need of more and he had a motive for getting the said amount of money. M.A. Antony vs. State of Kerala, AIR 2009 SC 2549 : 2009 (6) SCC 220 : 2009 (7) JT 372 : 2009 (6) SCR 829 : 2009 (6) Scale 36 : 2009 (8) SLT 255.

Where charge was of theft, lurking house trespass, dishonestly receiving stolen property. The only charge which could be established against, the petitioners was under Section 411, IPC. The conviction recorded under Sections 457 and 380, IPC are therefore not justified on record. There is no evidence or any link to establish it. Bedaria v. State of Madhya Pradesh, (1995) 3 CCR 365 (MP).

8. Evidence.—Even with regard to offence under Section 380, if the evidence of public prosecution is excluded, which has to be done it would be difficult to sustain the conviction. Kailash Potlia v. State of A.P., AIR 1996 SC 66 : 1995(3) SCJ 594 : 1995(4) Scale 724 : 1995(3) Crimes 514.

Plea of Alibi—When not reliable. The theatrical explanation given by the accused/appellant that he was going Perumbavoor and at Thottuva, nearly 35 kms away, the auto driver tried to snatch his money and he ran and stayed at a dilapidated house for the whole night has been rightly rejected by the Courts below. And if he was at Thottuva which is admittedly 35 kms away from the place of occurrence, he could not have been seen on the early hours, at the place of occurrence. M.A. Antony vs. State of Kerala, AIR 2009 SC 2549 : 2009 (6) SCC 220 : 2009 (7) JT 372 : 2009 (6) Scale 36 : 2009 (6) SCR 829.

1. Theft or extortion.—"Extortion, like theft, belongs to that class of offences, into the definition of which the intention of causing wrongful gain enters. The dishonest intention to obtain property is common to both these offences ; but in theft, the object of the offender is to take property which is in the possession of a person out of that person's possession, and it is a part of the definition that the offender's intention should be to take "without that person's consent". The offence of extortion is distinguished from theft by this obvious circumstance that it is committed by the wrongful obtaining of a consent and not without consent. It is distinguishable from robbery by his feature that the property is obtained by means of such fear of injury as does not amount to the fear of instant death of personal hurt which is part of the robbery".—Morgan and Macpherson, 243. Where a person through offers, no resistance to the carrying of his property, but does not deliver any property either to the prisoners or to any one else, the offence committed is robbery and not extortion. 5 WR Cr 9.

2. Extortion, what constitutes.—"According to this definition the offence consists in intentionally intimidating a person by threats or otherwise, and thereby causing a dishonest transfer or delivery of property from such person to any other person".—Morgan and Macpherson, 344. In order to constitute the offence of extortion it is not necessary that the threat should be used, and the property received by the one and the same person. It may be matter of arrangement that the threat should be used by some and property received by others : and they would be all guilty of extortion. 2 BHCR 395. Delivery by the person put in fear is essential in order to constitute the offence of extortion. 5 WR Cr 19. In order to come within this section, threat must be tortuous, and giving rise to civil action. 5 MHC App 14 ; 1 Weir 438 ; 1 Weir 440. In cases of extortion dishonesty must be present. 1 Weir 440 ; 1 Weir 441. To attract the operation of Sections 383 and 384, there must be a delivery of the property by the victim and the will to do so must be endangered by the fear which should have proceeded from the extortioner antecedent to the delivery. 1950 ALJ 711.

Section 382 requires the person to be put in fear of injury ; the injury, however not necessarily be physical. 1952 Cr LJ 1391 : AIR 1952 Pat 379.

If a person's cattle are illegally seized and the person who seizes the same refuses to release them and threatens to impound them unless he was paid some money such action on his part would amount to threat or injury to the property to the person whose cattle are thus illegally seized and would amount to extortion. (1956) 22 Cut LT 417.

3. Put any person in fear of any injury.—The wide interpretation of the word "injury" must be borne in mind (see Section 44). Whether a person has in fact been put in fear of injury is a matter which a court must decide. The age, sex and situation of the person threatened may properly be taken into consideration. "It seems necessary to constitute the offence that the persons threatened should be actually put in fear ; upon the whole of the facts, however, if there is reason enough to say that similar circumstances would ordinarily excite fear in persons of the same age, etc., as the person threatened, the Court will not too easily listen to the suggestion or evidence adduced to show that the passion of fear was not in truth aroused. Nor, on the other hand, considering that the proof that he was put in fear will often mainly be the evidence of the person threatened, and that exaggerated if not false versions of the occurrence are not improbable, should the charge of extortion be considered as established without a cautions investigation".—Morgan and Macpherson, 345. The tenor of a criminal charge is fear of injury within the meaning of this section. Extortion, may be equally committed whether the charge is false or true. 7 WR Cr 28. The making use of oral or supposed influence by member of a certain establishment to induce other members of that establishment to give him money against their will, threatening in case of refusal the loss of their situation, is extortion. 18 WR Cr 17. Where there was no proof that any such fear of injury was caused as contemplated in this section, or that payment of money was induced thereby and it was shown that the accused might have demanded payment under bona fide claim of right, held, that a conviction for extortion was not sustainable. 3 BHC Cr 45. The system of arrangement by which the villagers procure exception from certain public duties by the contribution of a settled quota in money is purely voluntary, and perfectly legitimate bargain among the villagers. and no offence is committed by the accused accepting the quota of money in consideration of their discharging those duties on behalf of the villagers. UBR (1897-1901) Vol I, 340. A threat that God will punish a man for some act is not such an injury as the section refers to. AIR 1944 Sind 203 : 46 Cr LJ 149. The word "injury" according to Section 44, denotes any harm. Whatever, illegally caused to any person in body, mind, reputation or property and the harm threatened or caused to be threatened must be from something illegally done. AIR 1944 Sind 205 : 46 Cr LJ 145 : AIR 1944 Kar 146. Where the accused assaulted the victim and forcibly took his thumb impression, no offence under this section has been committed. AIR 1941 Pat 129 : 42 Cr LJ 361. But an offence under this section has been committed where a minor boy was forcibly made to execute a promissory note. AIR 1933 Pat 601 : 35 Cr LJ 123. Charge of extortion and fabricating false evidence are not private disputes as neither of these offences is compoundable. AIR 1936 Sind 146 : 37 Cr LJ 1086. The chief element in the offence of extortion is intentionally putting a person in fear of an injury to that person or to any other and thereby dishonestly inducing the person so put in fear to deliver to any person any property or valuable security, etc. The inducement must be dishonest. AIR 1948 Mad 513 : 50 Cr LJ 33. The threat by public servants under colour of their officer that they would report if the complainant feed more than 25 guests at his niece's wedding and obtained money from him from refraining from doing so, was no injury within the meaning of Section 44, read with Section 43, of the Penal Code and therefore, even if they obtained money thereby, they could not be held guilty of the offence under Section 384. AIR 1951 Ajmer 64 : 52 Cr LJ 873.

The charges framed against the appellant in effect said the appellant committed criminal intimidation by threatening X and his daughter with injury to their reputation by publication of indecent photographs of the daughter, with intent to cause alarm to them. The evidence disclosed that the real intention of the appellant was not so much as to cause alarm only as to force X to pay 'hush money'. The appellant was convicted under Section 506, Penal Code by the trial Magistrate (later affirmed by the High Court). Held by the Supreme Court that it was not un-often that a particular act in some of its aspects come within the definition of a particular offence in the Penal Code, while in other aspects or taken as a whole, it comes within another definition. There were obvious differences between the offence of extortion as defined in Section 383, and the offence of criminal intimidation as defined in Section 503. On the finding of the Magistrate, which finding was affirmed by the High Court, the appellant was clearly guilty of the offence of criminal intimidation. Though the charge as framed against the accused was held to be not as clear as it might have been but in the absence of any prejudice caused to the appellant by reason of the defect, the conviction could not be attacked as illegal. AIR 1960 SC 154 : 1960 SCJ 195 : 1960 All Cr R 104 : (1960) 1 SCR 924 : 1960 Cr LJ 177. The chief element in the offence of extortion is intentionally putting a person in fear of injury and thereby dishonestly inducing the person to deliver to any person any property or valuable security. AIR 1979 Bom 1747 : 1979 Malay LJ 115 ; ILR (1969) 19 Raj 841 (offence of extortion). The injury that a person is not necessarily physical injury. (1982) 1 Malayan LJ 32. The mere forceable taking of property from another does not come under the definition. It must proved that the person was induced to part with the property by putting him in fear of injury. AIR 1979 SC 1943 : 1979 Cr LJ 1305.

In a case, the accused, as alleged by the complainant stopped her and forced her to put her thumb impression on one blank paper and two promissory notes. After some time, one of the accused persons returned one blank promissory note and one blank paper to her. It was held that the only inference that could be drawn was that the force allegedly put on her did not in any manner amount to fear of injury and thus the offence of extortion was not made out. Lanka Hanumantha Rao v. State of AP, 2005 Cr LJ 4327 (AP) : 2005(1) ALD (CRL) 986 : 2005(3) Andh LT (Cri) Ap140.

4. Abetment of extortion.—A civic guard who was present at the time of extortion by a constable is guilty of abetment. AIR 1948 Cal 47 : 48 Cr LJ 587.

5. To any other—The injury which excites fear may be threatened to person put in fear to any other person. Elsewhere the expression usually is in similar cases "any person in whom he is interested". The Illustration (d) puts a threat to Z concerning *Z*s child. But from the generality of the expression it seems that no tie of relationship is requisite. If in fact the fear of injury is excited, it matters not that another person, be he who may, is the supposed object of such injury. And it is not apparently essential that there should be a well-founded ground for apprehending that injury will be sustained by any person. For if a person is put in fear and if this is done not by accident or without design but intentionally, that part of the definition is fulfilled".—Morgan and Macpherson, 345.

6. Thereby induces the person so put in fear to deliver.—"The essential ingredient in extortion is, that the offender dishonestly induces the person out in fear to deliver property. The Court must see sufficient reason to believe that in consequence of the putting in fear and in accordance with the intention of the offender, a dishonest transfer of property has been brought about that the delivery has caused by the threats, of a person who had the intention of causing wrongful loss to the person put in fear, or wrongful gain to himself or to some other person. The delivery of the property may be direct from the person threatened to the offender or to another person by his direction, or it may be by placing the property in the some place of deposit, or by otherwise putting it at the immediate disposal of the offender. The subjects of extortion are, it seems the same as the subject of theft, although the word 'movable' is not used in the definition".—Morgan and Macpherson, 345. It has to be shown that the person has induced to part over the property by putting him in fear of injury. 1967 Bihar LJR 539 ; AIR 1979 SC 1943 : 1979 Cr LJ 1305.

7. Valuable security.—"These words have been explained in Section 30. It is clear that any document which is denoted by these words may be the subject of the offence of extortion, even if it should be deemed not to be movable property, and therefore not to be included in the definition of theft,"—Morgan and Macpherson, 346. The word "property" is to be understood in a wide sense such as letters written by abducted person while in confinement would constitute property. 1982 Cr LJ 665. Notwithstanding that the relinquishment is not registered, it is valuable security. 5 DLR (All loudhia) 49.

8. Picketing.—Realising fines by picketing is an extortion under this section. 25 Cr LJ 60 ; 20 ALJ 877 ; 45 All 137.

If all that a man does is to promise to do a thing which he is under no legal obligation to do and to say that if money is not paid to him he will not do the same, this does not constitute an offence under this section. 46 All 81 : 81 Ind Cas 609 : 25 Cr LJ 961 : 21 ALJ 850 ; see also 75 Ind Cas 542 : 24 Cr LJ 958 : 4 Lah 179.

A nikah khawn is not bound to a nikah for a person unless he chooses to do so and it is certainly no offence for him to demand any fee he takes for doing so. 4 Lah 179. Promissory note executed by minor by force is valuable security. AIR 1933 Pat 601 : 1930 Cr C 1363.

Before a person can be said to put any person in fear of any injury of that person, it must appear that he has held out some threat to do or omit to do what he is legally bound to do in future. 21 ALJ 850. See also AIR 1973 SC 2200 : 1973 Cr LJ 1187 (for sentence).

1. Criticism.—"Notwithstanding the circumstances that there is nothing approaching to bodily injury (putting in fear of injury) in extortion, the punishment which may be awarded is not greater than for theft. The theft of a thing, that is, the taking of it dishonestly without consent, will not usually be an offence of such baseness as the extortion of it, that is, the causing its delivery by a person who consents to deliver it because he is put in fear and dares not withhold his consent. Extortion would appear, except from the wide range given to this offence by the expression "fear of injury to be more grave offence and to deserve in its graver form a heavier punishment".—Morgan and Macpherson, 346.

2. Fear of injury.—The definition of extortion requires that the person should in fact be put in fear of injury and that the object (delivery of property, etc.) should be accompanied. It must therefore be proved that the person was put in fear of injury, whether an injury of body, mind, reputation or property, to himself or another : that the act by which this fear was excited was intentionally done by the accused person: that the property was delivered to the accused, or according to his direction to any other person or put in any place by his orders, and that this done 'dishonestly' as to which a strong inference will arise on proof of former matter that a dishonest intention existed".—Morgan and Macpherson, 347. See also 15 ALJ 127 ; 32 Ind Cas 971 : 28 ALJ 877. Threat to omit to do some act which accused is not legally bound to do is no offence. But threat held out by accused that he would not release cattle belonging to complainant unless he was paid some money for their release does amount to extortion. AIR 1924 All 197 : 46 All 81 : 21 ALJ 154 : 25 Cr LJ 961: 81 Ind Cas 609. Where offences under Sections 161 and 384, Penal Code, are committed under colour or in excess of a duty imposed or authority conferred by the act" they are not entitled to protection under Section 80 (3). AIR 1932 Sind 28 : 33 Cr LJ 298 : 25 SLR 395. Conviction under Section 384, cannot be maintained when accused had no dishonest intention in removing property. 26 PLR 97 : 26 Cr LJ 794 : 7 Lah LJ 12 : 86 Ind Cas 424. Just as it is not an offence of deceive a person simpliciter, so it is not an offence to put a person in fear of an injury, unless it is done with a criminal intention. AIR 1942 Lah 253 : 43 Cr LJ 849. In case of offences coming within Section 161, accused can be punished under that section, though the principal offence may have been under Section 384. AIR 1944 Cal 374 : 46 Cr LJ 94. Deterrent sentence should be awarded where an offence under this section has been committed by a member of a Police force. AIR 1942 Oudh 163 : 43 Cr LJ 139. Where common object is not proved, all the accused cannot be convicted under this section. 1931 MWN 129.

In case of cattle illegally seized, the accused seizing the cattle refused to release them unless money was paid, such action would amount to an offence under Section 384, though for the same act a prosecution under Section 22 of the Cattle Trespass Act lies. (1956) 22 Cut LT 417.

3. Extortion and cheating.—Although there is a common feature between the offence of extortion and cheating yet they cannot be regarded as to aspects as one offence. AIR 1928 Bom 346 : 30 Bom LR 967 : 29 Cr LJ 1082 ; see also AIR 1936 Sind 29 : 57 Cr LJ 757.

4. Robbery or extortion.—"If it is doubtful whether particular act of extortion amounts to robbery or not the offender may nevertheless be convicted upon a charge of extortion. For this and other sections under the present head are not to be read, as if the word 'unless the offence shall amount to robbery', or any like words were added. The definition of the overt offence, extortion includes all cases which are within the definition of the cognate higher offence, extortion amounting to robbery. The offence does not cease to be extortion or to be punishable as such under this division, because it is shown that the extortion is of the kind which may amount to robbery. If the case is doubtful, the proper course is to convict the offender of the crimes which, without doubt, he has committed, namely, extortion and to punish him for it. In such a case there is no necessity for resorting to the provision in Section 72".—Morgan, and Macpherson, 347.

5. Conviction.—In the instant case the accused was related to the married sister of boy's father. He had allegedly kidnapped for extortion of money. The co-accused was arrested while accepting the money and on his information the accused was arrested. The accused pointed out to the place from where dead body was recovered. The evidence of shop-keeper from whom the jute bag containing dead body of deceased writing chits were purchased, telephone booth owner and punch was found reliable. Conviction of accused was held proper. Rashikbhai.Popathbai Patel v. State, 2003 Cr LJ 3278 (Guj) : 2003 (3) GCD Guj 2149: 2003(3) Guj LH 33.

The accused, who was related to the married sister of murdered boy's father, had kidnapped for extortion of money and murder. Circumstantial evidence alone was available as co-accused was arrested while accepting the money and on his information the accused was arrested who pointed to the place from where dead body was recovered. The evidence of shopkeeper from whom jute bag containing dead body of deceased and writing chits were purchased, telephone booth owner and punch was found reliable. This all showed that there was no false implication and conviction of both accused was held proper. Rashikbhai Popatbhai Patel v. State, 2003 Cr LJ 3278 (Guj) : 2003(3) GCD Guj 2149 : 2003(3) Guj L 33.

4. Sentence.—No reduction where the accused took part in abducting and torturing a victim with a view to extortion ransom. AIR 1979 SC 1493 : 1979 Cr LJ (NOC) 169.

Death sentence—Rarest of rare. The accused persons were not criminals. They were friends. The deceased was said to have been selected because his father was rich. The motive, if any, was to collect some money. They were not professional killers. They have no criminal history. All were unemployed and were searching for jobs.

Further if age of the accused was a relevant factor for the High Court for not imposing death penalty on accused Nos. 2 and 3, the same standard should have been applied to the case of the appellant also who was only two years older and still a young man in age. Accused Nos. 2 and 3 were as much a part of the crime as the appellant. Though it is true, that it was he who allegedly proposed the idea of kidnapping, but at the same time it must not be forgotten that the said plan was only executed when all the persons involved gave their consent thereto.

It must be noted that the discretion given to the Court in such cases assumes onerous importance and its exercise becomes extremely difficult because of the irrevocable character of death penalty. One of the principles which we think is clear is that the case is such where two views ordinarily could be taken, imposition of death sentence would not be appropriate, but where there is no other option and it is shown that reformation is not possible, death sentence may be imposed.

Sec. 354(3) of the Code of Criminal Procedure requires that when the conviction is for an offence punishable with death or in the alternative with imprisonment for life or imprisonment for a term of years, the judgment shall state the reasons for the sentence awarded, and in the case of sentence of death, the special reasons thereof.

We do not think that the reasons assigned by the Courts below disclose any special reason to uphold the death penalty. The discretion granted to the Courts must be exercised very cautiously especially because of the irrevocable character to death penalty. Requirements of law to assign special reasons should not be construed to be an empty formality.

We have previously noted that the judicial principles for imposition of death penalty are far from being uniform. Without going into the merits and demerits of such discretion and subjectivity, we must nevertheless reiterate the basic principle, stated repeatedly by this Court, that life imprisonment is the rule and death penalty an exception. Each case must, therefore, be analyzed and the appropriateness of punishment determined on a case-by-case basis with death sentence not to be awarded save in the 'rarest of rare' case where reform is not possible. Keeping in mind at least this principle we do not think that any of the factors in the present case discussed above warrants the award of the death penalty. There are no special reasons to record the death penalty and the mitigating factors in the present case, discussed previously, are, in our opinion, sufficient to place it out of the "rarest of rare" category.

For the reasons aforementioned, we are of the opinion that this is not a case where death penalty should be imposed. The appellant, therefore, instead of being awarded death penalty, is sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for life. Santosh Kumar Satishbhushan Bariyar vs. State of Maharashtra, 2009 (6) SCC 498 : 2009 (7) JT 248 : 2009 (9) SCR 90 : 2009 (7) Scale 341 : 2009 (4) Supreme 235 : 2009 (5) SLT 166.

OF ROBBERY AND DACOITY

Sec. 390. Robbery ; When theft is robbery ; When extortion i robbery.—In all robbery there is either theft or extortion.

Theft is "robbery" if, in order to the committing of the theft, or i carrying away or attempting to carry away property obtained by theft, th offender, for that end, voluntarily causes or attempts to cause to any perso death or hurt or wrongful restraint or fear of instant death or instant hurt or of instant wrongful restraint.

Extortion is "robbery" if the offender, at the time of committing th extortion, is in the presence of the person put in fear, and commits th extortion by putting that person in fear of instant death, or instant hurt, o of instant wrongful restraint to that person, or in some other person, and by so putting in fear, induces the person so put in fear then and there t deliver up the thing extorted.

Explanation.—The offender is said to be present if he is sufficiently near o put the person in fear of instant death, or instant hurt or of instant wrongful restraint.

(a) A holds Z down, and fraudulently takes *Z*s money and jewels from *Z*s clothes, without Zs consent. Here A has committed theft, and, in order to the committing of that theft, has voluntarily caused wrongful restraint to Z. A has, therefore, committed robbery.

(b) A meets Z on the high road, shows a pistol, and demands Z's purse. Z, in consequence, surrenders his purse. Here A has extorted the purse from Z by putting him in fear of instant hurt, and being at the time of committing the extortion in his presence. A has, therefore, committed robbery.

(c) A meets Z and Z's child on the high road. A takes the child, and threatens to fling it down a precipice, unless Z delivers his purse. Z, in consequence, delivers his purse. Here A has extorted the purse from Z, by causing Z to be in fear of instant hurt to the child who is present there. A has, therefore, committed robbery on Z.

(d) A obtains property from Z by saying—"Your child is in the hands of my gang, and will be put to death unless you send us ten thousand rupees". This is extortion, and punishable as such ; but it is not robbery, unless Z is put in fear of the instant death of his child.

1. Robbery.—The offence of robbery is distinct from theft or extortion, but in every robbery either the offence of theft or the offence of extortion will be committed. It must not be supposed that what is robbery cannot be, or ceases to be extortion or theft. The line of separation is drawn not between the offence of robbery and the offence of extortion, but between extortion which is robbery and extortion which is not robbery. There is, in like manner, a line of separation, not between theft and robbery but between the theft which is robbery and the theft which is not robbery".—Morgan and Macpherson, 350. The Indian Law Commissioners observe that "in practice, it will perpetually be a matter of doubt whether a particular act of robbery was a theft or an extortion. A large proportion of robberies will be half theft and half extortion. A seizes Z, threatens to murder him, unless he delivers all his property and begins to pull of *Z*s ornaments. Z in terror begs that A will take all he has, and spare his life, assists in taking off his ornaments and delivers them to A. Here such ornaments as A took without Z's consent are taken by theft. Those which Z delivered up from fear of death are acquired by extortion. It is by no means inprobable that Z's right arm bracelet may have been obtained by theft, and left arm bracelet by extortion : and the Rupees in Z's girdle may have been obtained by theft, and those in his turban by extortion. Probably in nine-tenths of the robberies which are committed something like this, actually takes place, and it is probable that a few minutes later neither the robber nor the person robbed would be able to collect in what proportions theft and extortion were mixed in the crime, nor is it at all necessary for the ends of justice that this should be ascertained. For though, in general, the consent of a sufferer is a circumstance which very materially modifies the character of the offence, and which ought therefore to be made known to the Courts, yet the consent which a person gives to the taking of the property by a ruffian who holds a pistol to his breast is a circumstance altogether immaterial".

The crucial test is contained in the section, is in the words "for that and which distinguishes a case of theft accompanied with assault covered by the provisions of Sections 379 and 323, of IPC, from that of a case of robbery. AIR 1960 Pat 453. Where it is not theft or extortion there cannot be robbery. 1978 WLN (UC) 275 ; 1964 All WR (HC) 549 : 1969 Cr LJ 231 ; see also 1979 Cr LJ 1158 ; ILR(1972) 1 Ker 489 ; (1974) 1 Cr LJ 107 ; see also 1973 Cr LJ 647 (where the assault was not made for the purpose of achieving the object of theft or carrying away the stolen property).

It is not necessary that the extortion should follow immediately upon the restraint in order to constitute robbery, provided that there is fear or restraint at the time. 99 Ind Cas 596 : 25 LW 86 Cr LJ 164 : AIR 1927 Mad 307. The essence of a charge of dacoity or robbery is the animus fernandi 1929 MWN 185. "Restraint" implies abridgment of the liberty of a person against his will. Where he is deprived of his will-power by sleep or otherwise he cannot, while in that condition be subject to any restraint. 29 PLR 90 : 109 Ind Cas 682 : 29 Cr LJ 602-AIR 1928 Lah 445.

The hurt if caused for preventing the pursuit is within the purview of the section. In 1981 Cr LJ 218 : 1981 Cr App R (SC) 215, the facts and circumstances pointed to grave improbation, and acquittal was upheld.

2. When theft is robbery.—"Theft aggravated by actual or attempted violence as by causing fear of violence, is robbery. Whether this aggravation proceeds the commission of the theft or accompanies it, or follows it, if the end in view be theft, the offender has committed the kind of theft which is robbery. But the definition requires violence (actual or attempted) or a causing of fear of present instant death or violence".—Morgan and Macpherson. 351. 1 Weir 442. And the violence or fear whether it is offered or caused to him whose property is stolen or to another must immediately be connected with the theft. "If A is carrying away stolen property from the place of theft and meets upon the road and hurts a police officer or private person who suspects and desires to detain him, this does not make his offence of theft a robbery but he commits a distinct offence".—Morgan and Macpherson, 351. Dishonest intention is the main ingredient in a robbery. 5 MHC App 39 ; see also AIR 1933 All 620 : 1933 Cr C 992 : 1933 ALJ 917. Grievous hurt when inflicted during theft makes it robbery. 6 WR Cr 86. Theft becomes robbery, when in the course of committing it, there is an intention and an attempt to cause hurt. 5 WR Cr 45. In order that theft may amount to robbery hurt must be caused for committing theft and must be quite separate and distinct from act of theft. AIR 1933 Lah 407. In case of murder during retreat after dacoity, all the members of a gang are liable for punishment. 12 Cr LJ 687 : 2 Lah 275 : 63 Ind Cas 623. Theft is robbery under various conditions which do not involve the causing of hurt. The theft may be robbery, because in committing the theft the offender attempts to cause hurt, or causes wrongful restraint, or fear of death, hurt or wrongful restraint. 1 LBR 232. To constitute the offence of robbery it is necessary that death, or hurt or wrongful restraint or fear of such instant evils should be caused by the offenders not only in order to committing of the theft or in carrying away property obtained by the theft, but also for that end. "For that end" does not mean "in those circumstances". 38 Ind Cas 730 ; see also 12 PR 1896 Cr ; 1 Weir 446, see also (1961) 2 Guj LR 678 : 1962 (2) Cr LJ 415, where the three ingredients were catalogued. Firstly the offender must have voluntarily caused or attempted to cause to any person death or wrongful restraint or fear of instant death or instant hurt or of instant wrongful restraint. Secondly, that it must be in order to the committing of theft or in committing theft or in carrying away or attempting to carry away property obtained by theft and thirdly that the offender must voluntarily cause or attempt to cause any person etc. for that end ; see also AIR 1959 Orissa 171 : 24 Cut LT 70 : ILR 1958 Cut 169 : 1959 Cr LJ 1203 ; 1958 BLJR 238 ; 1956 BLJ 478 ; 1956 Pat LR 108 ; AIR 1955 All 128 : 1954 All WR (HC) 510 : 1954 All LJ 670 : 1955 Cr LJ 336 ; 1955 All LJ 455 : ILR (1956) 2 All 714 : 1955 All WR (HC) 414 ; 1953 BLR 465. To words "for that end" used in this section clearly mean that the hurt caused by the offender must be with the express object of facilitating the committing of the theft or must be caused while the offender is committing the theft or is carrying away or is attempting to carry away the property obtained by the theft. It does not mean that the assault or the hurt must be caused in the same transaction or in the same circumstances. AIR 1941 Oudh 476 : 42 Cr LJ 530. See also (1962) 2 Cr LJ 415 (which in amounts to robbery) ; 1969 Bihar LJR 539 (assault must be to facilitate the commissioner of theft).

3. When extortion is robbery.—Extortion aggravated by causing fear of instant death etc, is robbery. The definition requires, and the expression "instant death", etc, implies the presence of the person who is put in fear. 'The explanation and the Illustrations (c) and (d) mark the distinction thus made between the extortion which is robbery and the extortion which is not robbery".—Morgan and Macpherson, 352. It is necessary to convict accused of robbery, that hurt or wrongful restraint should have been caused for effecting theft. 1930 MWN 1142.

4. Acquittal.—The majority of witnesses gave self-contradictory statements and did not support prosecution-version. Hence, not reliable. Time and place of occurrence not fixed and found doubtful. The medical evidence did not support the same. Hence, offence was not proved beyond doubt. Conviction is set aside. Bhagwati Prasad v. State, 1994 Cr LJ 2310 (All).

5. Confession made to Police Officer.—The confession made to a Police Officer relating to the commission of crime is not admissible in evidence under Ss. 25, 26 and 27 of the Evidence Act, but at the same time, the ban against admissibility would stand lifted if the statement distinctly related to a discovery of fact. A fact can be discovered by the Police (Investigating Officer) pursuant to an information elicited from the accused if such disclosure was followed by one or more of a variety of causes. Recovery of an object is only one such cause. Further the pointing out of places to the Police Officer where the offence was committed is relevant and would be admissible as conduct under Sec. 8 of the Evidence Act.

In the instant case of car robbery not only the recovery of currency were effected on basis of confession of accused persons but all of them had also led the police party to the place of occurrence in the area of same Police Station and on their pointing out, Fard Nishandehi (marking of the place) was prepared. In that behalf, site plan of the place of recovery has been proved. Further, they are also proved to have led the police party at the place where they had abandoned Maruti Car after commission of the crime and then, they pointed out the said place where upon Fard Nishandehi was prepared by the Investigating Officer and the said car had also been taken into possession by the Police after preparing the site plan of the place where the said car was abandoned. All the aforesaid recoveries are proved to have been effected in pursuance of the respective disclosure statements made by the accused persons. Thus, the part of the aforesaid statement relating to their conduct and recoveries got effected by them i.e. the accused persons are admissible in evidence under Ss. 8 and 27 of the Evidence Act. Further, it appears that in this case, the prosecution witness who was the driver of the said Maruti Car at the time of commission of the crime intentionally failed to identify the accused in the trial Court because of fear. However, he has proved all other contents of his statement made by him before the police on the date of occurrence itself. In that, he categorically stated while appearing that on the date of occurrence, 3-4 persons had stopped their vehicle in front of his Armada Jeep. He further stated that one of the complainants since deceased, had withdrawn money from the Bank. Moreover, the accused immediately after their arrest in this case were also produced in muffled faces before Sub Divisional Judicial Magistrate, for seeking their consent for test identification parade, but they had refused to do so vide their joint statement and as such, an adverse inference has to be drawn against them. Besides that the medical evidence consisted the statement of Medical Officer who proved the post mortem report also strengthens the genesis of the occurrence of this case. In the aforesaid circumstances, conviction of accused for robbery and murder was proper. Anupam and etc. v. State of Haryana, 2006 CriLJ 852 (P&H).

Sec. 391. Dacoity.—When five or more persons conjointly commit or attempt to commit a robbery, or where the whole number of persons conjointly committing or attempting to commit a robbery and persons present and aiding such commission or attempt, amount to five or more, every person to committing, attempting or aiding, is said to commit "dacoity".

1. Scope of.—"This word 'dacoity' (gang robbery) is used in the Bengal and Madras Regulation, and is retained in the Code for the purpose of denoting not only actual gang robbery, but the attempting to rob when such an attempting is made or aided by a gang".—Morgan and Macpherson. 352. In a case of dacoity, the Judge should direct the jury to convict only if they find that all the prisoners had the intention of causing wrongful loss to the prosecutor or wrongful gain to themselves. WR 1864 Cr. The offence of robbery cannot be convicted into dacoity, where there is simple allegation but not adequate proof on the part of the prosecution that five or more persons have taken part in committing or attempting to commit the crime. 26 PWR 1915 Cr : 15 Cr LJ 634 : 30 Ind Cas 458. Where there were six robbers of whom three were acquitted, and the rest were convicted of dacoity under Section 391, IPC, and where the Sessions Judge nowhere, in his charge to the jury directed their attention to the evidence as to the number of the robbers so as to show that there were five or move offender and that the offence amounted to dacoity. Held, that the conviction under Section 391, was not sustainable and the same case altered into one for robbery under Section 392. 7 MLT 340 : 5 Ind Cas 797 : 11 Cr LJ 249 : 1910 MWN 52.

The definition of dacoity in this section is so wide as to extend to what would have been treated as cases of plunder under the old law. 3 WR Cr 60. In view of the definition of dacoity, it cannot be said that because the dacoits were unsuccessful in removing any article no dacoity was committed. 1951 AWR (HC) 589 : 52 Cr LJ 1514 : AIR 1951 All 835 : 1951 ALJ 567. However, erroneous a claim of right may be, if in fact the conduct of the accused was solely induced by a bona fide belief in such claim, a charge of robbery cannot be maintained. 1 Weir 443 : 3 MHC 264. Three known persons were charged with dacoity along with two other unknown men. The jury acquitted one of the three and convicted the other two of the offence of dacoity. Held, that it was quite open to the jury, while holding that one of the accused who was supposed to have been known to the witnesses had not been properly identified, to find that the total number of dacoits was five. 1927 MWN 853 : 53 MLJ 732. Where three out of six men were acquitted, a conviction under this section is not maintainable. 39 All 848 : 28 Cr LJ 547 ; 11 Cr LJ 249. In a dacoity, theft must have been perpetrated by actual violence or threatened violence. 10 Bom LR 632 ; see also 38 Ind Cas 730 ; 18 Cr LJ 346 ; 6 CWN 72 ; 5 CWN 762. Where a conviction of dacoity is based on the application of Section 34, or Section 149, IPC and there was no charge that the assembly as a whole had for its common object the committing of dacoity, the conviction is bad. 1924 MWN 238 : 77 Ind Cas 444 : 25 Cr LJ 396 : 46 MLJ 311. Accused need not know or have personal grievance against their victims, before committing offence. AIR 1929 Mad 135. Evidence of identification must be looked with caution. AIR 1932 Oudh 317 : 33 Cr LJ 920 : 7 Luck 511.

The assault was held to be not for facilitating the commission of theft. 1970 Cr LJ 647. The section contemplates actual participation by every one of the five or more persons in the commission of robbery, whether as aider or as major actors. AIR 1973 SC 760 : 1973 Cr LJ 599 ; see also 1982 Cr LJ 665 : 1982 MPLJ 7 ; AIR 1979 SC 850 ; 1979 All J 633 (disputes of civil nature beyond the purview of the section).

From the perusal of FIR it appears that the opposite parties, namely, Asgar Mian, Jagdish Yadav, Bhuju Yadav and Harihar Yadav, were not named in the FIR subsequently, they were named by one co-accused Bauja Yadav. Bhuju Yadav was put on Test identification parade and he was identified by the informant in T.I. parade conducted by P.W. 8 on 25.4.82. However, P.W.8 did not mention in TIP chart that opposite party No. 4 was having small pox mark on his face. It appears from the record that other opposite parties except Bhoju Yadav were not put on T.I. Parade. As such only one opposite party, Bhoju Yadav was identified by the informant and that too who was known to him from before and, if actually had be participated crime, his name should have been given initially by the information in his FIR. Tapeshwar Yadav and Others v. State of Bihar and Other, 2002 Cri LJ 698 (Pat.) : 2001(2) East Cri C 22.

The accused absconded and was not traceable as he belonged to inter state gang and had no permanent residence. Apart from this no evidence against accused was sufficient for conviction even if traced. Moreover it is not permissible to try the accused in absentia. In the circumstances acquittal of accused is proper. State of Karnataka v. Vaddi Yerra, 2004 Cr LJ 329 (Kant) : 2004 AIR Kant HCR 23 : 2004(1) All Cri LR 892 : 2003(12) All Ind Cas 942 : ILR (KANT) : 2003(12) All Ind Cas 942 : ILR (KANT) 2003 (4) KAR 3958.

Where none of witnesses identified appellants accused in Test Identification Parade and ingredients of "dacoity" not satisfied then conviction of accused not sustainable. Musku Pentu v. State of AP, 2005 Cr LJ 1355 (AP) : 2005(1) Andh LT (Cri) AP 504 : 2005(2) Rec Cri R 770.

The material showed that accused was in dire need of money for his business which prompted him to rob deceased who was last seen in company of the accused. The articles seized from the accused were proved to be belonging to the deceased and weapons of offence were recovered from bamboo bush near the house of accused on the basis of disclosure statement made by him. It was held that conviction of accused under Section 302/392 was proper. Considering it rarest of rare cases death sentence was also confirmed. State v. Dayanidhi Bisoi, 2003 Cr LJ 123 (Orissa) : 2002(94) Cut LT 642 : 2002(23) OCR 564 : 2002(2) Orissa LR 495.

2. Conjointly.—The word "conjointly" in Section 391, is the most important word bearing on the liability of the persons accused of an offence of dacoity. While it may be true to say that the intention is no part of the offence of dacoity, the word "conjointly" used in the section manifestly refers to united or concerted action of the persons participating in the transaction. If individual acts of persons cannot be reasonably be referred to a united or concerted action of such person, there cannot be any question of any conviction for an offence of dacoity of the group of persons concerned. It is only where their individual actions can 'be properly referred to their concerted action that the question of a conviction under Section 395, IPC, can arise. 52 Cr LJ 1380 : AIR 1951 Assam 143.

Where five persons were charged under Section 395, and it was not the prosecution case that there were any more persons who took part in the dacoity and one of the accused was acquitted, the remaining four cannot be convicted under Sec. 395. AIR 1958 AP 510 : 1958 CrLJ 1001. All persons must have common intention. AIR 1956 VP 18 : 1956 CrLJ 1021. Only for acts committed by the members of the unlawful assembly in pursuance of the common object could all of them be found guilty. But if the act is dissociated from the common object, it cannot be brought home to the other members. (1954) 2 MLJ (Andh) 248; 1978 KerLJ 714 : 1977 CrLJ (NOC) 227.

The element of jointness is essential to the offence of the dacoity. AIR 1965 Cal 598; see also 1977 XLIV Cut LT 311 (for meaning of the word conjointly"). See also AIR 1956 VP 18 : 1974 Ker LJ 328.

1. Scope.—Whether Sections 392 and 397, does not create different offences. Section 392, deals with the punishment of robbery and Section 397, is applied where robber either uses deadly weapons or causes or attempts to cause grievous hurt. Jagan Ramsingh Nepali v. State of Maharashtra, (1994) 2 Bom CR 156 (DB).

The evidence of witnesses clearly establish use of choppers by appellants during commission of robbery and escaped in a taxi of PW-6. This section contemplates that the accused should have, from the very start, the intention to deprive the complainant of the property and should for that purpose either hurt him or place him under wrongful restraint. In 1981 UP Cr LJ 116, if the complainant has failed in the first attempt to secure a conviction, it was not open to him to have a second round in the Sessions Court on the ground that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction.

2. Evidence and proof.—See AIR 1956 SC 400 : 1956 Cr LJ 790 (unexplained possession of property after a suspected robbery and murder is only presumptive evidence) ; 1976 Cr LJ 1480 : 1983 Cr LJ (NOC) 23 (evidence strengthens other evidence, hence no question of presumption). AIR 1983 SC 367 : 1983 Cr LJ 689 : AIR 1978 Cr LJ 1107 : AIR 1978 SC 1183 (circumstantial evidence and value of identification evidence).

Where witnesses knew accused, their testimony not dependent for corroboration on test identification parade. Umesh v. State of M.P., 1997 (1) Crimes 261 (MP).

The accused were known from before. Therefore even in absence of any light, they could be identified easily and corerectly. Not only this, both the withnesses alleged that there was electric light caused by the tubelight as well as electric bulb, which were burning at the time of occurrence and they remained stand still so long as the robbers remained there. Therefore, in this light, the rebbors could be easily identified. Not only this, the robbers came in very close physical touch with the complainant and his servant. It was alleged that both the witnesses were known from before but they had not taken any steps to conceal their faces. Therefore, normally such persons would not come to rob at the house of known person. This is no longer a corrrect law. In these days robbers have become dare devils and they go on challenging each and everyone who might try to take objection to their activities. They are further encouraged by the fact that nobody is prepared to appear as witness against them due to fear. Under these circumstances, it cannot be said that known persons will not commit robbery or dacoity without trying to conceal their identity these days even during day time known people commit murder and dacoity. The witnesses had correctly identified them and the robbers had not made any effort to conceal their identity. Therefore, this factor does not make any dent in the prosecution case in any way at all, evidence is absolutely correct and justified and accepted by the Court. Kharag Singh v. State of U.P., 1999 CriLJ 82 (All).

Sufficient evidence. Rape and murder of a girl aged 2 years. The evidence of PW-5 and PW-6 reveals that appellant had been seen around the complainant's house on the previous day and as he was not a resident of this area, he had been quickly singled out. These witnesses further stated the appellant had been seen in the vicinity again after the rape and murder and he had accordingly been apprehended and handed over to the police and two chains worn by deceased had been taken from his pockets. PW-13 also identified the chains in Court. It is true that in the cross-examination of these two witnesses, several improvements vis-a-vis their statements under Sec. 161 of Criminal Procedure Code had been pointed out by the defence Counsel, but the fact that the appellant had been present in the vicinity of the house and had been arrested, soon after the incident has been admitted even by the defence.

Another significant piece of evidence is the statement of PW-7 who testified to the fact that about 2:30 a.m. on the night of the murder he had gone out of the house to urinate and had seen the appellant outside and on being questioned, the appellant had threatened him with dire consequences with the result that he had not informed anybody till the third day after the police had come to the village to verify the facts. He too stated to the fact that two chains had been recovered from the pocket of the appellant. It is true that several improvements have been made by the three primary witnesses but there is absolutely no reason as to why they would involve the appellant in a false case as admittedly he was a stranger to the locality and they bore him no ill will.

We have also gone through the evidence of PW-12 relating to the recovery of the frock pursuant to a disclosure statement made by the appellant under Sec. 27 of the Evidence Act. Nothing could be spelt out from the cross-examination of this witness except that the recovery had not been made from a closed place, though he explained that there was very little movement of human beings in that area as no one was residing close by. This witness also identified the frock that had been recovered. It is equally significant that the strands of fibre recovered from the place of incident had been matched with the material of the frock and were found to be from the same source.

It is true that in a criminal matter the onus of proof lies almost exclusively on the prosecution. As already mentioned above, however, the appellant has not been able to give any explanation in his statement under Sec. 313 of Criminal Procedure Code as to what he had been doing in that locality. On the contrary he admitted his presence by stating that he had been caught by the neighbours on suspicion of the murder and beaten up, and had suffered several injuries in the process. The medical evidence on the contrary reveals that these injuries could also have been sustained while raping and killing the young child.

The evidence that the appellant was a paedophile with extremely violent propensities also stands proved on record in that he had been convicted and sentenced for an offence punishable under Sec. 354 in the year 1998 and later for offences punishable under Secs. 363, 376, 379, 302 and 201 of the IPC for the rape and murder of a young child and had been awarded a sentence of imprisonment for life under Sec. 302, and several other terms of imprisonment with respect to the other Secs., though, an appeal in this connection was pending as on date. It is also extremely relevant that the appellant, had, in addition, been tried for the murders of several other children but had been acquitted on the 28.07.2005 with the benefit of doubt. The present incident happened three days later. We accordingly dismiss the appeals but modify the sentence of death to one for the rest of his life in terms of the judgment in Shraddananda's case. Sebastian vs. State of Kerala, 2010 (1) SCC 58 : 2009 (4) Crimes 121 (SC) : 2009 (13) JT 136 : 2009 (13) Scale 210 : 2009 (7) Supreme 8 : 2009 (8) SLT 96.

Where one of the three accused persons was already known to the witnesses on account of having white washed their house, absence of prior test identification parade would not affect the credibility and truthfulness of the witnesses and moreso the accused persons entered the house and remained for quite some holding victims at ransom. Ashfaq v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (2004) 1 Crimes 117 (SC) : (2004) 3 SCC 116 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 687 : AIR 2004 SC 1253 : 2004 Cr LJ 936.

Where the evidence of the complainant and a witness is consistent with the allegation that the accused had threatened the complainant to kill him and put, the bhujaliat his neck and took away Rs. 2000/- from him by putting him to instant fear of death, offence of Section 392, IPC has been proved. Dinbandhu Mahapatra v. State, 2004 Cr LJ 1931 at p. 1932 (Ori) : 2004(27) OCR 228.

Simply because knife used in robbery was not recovered, offence cannot be treated as one only under Section 302, IPC. Pravin Kumar Shukla v. State of Maharashtra, 1977 Cri LJ 577 (Bom).

In cases where the recovery has been immediately affected, the court can draw an inferance under Section 114 (a) of the Indian Evidence Act and convict the accused for the substantive offence of theft or robbery or dacoity or of dacoity with murder etc. as the case may be, but where the recovery was not immediate and it was effected six days after the incident the offence of robbery would not be established and only one under Section 411, IPC would be made out against him—Bala Pandurang Kesarkar v. State of Maharashtra. 2000 Cri LJ 693 (Bom). In Shiv Nath v. State of U.P., AIR 1970 SC 535 : 1978 Cri LJ 601, where three days after the incident recovery of looted properly was affected. the supreme court reversed the judgment of the Allahabad High Court upholding the conviction and sentence of the accused for the offence under Section 396, IPC and instead convicted him for one under Section 411 IPC.

Gulab Chand v. State of M.P. (1955) 3 SCC 574 : AIR 1955 SC 1598 where ornament of the deceased were recovered from the possession of the accused immediately after the occurrence, the court held in para 4 of AIR :

> "It is true that simply on the recovery of stolen articles no inference can be drawn that a person in possession of the stolen articles is guilty of the offence of murder and robbery. But culpability of the aforesaid offences will depend on the facts and circumstances of the case and the nature of evidence adduced. It has been imdicated by this court in Sanwal Khan v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1956 SC 54 : 1956 Cri LJ 150 that no hard and fast rule can be lord down as to what inference should be drawn from certain circumstances. It has also been indicated that where only evidence against is recovery of stolen properties. then although the circumstances may indicate that the theft and murder might have been committed at the same time. It is not safe to draw an inference that the person in possession of the stolen property had committed the murder. A note of caution has been given by this court by indicating that suspicious should not take the place of proof."

In Tulsiram kanu v. State, AIR 1954 SC 1 1954 Cri LJ 225 the apex court has indicated that the presumption permitted to be drawn under Section 114 Illustration. (a) Evidence Act has to be drawn under the "important time factor". If the ornaments in possession of the deceased are found in possession of a person soon after the murder, a presumption of guilt only be permitted. But if several months had expired in the interval, the presumption cannot be permitted to be drawn having regard to the circumstances of the case.

In Sanjay v. State (N.C.T.) of Delhi, 2001 Cri LJ 1231 (SC) : AIR 2001 (SC) 979 : 2001(2) JT 461 : 2001(1) Scale 695 also the dis closure statements who made by the accused persons on the next day of the commission of the offence and the property of the deceased was recovered at their instance from the places where they had kept such properties on the same day. To the same effect are the judgements an Mukund alias Kundu Mishra v. State of MP., (1997) 10 SCC 130 : AIR 1997 SC 2622 : 1997 Cri LJ 3182 and Ronny alias Ronald James Alwaris v. State of Maharashtra (1998) 3 SCC 625 : 1998 Cri LJ 1638 : AIR 1998 1251. In the latter case the court held :

> "Aprop the recovery of articles belonging to the Ohol framily from the possesion of the appellants soon after the robbery and the murder of the doceased which possession has remained the explained by the appellants the presumption under illustration (a) of section 114 of the Evidence Act will be attracted. It needs no discussion to conclude that the murder and the robbery of the articles were found to be part of the same transaction. The irresistible conclusion would, therefore be that the appellants and no one elre had committed the three murders and the robbery."

Where there was material to conclude that robbery had taken place but there was no proper and reliable identification of the accused since identification parade was held a month after the incident and the PS 1 was present in the immediate vicinity of the place where the identification parade was being made and the dummies were not identical to the accused person and the accused were not asked to change, the clothes, the order, the trial in acquitting the accused cannot be said to be perverse. State v. Arun Umaji Bansode, 2004 Cr LJ 3706 (Bom) : 2004 All MR (Cri) 2683 : 2003 (2) Bom CR (Cri) 722.

Eye witness—Circumstantial evidence. Accused murdered deceased and committed robbery her gold ornaments. Eye witness who saw violent death of deceased, kept quite about incident. Delay in recording his statement. We would take up the first circumstance. The witness Alwarsamy (PW-4), in his evidence, very clearly admitted that he was not on the talking terms with Thilagavalli, who was none else, but his own sister. At the time when he saw the accused, he (Alwarsamy) was accompanying his real elder brother, namely Ramasubbu. The prosecution did not bother to examine Ramasubbu, though his statement was also recorded. It has come in the cross-examination of this witness that he attended the funeral, though he was on cross terms with the family of the deceased and during the whole funeral, the accused was actually present.

What surprises us is that in spite of this, this witness did not say anything either to the husband of Thilagavalli or even to the Police and his statement was not recorded for good long three days. Now, if the witness had seen the accused following Thilagavalli and he also knew about the violent death of Thilagavalli, and had seen the accused at the funeral, one wonders as to why the witness kept quiet without telling it to anybody. As if this is not sufficient, the Investigating Officer was specifically asked the question as to why these witnesses were not examined by him. The Investigating Officer has admitted that he could not give any reason for not examining any of these witnesses on the same day. He also claimed that the Investigating agency had suspected the accused only after the examination of Alwarsamy and Ramasubbu. It is an admitted position that the statement of these witnesses were not recorded. It was obvious, therefore, that the delay in recording the statement of these witnesses and the stony silence maintained by Alwarsamy would make him an extremely unreliable witness. In our opinion, the Trial, as well as, the Appellate Court have not given the due weight to this weighty circumstance. The Appellate Court has almost apologetically observed that the prosecution would have done better by examining Alwarsamy without any waste of time. However, the Appellate Court chose to accept his evidence. Unfortunately, the Appellate Court has not even applied its mind to the circumstance that according to this witness, the accused was present in the funeral. That crucial circumstance seems to have been escaped the notice of the Appellate Court. Ordinarily, we would not discuss the evidence in our appellate jurisdiction, however, when it is found that the crucial circumstances have escaped the notice of the Appellate Court and/or the Trial Court, this Court would consider the evidence lest any injustice is caused. In our opinion, the evidence of Alwarsamy should not have been believed. This takes care of the first circumstance.

When we see the Inquest Panchanama it is apparent that there was one ear stud on the body of the deceased. Therefore, this gives a shattering blow, firstly to the evidence of Subbiah and secondly, to the credibility of the investigating agency. As if this is not sufficient, when the accused was arrested about 12 days after the incident he is said to have confessed that he had sold "one" ear stud in the shop of Shankar. When we see the evidence of Shankar it comes out that the witness said that the accused had come to sell an ear stud, but he had refused to buy, as it was only one piece of ear stud out of the pair that accused had offered to sell. He, therefore, says that he gave one pair of ear stud to the investigating agency, which pair ultimately has come up before the Court as Material Object.

This slip-shod evidence, therefore, is very hopelessly insufficient in establishing the fact that the so-called ornaments belonged to and were on the person of Thilagavalli. We do not know what was the public prosecutor doing at the time of the examination-in-chief and why he did not confront the witness on these ornaments. We do not know as to how the Trial Court permitted these questions in re-examination. The purpose of the re- examination is only to get the clarifications of some doubts created in the cross examination. One cannot supplement the examination-in-chief by way of a re-examination and for the first time, start introducing totally new facts, which have no concern with the cross examination. The Trial Court has obviously faulted in allowing such a re-examination. Be that as it may, even if we accept that the Trial Court was justified in allowing the re-examination, the evidentiary value of the contents of the re-examination, in our firm opinion, is nil.

As regards the fourth circumstance, we think that it was for prosecution to explain the fracture suffered by the deceased. Even otherwise that circumstance is extremely insignificant.

It has also come in evidence that the accused was a known person to his family members. One wonders as to why would the accused whom the deceased knew would venture to rob her. Motive of robbery does not seem to be present in the present case. The absence of motive in a case which depended on circumstantial evidence is more favourable to the defence.

The jacket on the person of the accused was said to have had human blood. In our opinion, this circumstance is insignificant, particularly because the blood group is not tested upon and secondly, it is actually absurd thing that the accused would keep on wearing the same blood stained clothes for 12 days. In short, we are of the clear opinion that both the Courts below have erred in convicting the accused of the offences under Secs. 302 and 392 read with Sec. 397 of IPC. Pannayar vs State of Tamil Nadu by Inspector of Police., 2009 AIR SCW 5608 : 2009 CrLJ 4454 (SC) : AIR 2010 SC 85.

4. Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoun- dable—Triable by any Magistrate of the first class, but dacoity and all offences connected therewith by Court of Session alone.

5. Charge.—I (name and office of the Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows :—

That on or about the...........day of.........at..........you committed robbery of........ (specify the property), which was the property of AB then in his possession and which you robbed him of in......street (specify the highway), at about....between the hours of sunset and sunrise, and thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 392, of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

6. Sentence.—Robbery of a gold ring and wrist watch—Occurrence being 10 years old—Accused has already spent 1-1/2 years in jail. Appeal against conviction was filed.—Sentence was reduced to period already spent in jail. Mukhtiar Singh and Mukha v. State of Haryana, (1995) 4 Crimes 324 (P&H).

Where the accused was arrested on the spot and a bag containing Rs. 21,000/- and two pistols recovered—Conviction of both the accused and sentenced to R.I. for 10 years and a fine of Rs. 3,000/- each, which was challenged in appeal. The appellants underwent agony of trial and their appeal remained pending for a long time, the sentence is reduced to R.I. for 7 years. The sentence of fine is maintained. Brahmanand v. State of Haryana, (1994) 1 Recent CR 358 (P&H).

Plea of bargaining cannot be adopted to by-pass minimum sentence presented by law. In Kripal singh v. State of Haryana, 1999 Cri LJ 5031 (SC) "the offence found against the appellant is under Section 392 of the Indian penal code for which the maximum punishment imposable is 14 years and perhaps on the facts of this case the maximum punishment is imprisonment for 10 years. But section 392, IPC has to be read with Section 397 in certain cases as the section bridles the powers of the court regarding the extent of sentence. The court cannot award a sentence less than 7 years of imprisonment when in a particular case section 397 is to be read along with section 392 of the Indian Penal Code."

Section 397, I.P.C does not create a separate offence. It has to be read with the principal offence and with the aid of S. 397. I.P.C. conviction should be not less than 7 years otherwise it has no other meaning. So the sentence passed by the trial court has to be modified as are under Section 392/397, I.P.C. Kharag Singh v. State of U.P., 1999 Cri LJ 82 (All).

7. Acquittal.—When incident occurred in dark night—Complainant deposed that he identified accused when accused focussed torch light on face of witness—Complainant identified accused petitioner in court after one year of incident and such identification cannot be relied upon in absence of any special mark of identification or physical feature of accused either in FIR or before Magistrate conducting identification parade—Further no explanation given about holding of TIP late after two and half months of occurrence and after a month of arrest. Conviction was held not be sustainable. Basant Samal v. State, (1994) 1 Crimes 98 : (1994) 1 East Cr C 360 (Ori).

Where property which was recovered not found to be stolen. There was delayed identification parade—Circumstantial evidence not corroborative—Accused entitled to the benefit of doubt. Vijay Sharma v. State of M.P., (1994) 1 CCR 339 (MP).

When there was appeal against conviction and—Delay in FIR was not properly explained—Recovery was after arrest—Co-accused acquitted—Conviction was not justified.—Offence not established beyond doubt. Virendra Singh v. State of U.P., 1994 JIC 344 (All).

8. Conviction.—The evidence of these witnesses shows that a gang of four persons using a taxi had robbed the three persons within a span of 30 to 40, minutes. The wrist watches recovered were also identified. Hence, conviction not interfered. Rajkumar Bhikam Dhobi v. State of Maharashtra. (1994) 2 Crimes 467 (Bom).

In a case of robbery with murder circumstantial evidence showed that accused person caused the death of deceased and robbed him of money possessed by him. He could not satisfactory explain as to how he came to be in possession of articles belonging to deceased. Guilt of accused persons established beyond doubt and his conviction was held proper. Kanti Lal v. State of Rajasthan, 2004 Cr LJ 2487 (SC) : AIR 2004(SC) 2536 : 2004(2) Crimes 420 : 2004(2) East Cri C 335 : 2004(4) Scale 795 : 2004 SCC SCC (Cri_ 1760 : 2004(3) Supreme 377.

The accused allegedly waylaid the complainant while he was proceeding to his house on his scooter and snatched his wrist watch. The complainant identified the wrist watch when it was produced before the Court. Evidence on recovery from accused remained unshaken despite cross-examination. Confessional statement by accused pursuant to which recovery of watch and knife was made conviction of accused was held proper. R. Shan Mugam v. State, 2003 Cr LJ 873 (Mad).

9. Identification of accused.—When there is no test identification parade the identification of the accused for the first time at trial and that too after a period of more than 3 years is of no assistance to the prosecution. (1988) 34 DLT 79 (Del).

The accused refused to join the identification parade which is a weak type of evidence. Held, in the circumstances of the case, his refusal was justified and no adverse inference can be drawn from it. 1986 Cr LJ 253 (Del) : (1985) 25 Del LT 120.

When the complainant failed to identify the accused in court, mere refusal of accused to participate in test identification parade is not sufficient to convict accused under Section 392, IPC. Narender Singh v. State of Punjab, 2000 LJ 1890 (P&H).

Failure to hold test identification parade—In FIR, appellant was not named. In view f the fact that other accused are not before us, we are of the opinion that it is difficult o uphold the judgment of conviction and sentence against the appellant herein. The lace where the assault took place was said to be at a distance of 400 to 500 meters rom the factory. Not only the place of occurrence was agricultural fields as stated by itness but the crop had also been standing thereon.

If accused No. 5 was arrested first and accused No. 3 one month thereafter, it does ot stand to any reason as to why witness would be called to identify accused No. 3 first hich according to him took place 20 days after his discharge from the hospital and 15 ays thereafter he was again summoned to identify accused No. 5.

We have noticed hereinbefore the respective dates of arrest of accused No. 5 and ccused No. 3 respectively. It is difficult to conceive that accused No. 5 would still be vailable so that the Investigating Officer could ask the witnesses to come to the Police Station. There is nothing to show that she was in custody of the police for more than 30 days. A presumption must be drawn that by that time, she was in judicial custody. It is also wholly unlikely that names of all the accused person would be disclosed during commission of the offence by one another. It furthermore appears to be somewhat unusual that although witness and accused No. 5 were caught while they were indulging in illicit sex and all of them came from behind and the first attack was on the back of his neck, still conversations would not only took place by and between witness and the accused persons; the former even in that condition would be able to follow the same.

As identification of witness is highly doubtful, in our opinion, having regard to the nature of other evidences brought on record by the State, i.e., purported recovery of a tarpaulin by itself cannot be said to be sufficient to convict the appellant for a charge of such grave offence. Ramesh vs. State of Karnataka, 2009 (3) Crimes 349 (SC) : 2009 (12) JT 284 : 2009 (10) Scale 131 : 2009 (6) Supreme 41 : 2009 (6) SLT 485 : 2009 (11) SCR 367.

When identity of accused persons and stolen articles not established, conviction for robbery improper. Jahagir v. State of Haryana, 1997 Cri LJ 48 (P&H).

Where witnesses know accused, their testimony is not dependent for corroboration on test identification parade. Umesh v. State of M.P., 1997(1) Crimes 261 (MP).

In cases resting on identification evidence, the burden is on the prosecution to prove that there was sufficient light wherein the victim and witnesses identified the miscreants. No presumption can be raised about the sufficiency of light. Bala Pandurang Kesarkar v. State of Maharashtra, 2000 Cri LJ 693 (Bom) : 2000(1) Crimes 38 : 2000 Cr Lr (Mah) 172 : 1999(3) Bom LR 334.

10. Motive.—Accused attacked deceased and injured with chopper and removed ornaments from body of deceased. The ferocious attacks on the victims, the number of injuries inflicted and the manner in which it was inflicted and the gravity of those injuries would clearly reveal the intention or motive of the accused. At any rate his acts cannot escape falling either under Clause 3 or Clause 4 of Section 300 IPC. The Court below is, therefore, perfectly justified in holding him guilty of offence punishable under Section 302 IPC. Rijo vs. State of Kerala, 2010 (2) CriLJ 1315 (Ker).

1. Scope.—"A present intention to rob combined with an act in execution of such intention which fall short of the offence intended is an attempt to rob. The attempt should be proved by some act which is a commencement of the execution of the purpose, or which in the judgment of the Court sufficiently manifests the intention of the accused. If the proof should not merely an attempt to rob, but that the offence of robbery has been committed, or if it is uncertain whether the offence is robbery or only an attempt to rob, the accused may nevertheless be convicted under this section".—Morgan and Macpherson. 354. In a charge and finding under Section 398, the substantive Section 398, should be mentioned as well as the supplementing Section 398. Charges under Sections 393, 394 and 397 cannot be joined unless they form part of the same transaction. AIR 1933 Lah 512 : 1933 CrC 771 : 34 PLR 498 : 34 CrLJ 402.

2. Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Compoun-dable—Triable by a Magistrate of the first class.

3. Charge.—"I [name and office of the Magistrate, etc.], hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows :—

That on or about the............day of............at.............you did an act, to wit...... (mention the act,), and which was an attempt to rob AB and thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 393, of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

4. Cases.—Where intention to cause death was established—Offence of murder was made out—Using of deadly weapons shows clear-cut intention of causing death. Shivaji Dattu Patil v. State of Maharashtra, (1994) 2 Bom CR 310 : 1994 Cr LJ 1189 (Bom).

Only identification in court in dock—At time of incident both accused-appellants were wearing masks and during scuffle masks fell down and thus they were recognised—Appellant No. 1 under Section 313, Cr PC admitted to be employee of mill of complainant. Held, conviction of appellant No. 1 is upheld—Appellant No. 2 not known to complainant from before the date of incident—Hence, in absence of test identification parade conviction of appellant No. 2 is set aside. Preetam v. State of M.P., Cr LR 234 (MP).

When the victim made hue and cry when she was being looted and the police constables came running who after chasing the accused peitioners caught hold of them and produced them at the police station where on search the golden ornaments of victim snatched by them as well as chilly powder were recovered, it was not necessary to hold test identification parade. The accused were so desperate that when the police constables caught hold of them they tried to run away after they were apprehended by the police constables. The victim fell down and she suffered injuries as proved by prosecution. In this way a robbery was committed by both the accused. Tara Singh v. State of Rajasthan 2000 Cri LJ 1982 (Raj).

5. Additional fine.—Coupled with the fact that he has already been in jail for three months and 17 days, the ends of justice would be amply satisfied if the sentence of the respondent under Section 392/34, IPC is enhanced from a period of 3 months and 17 days R.I. the period already undergone by him in a manner that an additional fine of Rs. 8.000/- and one year in its default is imposed on the respondent. State of Maharashtra v. Mahipal Singh, 1996 Cri LJ 2485 (Bom).

6. Sentence.—As far as offence under Section 393, IPC is concerned, the accused was in jail from the date of his arrest till the judgments was produced by the trial Court and the period works out to be about 15 months. During the pendency of this appeal, he was taken into custody which works out to be 3-1/2 months, this appellant is aged about 18 years of age. There are no criminal antecedents against him. There is nothing to show that he was a previous convict. In these circumstances, the sentence of the appellant should be confined to the period of imprisonment already undergone. Sanjay v. State of Maharashtra, 1996 Cri LJ 2172 (Bom).

7. Attempt to commit robbery.—Before the trial court it was submitted that he was poor and he had to maintain his old parents and he was the only earning member of his family. These are no grounds for imposing lesser sentence. The accused was only 19 years at the time of the offence. He came from another state for committing the crime. In our country lakhs of people are living below the poverty line, but they do not indulge in these acts. True that in this case, the appellant accused had not fired his Tamancha nor he was able to loot a paise, but that could not be a ground for imposing lesser sentence. In such type of cases where the trial Court has exercised its discretion and imposed seven years RI, then the court cannot interfere with such order of sentence only on the ground that the appellant accused was poor. Avinash Shobhasing v. State of Gujrat, 2002 Cri LJ 3476 : 2002(2) Cur Cri R 278 : 2002(1) GCD Guj 681.

Accused persons at the point of dagger attempted to loot informant. All the witnesses, who were present and chased and caught hold of the accused have identified them that he was caught red handed while he was committing road robbery and seeing the police he attempted to run away along with his co-accused, but he was arrested on the spot and as such his conviction under Sections 393 and 397 of the Indian Penal Code is well founded and requires no interference by this Court. Rabindra Chaurasia vs. State of Jharkhand, 2010 (3) CriLJ 3349 (Jhar).

1. Amendment.—The words in italics have been substituted for the word "transportation for life" by Act 26, of 1955. Section 117, and Sch. with effect fron 1.1.1956.

2. Scope.—The offence of robbery or of attempting robbery is aggravated by hurt The guilty act of one is imputed to all who are joined with him, provided the act is don in committing the offence of robbery. Violence or hurt entirely unconnected with tha offence or used to gratify a personal spite or passion is not contemplated ; as if one o the robbers should commit murder or rape, while the others are occupied witl plundering of searching for property. To support this charge, there should be proof o the robbery or attempt, and of the hurt ; that the hurt was caused voluntarily, that is not accidentally but intentionally or knowingly, may fairly be presumed in the absenc of any circumstances to show that it was accidental".—Morgan and Macpherson.

The test of Section 394, is whether hurt has been caused in committing o attempting to commit robbery. 1953 BLJR 465.

Accused were convicted under Section 394. The victim when he was returnin home was robbed of his money after having been hit on the head with a rod. It wa observed that causing hurt for preventing possible or anticipated resistance in order t commit theft and for that end and then committing theft was nothing less than robbery Held, that in this case evidence was that as a result of hurt victim was lyin unconscious. Hurt was caused in order to committing the theft and for that end an therefore what was established was the offence under Section 394, itself. 1987 Cri L 1257 (Ker).

Attempt to murder and dacoity.—On perusal of the statement of the complainan though he had not stated anything against the co-accused but by his statement for th involvement of the appellant/accused is found to be proved that he is the person who armed with a country-made pistol tried to cause injury to the complainant and also commit robbery by forcibly taken away the motor-cycle belonging to him. Moreover, the prosecution as discussed herein above also proved the seizure of the looted property, the motor-cycle from the possession of the appellant/accused and in such circumstances offence punishable under Section 307 of IPC and 394 read with 397 of the IPC is fully proved by the prosecution against the appellant.

In such circumstances, for the offence of robbery, the minimum sentence provided with the aid of Section 397 of IPC is of seven years and no grounds are available for any reduction of the aforesaid sentence. Hariballabh K. Rawat vs. State of M.P., 2010 (2) CrLJ 2309 (Gwalior).

3. Jurisdiction.—A Magistrate, having jurisdiction to try a prisoner for an offence under this section has not his jurisdiction taken away by the mere fact that the prisoner might also have been charged under Section 397. 1 Weir 449.

4. Doubt.—If there is an element of doubt as to the identification of the accused in a robbery, the accused should be given the benefit of the doubt and conviction and sentence should be quashed and set aside. UBR (1892-1896), Col. 1, 245 ; see also AIR 1934 All 569.

The mere fact that the recovery a steel trunk was reported to the police by the accused cannot constitute offence under Section 394. 1959 Cr LJ 581. No conviction will lie under the section where ears have been chopped before the death of the victim. 1974 Cr LJ 204 ; but see AIR 1978 SC 148 ; 1983 (2) Crimes 285, 1983 (1) Crimes 597 ; 1980 Cr LJ 1270 ; AIR 1980 SC 1753 ; 1983 Cr LR 177 (conviction would not be justified where there is nothing to connect the appellant with the murder or with the assault). Unless the hurt is caused for the purpose of committing the theft or for carrying away the property obtained by the theft, there would be no robbery and no scope for application of this section. 1974 Cr LJ 204 : 1974 BLJ 239 ; 1984 Cr LJ (NOC) 103 ; 1982 Cr LJ 714 (dispossession of moveables against his consent still will not be robbery ; AIR 1973 SC 468 : 1973 Cr LJ 314 (police constable held guilty).

6. Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows :—

That on or about the. . . . . day of....at......you committed or attempted to commit or were jointly with XY concerned in committing or attempting to commit robbery of the property of AB and that as such you (or XY) voluntarily caused hurt to AB (or any other person as the case may be), and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 394, of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

Charge under Section 384, was converted under Section 394. (1963) 3 SCC 727.

7. Recovery.—Stolen gold was recovered as melted-Link between stolen chain and melted gold—Recovery is a relevant piece of evidence to establish the offence of theft.—Conviction was fully justified. Charles Cardozo v. State, (1994) 1 Crimes 491 ; 1994 Cr LR (Mah) 6 (Bom).

The charge was of murder and robbery and stolen jewels were recovered from the possession of the accused after a lapse of one month but no explanation could be given by the accused for possession of said articles. It was held that mere lapse of one month would not result in conclusion that presumption against accused cannot be drawn. The conviction was, hence, proper. Thavaraj Pandian v. State, 2003 Cr LJ 2642 (Mad) : 2003(2) Cur Cri R 54 : 2003(1) Mad LW (Cri) 413.

8. Conviction.—When petitioners caused hurt to the complainant and then alleged to have taken away gold chain and ring—FIR and evidence not disclosing any intention of theft—Parties was having factional rivalry in village—Theft was not proved—Petitioners were acquitted of robbery and one petitioner who inflicted injuries liable to be convicted under Section 323, IPC. Dharmindhar Rana v. State, (1994) 1 Crimes 114 : (1994) 1 East Cr C 278 (Ori).

The High Court held that since he was acquitted in the said case the arrest of Ilyas becomes doubtful and the defence version that he was not arrested as stated by the prosecution but was arrested from his house is believable. It was, therefore, concluded that the accused was shown to the witnesses. It was also pointed out that Section 397 is not a substantive offence and the accused could not have been convicted under Section 397 only but could have been convicted under Section 394 read with Section 397. As the conviction has been recorded under Section 397 and the use of the weapons was not fully established, the respondent is entitled to acquittal.

The conclusions arrived at by the High Court are absolutely sketchy. It came to abrupt conclusion that the accused must have been shown to the witnesses. There is no foundation to such a plea. First Information Report was lodged under Section 394 IPC and charge was accordingly framed. Because of the use of deadly weapon, the trial Court convicted the accused under Section 397 IPC. The trial Court have altered the charge, but that was not done. The High Court could have altered the conviction and imposed adequate sentence. There was no prejudice involved.

Since the High Court's reasonings were perverse the impugned judgment is set aside. However, the respondent is convicted for offence punishable under Section 394

IPC for which he was originally charged. He is sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for 5 years. He shall surrender to custody forthwith to serve the remainder of sentence. The appeal is allowed to the aforesaid extent. State of Uttar Pradesh vs. Ilyas, AIR 2009 SC 1145 : 2009 (1) SCC 365 : 2008 (13) JT 197 : 2008 (15) SCR 142 : 2008 (15) Scale 142 : 2008 (9) SLT 717.

Where there was appreciation of evidence of prosecution—Accused not participating in Test Identification Parade when ample opportunity existed for eye-witnesses to identify accused—By such non-participation evidence value of prosecution is not detracted and—No other ground to doubt prosecution-evidence—Recovery of pistol and firearm from accused fully corroborated—Conviction was fully affirmed. Sunil v. State of Haryana, 1994 Cr LJ 1381 (SC) : AIR 1994 SC 1536.

Where the evidence clearly shows that the accused were employees of the brother-in-law of the victim old lady and since fact itself indicates that an old lady ventured to go out of her house to the toilet there must certainly some light, the evidence tendered by the said victim of identification of accused persons who alleged to have gagged her and taken away her gold chain and gold studs does not deserved to be approached with any amount of inherent doubt, suspicion or distrust and the recovery of the stolen ornaments at the instance of the accused corroborates the testimony of the victim, conviction of both the accused is proper. Girish v. State, 2004(2) Crimes at p. 9 (Ker) :AIR 2004(SC) 1933 : 2004 Cr LJ 1791 : 2004(1) DMC 586 : 2004(3) JT 560 : 2004(2) Rec Cri R 330 : 2004(4) SCC 470 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 1306 : 2004(2) Supreme 478.

In a case four accused during night time came to petrol pump in a car and robbed cash worth Rs. 53000/- by showing revolver to complainant. In the meantime hearing the sound of electric danger bell the mob chased and accosted the accused on spot. His conviction under Section 394/397 was held proper. The accused under Section 25 of Arms Act was acquitted and only Rs. 500 was recovered from him. The Court held that the facts would be no consequence for his conviction under Penal Code. Kashmira Singh Mohan Singh Lathi v. State, 2003 Cr LJ 3497 : 2003(2) UC 1156.

9. Causing heart attack during robbery.—The statements of the complainant duly corroborated by the FIR as well as medical report (Ex. P/8) and his participation established on the basis of the statements of the complainant and other witnesse Learned counsel for the applicant has relied upon a decision reported in AIR 195 Madh Pra 55: 1958 Cri LJ 190 : State of Madhya Pradesh v. Babulal Ramratan, an pointed out that when the investigation was tainted the whole prosecution case shou be discarded. There cannot be denial for this proposition propounded in this judgmen but on facts the courts below have not found any illegality, irregularity or concoction the investigation. The investigation was also not tainted one. Therefore, the question f disbelieving the prosecution witnesses would not arise. A very crucial point required be answered by the applicant that as to why the complainant who is a foreigner to hi would implicate the applicant a police constable. Jalamsingh v. State M.P., 2002 Cri 2586 (M.P.) : 2002 Cri LR (SC&MP) MPI 372 : 2002(3) MPHT 537.

Murder and robbery—Appreciation of evidence—In her cross-examination, witne stated that she had seen the accused sitting at the "Kheli" and that she had turned h back towards accused because accused was washing his hands. If that witness wa present in the field near the place of occurrence, there was no occasion as to why sh would not have seen the alleged actual occurrence.

There is also no explanation from witness as to why she turned her back when sh saw accused washing his hands. She does not state that she had seen the deceas with the accused nor does she state that she had seen the accused smeared with mud.

There is not even a single statement coming from any of the witnesses that th had seen any water being smeared with blood of the deceased or any soil of the fie being smeared with human blood. Some of the witnesses have stated that accused wa smeared with mud when he was returning from the field whereas Mathura (PW-4) do not say so. She only states that she saw him running from the fields. It is also n known why the said witness had turned her back towards the accused only because th ccused was washing his hands. If accused was washing his hands as stated by lathura (PW-4) there is no likelihood of body of the accused being smeared with mud s alleged by some of the prosecution witnesses.

On scrutiny of the evidence, we do not find any such direct evidence that the strap f wrist-watch belongs to the watch of the accused. None of the witnesses stated that uch strap of wristwatch belongs to the accused nor any wristwatch has been recovered rom the accused. So far the time of occurrence is concerned there is also no unanimity nd the evidence is scanty regarding the time of occurrence. In our considered opinion, ne evidence regarding commission of offence by the accused in the field and also mputation of legs of the deceased is neither cogent nor reliable, and therefore, those ircumstances cannot be relied upon for basing conviction of the respondent.

So far recovery of "Khurpi" is concerned the same admittedly did not contain any loodstains on it and it was recovered from an open place. Since there was no loodstain on it, the police also did not send it for chemical examination. Therefore, it annot be said that the said weapon was used for committing murder of the deceased. here could be some suspicion regarding the conduct of the accused at the time of ccurrence but the same cannot in any manner conclusively prove and establish that he accused has committed the murder of the deceased.

The view that is taken by the High Court is found to be a plausible view, and herefore, the benefit must always go to the accused and not to the prosecution. If the rosecution wants to prove the fact, the same must be proved by leading evidence, vhich is reliable and trustworthy, which pinpoints and conclusively proves the guilt of he accused. This is not a case where we can safely hold that the evidence led was rustworthy and conclusively establishes that it is the accused only, who had ommitted the offence. Considering the entire facts and circumstances of the case we re not inclined to interfere with the order of acquittal. State of Rajasthan vs. Naresh @ Ram Naresh, 2010 (2) CrLJ 1928 (SC).

10. Sentence.—Where there was consistency in evidence of witnesses found egarding opening of back-door and then carrying away utensils. Hence, conviction and sentence recorded by court below is confirmed. Nyasingh v. State of M.P., 1994 Cr LR (MP) 10 (N).

Where the conviction was under Section 394, read with Sections 397 and 394, IPC.—Which was challenged in revision petition. Offence falls either under Section 394 or 397, IPC, is made out. 11. Evidence and Proof.—Where the accused belonged to the neighbouring village at a distance of less than a mile from the police headquarters and the witnesses who came to identify the accused had seen the accused from behind while escaping and the victim knew one of accused from before yet he did not name him in FIR, and went to identify him when he fully knew that accused and identification of the two of the accused took place after a gap of four days after the arrest without explaining the cause for delay, it was held that conviction under Section 394, could not be sustained. AIR 1981 SC 389 : 1983 Cr LJ 434.

There was no evidence on record to prove that the accused had prior meeting of minds and intended to commit murder of accused. The evidence on record was that when two of the robbers could not succeed in robbing gun from deceased co-accused penetrated knife in his stomach. From the above evidence, it could only be inferred that the accused was to commit robbery of gun and not to commit murder of accused whom the accused were not knowing from before and had no ill will, grudge or motive to finish his life. There may be no prior intention and it may develop subsequently on the spot but in this case there was also no such evidence. Penetrating knife in the stomach of deceased by one of the co-accused was individual act of said particular accused simply to facilitate the other accused in snatching the gun from him. The plan of all the accused was to rob the gun and not to murder the deceased. Piercing of knife was thus solitary act of co-accused as there was nothing on record to show that prior to piercing knife the other accused had exhorted, motivated or instigated him to do so. It was held that accused was liable to be convicted under Section 394, IPC. He had no common intention with the co-accused to commit murder of deceased and therefore, his acquittal of the offence under Section 302/94, IPC was held proper. State of U.P. v. Tek Chand, 2000 Cri LJ 3821 (All) : 2000(40) A Cri C 251 : 1999(26) A Cri R 2050 : 2000 all LJ 1704 : 2000(1) C CrJ 178 (All).

Conviction based on identification. In view of the accepted position that the accused persons were brought to the hospital to be shown, grievance that the test identification parade was really of no consequence because they had already been shown to the witnesses has substance. That being only piece of material which was used for conviction of Mahabir, same cannot be sustained. The same is set aside. He is released forthwith unless required in any case. So far accused Jalvir is concerned, complainant had categorically stated that she knew him six years prior to the incident. He had come to their house many times. Therefore, there was no difficulty in identifying accused Jalvir and naming him in the first information report. It is of significance that in the first information report name of Jalvir was specifically noted. The plea that Jalvir's name could not have been given at the first instance, because the witness was unconscious is without any substance. As a matter of fact, the witness has categorically stated that after the information was lodged, she became unconscious. Above being the osition, the conclusions of the Trial Court in holding accused Jalvir guilty does not uffer from any infirmity. *Mahabir v. Chance finger prints lifted from place of crime matched with finger prints on dozier. o compare chance-finger prints with sample finger prints no permission of competent uthority has been taken and there is no evidence that finger prints on dozier were that f appellant. Even though gold bangles and silver glasses were recovered at instance of ccused and co-accused. They were neither subjected to any test identification roceedings nor having any identification mark. Witness, who identified gold bangles nd silver glasses as that of deceased, has not presented any cash memo or receipt of it. Ield, appellant is entitled to be acquitted. Mehmood Ali vs State, 2010 (4) CriLJ 3985 Del).

12. Acquittal.—Where there was robbing of Rs. 200/- on public road by showing nife. On recalling of eye-witnesses for cross-examination, they changed their version nd indicated another person of same name as that of present accused. Such change in ersion being unsafe for conviction and Accused was not caught on spot nor any ecovery of money or knife made from him. Hence, appellant accused was acquitted of harge. Narendra Pandit v. State of M.P., 1995 Cr LR (MP) 209.

The law requires joining of two witnesses of the locality and not one. Hence, ecoveries are doubtful and cannot be stated to have effected at the instance of the ppellant. Hence, circumstances have not been established beyond reasonable doubt. aivir Singh v. State, (1995) 1 CCR 663 (Delhi).

Where the medical evidence does not corroborate the statements of two eye-vitnesses who are brothers of the deceased and statement of one eye-witness is not orroborated by the evidence of another eye-witness and the case put forward in the FIR ndergoes complete change during trial and the written FIR itself is highly suspicious nd the post-mortem report as to injury is incompatible with the story put forward by he prosecution it is held that the prosecution has not been able to prove the guilt of the ccused and therefore the accused would be entitled to acquittal. Sheo Prasad Tiwari v. tate, (2004) 2 Crimes 88 (All).

The accused was charged of robbery by causing hurt and there was proof of ecovery of money from the accused who had confessed to police that they had robbed he money from victim. Basing the conviction on this much evidence were not proper nd accused was held entitled to acquittal. Anil Sharma v. State, 2003 Cr LJ 3497 Uttranchal) : 2003(2) UC 1156.

13. Murder and robbery—Appreciation of evidence.—In her cross-examination, vitness stated that she had seen the accused sitting at the "Kheli" and that she had urned her back towards accused because accused was washing his hands. If that vitness was present in the field near the place of occurrence, there was no occasion as o why she would not have seen the alleged actual occurrence.

There is also no explanation from witness as to why she turned her back when she aw accused washing his hands. She does not state that she had seen the deceased vith the accused nor does she state that she had seen the accused smeared with mud.

There is not even a single statement coming from any of the witnesses that they had seen any water being smeared with blood of the deceased or any soil of the field being smeared with human blood. Some of the witnesses have stated that accused was smeared with mud when he was returning from the field whereas Mathura (PW-4) does not say so. She only states that she saw him running from the fields. It is also not known why the said witness had turned her back towards the accused only because the accused was washing his hands. If accused was washing his hands as stated by Mathura (PW-4) there is no likelihood of body of the accused being smeared with mud as alleged by some of the prosecution witnesses.

On scrutiny of the evidence, we do not find any such direct evidence that the strap of wrist-watch belongs to the watch of the accused. None of the witnesses stated that such strap of wristwatch belongs to the accused nor any wristwatch has been recovered from the accused. So far the time of occurrence is concerned there is also no unanimity and the evidence is scanty regarding the time of occurrence. In our considered opinion, the evidence regarding commission of offence by the accused in the field and also amputation of legs of the deceased is neither cogent nor reliable, and therefore, those circumstances cannot be relied upon for basing conviction of the respondent.

So far recovery of "Khurpi" is concerned the same admittedly did not contain any bloodstains on it and it was recovered from an open place. Since there was no bloodstain on it, the police also did not send it for chemical examination. Therefore, it cannot be said that the said weapon was used for committing murder of the deceased. There could be some suspicion regarding the conduct of the accused at the time of occurrence but the same cannot in any manner conclusively prove and establish that the accused has committed the murder of the deceased.

The view that is taken by the High Court is found to be a plausible view, and therefore, the benefit must always go to the accused and not to the prosecution. If the prosecution wants to prove the fact, the same must be proved by leading evidence, which is reliable and trustworthy, which pinpoints and conclusively proves the guilt of the accused. This is not a case where we can safely hold that the evidence led was trustworthy and conclusively establishes that it is the accused only, who had committed the offence. Considering the entire facts and circumstances of the case we are not inclined to interfere with the order of acquittal. State of Rajasthan vs. Naresh @ Ram Naresh, 2010 (2) CrLJ 1928 (SC).

1. Amendment.—The words in italics have been substituted for the words transportation for life" by Act 26, of 1955, and Sch. with effect from 1.1.1956.

2. Scope.—In the case of dacoity in the running train, though some of witnesses vere not able to identify the appellant and each one of the dacoits, one of the witnesses ad recognised and identified all the accused. His testimony in the court identifying the ppellant was corroborated by his testimony identification at the parade. Held, that here was no reason to take a different view. Appeal accordingly dismissed. 1987 Cri LJ 95 (SC) : AIR 1987 SC 1.

Enmity. Appellants variously armed entered into room of informant's wife and ommitted dacoity. The evidence of the witnesses that the indentification of the ppellants in the facts stated aforesaid are doubtful. All the three appellants are co-illagers, were all known to the villagers and thus it appeared that their names have een dragged in this case due to enmity. Surprisingly not a singly person was arrested, nor the Investigating Officer investigated and tried to find out who were the unknown acoits who had participated in the alleged crime. These three appellants were found in he village immediately after the occurrence which also leads this Court to doubt their articipation in the said dacoity. Therefore, this Court finds that the evidence of the witnesses does not inspire confidence and as such held that the prosecution has not been able to prove beyond doubt that the appellants participated in the said dacoity and as such their conviction and sentence are set aside. Lalo Mandal & Anr. vs State of Bihar & Anr., 2010 Cri LJ 941 (Patna).

The accused were convicted for the offence of committing dacoity. The accused were identified in test identification parade. It was stated by the proprietor of the shop in which dacoity took place that there was enough light inside the shop and he had ample opportunity to see the dacoits from a very close distance. It was thus observed that identity of the appellants as culprits who committed dacoity in the shop had been fully established by identifying witnesses. Held, that on careful consideration of circumstances and evidence conviction of all appellants was to be upheld. 1987 Cri LJ 1320 (Pat).

Where there was display of force by overt act. It is not necessary to establish dacoity. Madan Kandl v. State of Orissa. (1995) 9 OCR 210 (Ori).

3. Proof.—"It will be borne in mind that this offence as defined does not always involve robbery. The proof should be of a robbery or attempt to rob by five or more persons who are either joint actors, or some of whom actually commit the robbery, etc, while the others are abettors, being present but not actually participating in the commission of robbery or the attempt to rob."—Morgan and Macpherson, 335. An offence under this section can be committed if the number of persons concerned in the robbery is not less than five. 6 Lah 24 : 26 PLR 139 : 88 Ind Cas 513 : 26 Cr LJ 1153 ; 1958 Raj LW 527 ; There is no distinction between a dacoity and an attempt to commit dacoity. Any overt act by the accused for preparation of dacoity would immediately make liable under Section 395. AIR 1969 All 727 : 1959 All Cr R 312 : 1959 Cr LJ 1274. In order to sustain a conviction under Section 395, it must be proved that violence had been used for the act of committing theft. 25 Cut LT 433 : 1959 1 Ori JD 460.

While informant was returning home with his brother on motor cycle they were accosted in the way by five miscreants, of them two were identified by the informant as well as by his brother and their names were also disclosed by informant.

When they were asked to stop, they tried to flee from there by accelerating the speed of the motor cycle and then as per the fard-beyan, some of the miscreants fired shot which hit brother, as a result of which, they fell down and then they again tried to flee from there and again someone fired shot causing another injury and then they took away the Motor Cycle.

Though occurrence took place in night, none of witnesses had sufficient time to note physical features of other accused persons. It was quite obligatory on part of Investigating Officer to put those other accused persons on test identification parade, but they were never put on test identification parade. Taking entire facts and circumstances into consideration there was no reason for disbelieving evidence of informant and his brother.

Accused who were named in FIR, were ordered convicted, held proper. Laltu Sardar and Ors. vs. State of Jharkhand, 2010 (3) Cri LJ 2955 (Jhar).

No incriminating article was recovered from any of the accused persons except the gun. Held, that the charge under Section 395, IPC, was not established. 1982 Cr LJ 1156 ; 1983 Cr LR (SC) 258 ; AIR 1981 SC 1388 ; see also 1975 Cr LJ 83 ; 1980 Bih Cr C 65.

The prosecution has not been able to prove the exact statement made by two appellants individually. Hence, the stated confession is not admissible as it does not appear to be voluntary and appears to have been made to person in authority. The same could not be made a basis for supporting the conviction of appellants as there was complete absence of any evidence of an independent character to corroborate the same. Ashish Singh alias Ram Kishore Singh v. State of Bihar, (1995) 1 East Cr C 339 (Pat).

Inconsistent and uncorroborated evidence of a single witness is unsafe and can not be relied upon. Bharthan Kurmi v. State of Bihar, 1997 (2) East Cr C 451 (Pat).

Where evidence of eye-witnesses, related to informant victim not corroborated from independent witnesses on identification of accused and no looted article was recovered from accused therefore conviction not sustainable. Aziz Mian v. State of Bihar, 2005 (2) Crimes 567 (Pat).

The accused who were 15 to 20 in number armed with weapons committed dacoity but witnesses who claimed to have identified the dacoits were later declared hostile and other witnesses also changed their stand and stated that they had learnt the names of dacoits from male members. It was held that practically there was no identification against the accused and their participation in crime was not proved. The accused was held entitled to benefit of doubt. Bhuneshwar Singh v. State, 2003 Cr LJ 1008 (Pat).

The accused were charged for committing dacoity and robbery but identification parade was held in a room within the premises of crime branch of Police Mumbai and no precaution was taken to see that the witnesses were given no opportunity to see the culprits before Test Identification Parade. The witnesses were frightened and were being examined after lapse of some years. This evidence was considered not sufficient for basing the conviction and the same was set aside. *Syed Mohd. Where the test identification parade was held after more than five months of the date of the commission of dacoity, and services of the jail constables were utilized to secure non-suspects, descriptive particulars of the accused has not been mentioned in the FIR lodged by the victims, the entire discovery evidence is against the provisions of Section 27 of the Evidence Act because of the turning hostile of the mediators and in absence of proof of the handwriting of C.I. regarding mediatornama which was not prepared in the presence of the I.O. assisting him in the investigation, the identification of the accused in Court has been made during trial after 9 years of the incident, and there is contradictory evidence relating to recovery of properties, the accused persons cannot be convicted. Bommidi Malli Kharjuna alias Malka v. State, 2004 Cr LJ 2162 (AP) : 2004(1) ALD (CRL) 391 : 2004(3) All Cri LR 561 : 2004(2) Andh LT (Cri) AP 128 : 2004(3) Rec Cri R 655.

The gang indulged in commission of dacoities in different districts of States of Andhra and Maharashtra in an organized manner. Taking the advantage of sensitivity of area accused had declared themselves either as Naxalities or police to gain entries into the houses of victims. Investigation as well as prosecution was done in meticulous and systematic manner and every step was taken strictly in accordance with requirements of law. The conviction of accused under Section 395, 412 399, 400 and 402 was held proper. Though offences were committed in different places and at the different times, the sentences were directed to run concurrently in interest of justice. Bandamedi Shanker v. State, 2003 Cr LJ 2242 (AP) : 2003(1) ALD (CRL 518 : 2003(2) Andh LT (Cri) AP 266.

Where there exists enmity between the accused persons and the informant's family and there are contradictory statements of the witnesses as regards availability of source of light, manner o occurrence, and number of the accused persons, non concealing of the faces of the accused when they are well-known to the informant's family casts doubt about their alleged participation in the crime of dacoity and Test Identification parade which was held after two months of the commission of the dacoity suffers from legal infirmities and the failure to seize the lantern allegedly carried by the accused persons casts serious doubt on the prosecution case and, therefore, the accused persons cannot be convicted for offence under Section 395, IPC. Chhaku Lal Thakur v. State, (2003) 3 East Cri C 160 : 2004 Cr LJ (NOC) 146 (Jhar) : AIR 2004 Jhar HCR 1252 : 2003(3) East Cri C 160 : 2003(3) JLJR 674.

Where two accused persons were acquitted for offence under Section 395, IPC by giving them benefit of doubt then remaining 3 accused persons would fall short of 5 persons in order to constitute offence under Section 395, IPC and therefore remaining accused were entitled to benefit of doubt. Rapani Laxaman v. State of AP, 2004 Cr LJ 136 (AP) : 2004(1) ALD (CRL) 425 : 2004(1) Cur Cri R 176.

In a case a dacoity was committed in the house of the informant by dacoits holding gun, lathi. On alarm raised by inmates of the house the villagers came there and chased the dacoits and one gun was recovered from a dacoits which was handed over to the police. The informant and the family members claimed to have identified the accused in the torch-light and same persons were later on arrested by police and in Test Identification parade they were identified by the witnesses. The doctor examined the injured inmates of the house of the informant, the trial Court was justified in convicting the accused persons under Section 395, IPC. Jaddu Choudhary v. State, 2004 Cr LJ 2144 (Jhar) : AIR 2004 Jhar HCR 1178 : 2004(01) East Cr C 631 : 2004(3) Rec Cri R 639.

The conviction held proper where the evidence showed that the accused trespassed forcibly into bank armed with deadly weapon and decamped with body. Mohd. Safiulla v. State, 2003 Cr LJ (NOC) 292 (Orissa).

The miscreants entered the house of victim Sub-Inspector, looted ornaments, cash and service revolver and fled away. The accused were subsequently apprehended on suspicion and on basis of their confessional statements stolen articles were recovered. There was nothing on record to disbelieve seizure of articles from the accused and informant had identified the accused persons and recognized gold ornaments. The conviction of accused under Section 395/457 was held proper. Lalu v. State, 2003 Cr LJ 1677 (Orissa).

The allegation was that some accused persons robbed passer by of the road and accused was one of them but only he was caught red handed by the public. All the victims supported the prosecution case consistently. Though there were contradiction with regard to identification of accused but witnesses were consistent with regard to one fact that accused was really caught red handed and he and witnesses were residents of the some village, conviction was held proper. Munshi Mahto v. State, 2003 Cr LJ 4177 (Jhar) : AIR 2003 Jhar HCR 1169 : 2003(3) Cur Cri R 655 : 2003(2) East Cri C 301.

In Bombay case the foreign nationals were waylaid and robbed of their belongings and thereafter two of them were raped also. The evidence produced was cogent and reliable and accused were identified in the Court and this fact was corroborated by circumstantial evidence according to which various robbed articles were recovered from their possession. It was held that conviction of accused under Section 395/376 was proper. Thambi Nair v. State, 2003 Cr LJ 493 : 2002(1) All MR (Cri) 615.

Conviction can be based on solitary witness who clearly stated to have identified the accused persons in the light of lantern and identified the accused in Test Identification parade also. Sadique Ansari v. State of Bihar, 2006 Cr LJ 1592 (Uttra).

In a case where the accused allegedly entered into the house at mid night and assaulted deceased and looted the ornaments of gold and silver, it was held that in view of the fact that huge quantity of ornaments was made at the instance of accused persons duly identified by prosecution witnesses, the possibility of planting case against accused persons by police, and, therefore the conviction of accused persons under Sections 395 and 396 was proper. Narayan Prasad v. State of MP, 2006 Cr LJ 123 (SC).

4. Recent possession of dacoited property.—The recent possession of property stolen at dacoity even when there is no evidence identifying him as one present at the dacoity. will, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary gives rise to the presumption that the accused participated in it. IOCI ; see also AWN 1898, 203 ; Rat Un Cr C 312. The mere fact that the accused produced the property obtained by the commission of dacoity from under a tree in a certain field not belonging to him is not legally sufficient to justify his conviction under Section 395, IPC, when there is no other evidence to convict him with the commission of dacoity. 161 Ind Cas 271 : 37 Cr LJ 454 : 1936 OWN 295 ; see also AIR 1944 Cal 39 : 45 Cr LJ 468. The circumstance that the actual articles removed by looting have not been ultimately recovered from any of the accused persons or that the details of the property removed or stolen were furnished to the police until some time after the occurrence is of no consequence and cannot justify the rejecting of the prosecution evidence as regards looting or robbery a false. 18 Cut LT 188 ; see 1954 RLW 404 : ILR (1954) 4 Raj 476. The circumstance of mere recovery of an unusual quantity of opium from a deserted house without any proof or possession of any of the accused cannot lend support to a charge of dacoity. 1964 Raj LW 171.

The recovery of the property at the instance of the appellant which were the subject matters of the dacoity and have been properly identified. The presumption is that the appellant was a receiver of the property transferred to him in the course of the dacoity. The conviction would be under Section 412, and not under Section 397, IPC. (1979) 1 SCC 131.

Mere recovery of the stolen articles from the accuseds—Does not make them dacoits—Unless there is a recent possession—However the accuseds can be convicted for the possession of stolen property. Narayan Singh and Man Singh v. State of M.P., (1994) SCC (Cri) 232 : 1994 Supp(1) SCC 62.

There is complete evidence of legal and satisfactory evidence that articles including cash recovered from possession of the appellants were articles and cash looted in course of dacoity. Hence, charge under Sections 395 and 412, IPC, is not sustainable Ashish Singh alias Ram Kishore Singh v. State, (1995) 1 East Cr C 339 (Pat).

5. Dacoity and retaining of looted articles.—Where the prosecution has established the only fact that the dacoity was committed in the house of the informant but the prosecution case is full of doubt about the participation of the accused and retaining the articles which common house hold articles are found in each and every house which were alleged to have been looted in the course of commission of dacoity, the accused cannot be convicted for offences under Sections 395 and 412, IPC. Ashrafil Seikh v. State, 2004 Cr LJ 3716 at p. 3720 (Jhar) : 2004 AIR Jhar HCR 2210 : 2004(4) Rec Cri R 880 : 2004 AIR Kant HCR 2638.

6. Punishment.—Under this section a sentence of transportation for life can be passed, or by applying Section 59, a sentence of transportation from seven to ten years can also be passed ; but a term of transportation, between ten years and life, does not seem to be legal. 4 CrLJ 385. Dacoity is a most serious crime which it is difficult to detant in the sense of bringing home the offence to the culprits, and in ordinary circumstances, a sentence of rigorous imprisonment for a period of 7 years is the least sentence which should be passed. 1936 ALJ 739 : 162 Ind Cas 499 : 37 Cr LJ 595 : 1936 A Cr C 74 : 1936 Cr C 477 : AIR 1936 All 311 ; but see AIR 1943 Cal 32 : 44 Cr LJ 386 : 1952 AWR (HC) 10. Appellants alongwith four others have committed dacoity of temple properties. Dacoity is a dare-devil act. Most of the time, a serious crime like dacoity is committed by unknown persons and it is very difficult to trace them and still difficult to secure their conviction. As a matter of fact, looking to the nature of crime and the manner in which the appellants looted temple properties, graver punishment was warranted. In any case, sentence of five years' rigorous imprisonment awarded by the trial Court and confirmed in appeal by the High Court for the offence under Section 395, IPC calls for no interference. Ram Babu vs. State of U.P., 2010 (3) CrLJ 2856 (SC).

7. Sections 395 and 397.—As Section 397, does not create a substantive offence a conviction under that section is not correct, it ought to be under Section 395, read with Section 397. AIR 1957 Trip 48 : 1957 Cr LJ 1457.

In absence of any grievous hurt or even minor injury during dacoity operation, sentence of 10 years imprisonment reduced to seven years. Subhaya Perumal Pilley v. State, 1997 Cri LJ 922 (Bom).

The accused were amongst others accused, who committed dacoity at the residence of Lallukhan and looted property from his house. The prosecution witnesses identified the accused appellants came at the residence of Lallukhan and committed dacoity. Witnesses stated that Liyakat snatched wrist watch and Rs. 2,500/- from him. Wrist watch recovered from Liyakat was identified by Lallukhan belonging to him. From the bare perusal of the statements of the prosecution witnesses mentioned above, it is clear that the prosecution has been able to prove the case against the accused appellants beyond reasonable doubt for the offences charged against them. Accused Liyakat was arrested and on the basis of information given by him under Section 27 of the Evidence Act wrist watch was recovered from him Lallukhan proved and identified that the wrist watch recovered from Liyakat belonged to him. The arrest memo and recovery memo were proved by the independent witness.

The prosecution has been able to prove case beyond reasonable doubt against the accused for the offences under Sections 3 and 25 of the Arms Act. and they have been rightly convicted and sentenced under Section 3/25 of the Arms Act. I am in agreement with the findings recorded by the trial Court for the offences under Sections 395, 397, IPC against the accused and for Sections 3 and 25 Arms Act against the accused appellant. Ramzan and Anr. vs. State of Rajasthan, 2010 (3) CrLJ 2607 (Raj).

8. Sections 395 and 412.—There is no statutory prohibition for a conviction under both Sections 395 and 412. On principle if the criminal act is only a single act coming within the definition of two distinct offences, there should not be conviction for both the offences but the conviction should be under one of them or in the alternative. 1956 Andh LT 915 : AIR 1956 All 336 : 1956 Cr LJ 662 ; 29 Cut LT 455 (benefit of doubt).

Dacoity and receiving stolen property—Simultaneous conviction for both offences not possible. In Section 114 Illustration (a) of the Evidence Act the words "either the thief or has received goods" and more particularly, the word "or" postulates that both the presumptions cannot be drawn simultaneously. This appears to be a pointer to the proposition that one cannot be convicted with both theft and for receiving or retaining stolen property. Section 411 nor Section 414 of the IPC can be applied to the original theft of the property concerned. No person can receive for himself nor does a person assist himself in concealing. Thus, it appears that simultaneous conviction for dacoity and receiving or retaining stolen property by commission of dacoity is not permissible. Moreover, the act of dishonest removal constitutes dishonest reception and so the thief does not commit the offence of retaining stolen property merely by continuing to keep possession of the property he stole. The theft and taking and retention of stolen goods form one and the same offence and cannot be punished separately. Rafikul Alam and Ors. v. The State of W. B., 2008 CriLJ 2005 (Cal).

9. 1. Scope.—"This section is intended on to the punish servants and strangers who could possibly have no right to or interest in, the effects of a dead man, and who misappropriated such effects, but not to punish near relations who take possession of and deal with the effects under a claim of independent ownership or as heir to the deceased. 25 Ind Cas 514. It is not necessary for a conviction under this section that the accused should misappropriate it to his own use. 12 WR Cr 39 ; 11 WR Cr 1. Under this section all the elements are required to constitute the offence which would be required to constitute the offence of criminal misappropriation in respect of a person who is alive. 12 WR Cr 39. The essential ingredient of offence under Section 404 was the knowledge on the part of the accused that the property in question was in possession of the deceased person at the time of that person's death and had not since been in the possession if any person legally entitled to such possession. 1961 MPLJ (Notes) 130. This section does not apply to immoveable property. 6 BHC Cr 33 ; AIR 1956 Madh Pra 49 : 1956 Cr LJ 224 : Madh BLR 1955 Cr 328. This section relates to a description of property peculiarly needing protection. The offence consists in pillaging of moveable property during the interval which elapses between the time when the possessor of the property dies and the time when it comes into the possession of some person or officer authorized to take charge of it. The proof should be that the property belonged to or was in the possession of the deceased person at the time of his death, and that it has since been misappropriated or converted to his own use by a person who knew or had reason to know that it belonged to the deceased."—Morgan and Macpherson.—This section is expressly limited to moveable property alone and criminal misappropriation or conversion is easily possible of the moveable property where the materials which have been secured from the building are removed. LR 6 All 200 Cr : AIR 1925 All 673 : 24 ALJ 153 : 27 Cr LJ 7. Under this section the prosecution must prove not only misappropriation or dishonest conversion to his own use of the property by the accused. The prosecution must also prove that the property was in the possession of a deceased person at the time of his death and that it has not since been in the possession of any person legally entitled to such possession. AIR 1949 Cal 171 : 50 Cr LJ 241.

There is no reason to restrict the property to moveable property. AIR 1962 SC 1823. And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

OF CRIMINAL BREACH OF TRUST

Distinguishing of the offences.—"This offence like the offence of criminal misappropriation is characterised by an actual fraudulent appropriation of property. There is not originally a wrongful taking or moving as in theft, but the offence consists in wrongful appropriation of property, consequent upon a possession which is lawful. The offence is distinguishable from criminal misappropriation because the subject of it is not property, which by some casually or otherwise, but without criminal means, comes into the offender's possession ; but the property, which is entrusted to the offender by the owner or by other's lawful authority and which the offender holds subject to some duty or obligation to apply it according to the trust"—Morgan and Macpherson.

Sec. 405. Criminal breach of trust.—Whoever, being in any manner entrusted with property, or with any dominion over property, dishonestly misappropriates or converts to his own use that property, or dishonestly uses or disposes of that property in violation of any direction of law prescribing the mode in which such trust is to be discharged, or of any legal contract, express or implied, which he has made touching the discharge of such trust, or wilfully suffers any other person so to do, commits "criminal breach of trust."

12. Cases.—It is a possible view that an accused is guilty of criminal breach of trust between the misappropriation and the repayment, but Courts should be slow when repayment is at once made on demand to assume guilt in accused person. Criminal liability is not the same as civil liability. 97 Ind Cas 1041 : 27 Cr LJ 1217. Where a Sub-Inspector of Police who came across a stray bullock advertised for the owner but as none turned up had it sold after 20 days, he is not guilty of any offence under this section. 91 Ind Cas 37 : 23 ALJ 128. Where it is proved that a certain sum of money for which a Hindu father was accountable was not accounted for him and in a scheme sent he was ordered to pay the amount it will not amount to misappropriation. 1926 MWN 194 : 23 LW 714 : 94 Ind Cas 634 : 50 MLJ 353. Where a post master opened a V.P. article addressed to himself and extracted a railway receipt from it without paying for it for six days and made false entries in the P.O. books it amounts to technical misappropriation under Section 403. In case of receiving money to be handed over at another place with dishonest motive offence is committed at the place of receipt. Failure to hand over is not an ingredient of the offence nor is it a consequence. AIR 1921 Pat 85 : 1921 PHCC 31. Where the allegations made in a complaint are that the complainant paid certain sums of money to the accused (which moneys were to be used for the purpose of bribery to certain officers) on the undertaking of the accused to obtain for the complainant a certain post, that complainant does not make out a case of criminal misappropriation, for in order to constitute this offence the property must have come into the possession of the accused innocently in the first instance. 165 Ind Cas 596 : 1936 Cr C 961 : AIR 1936 Rang 471. Withdrawal by employee of sum deposited by him as security without permission of employer and prior to adjustment of accounts amounts to criminal misappropriation. AIR 1938 Cal 451. A commission agent advanced a sum to a grower of potatoes upon the mortgage of his crop. The mortgage was not security for repayment of money advanced but to secure to the commission agent the sale of crop and his commission. The grower in breach of this agreement sent the potatoes for sale to another agent. Held, that the grower could not be said to have committed criminal misappropriation, criminal breach of trust or cheating. AIR 1938 Sind 48. Where on settling the marriage of his daughter with the complainant, the accused took from the latter certain ornaments, and clothes of female wear, meant either as a present to the future bride or as a part of the pan but in any case given and taken in contemplation of marriage, but later on he married his daughter to some other persons and on being questioned by the complainant, denied both the agreement for marriage and the receipt of the articles. Held, (1) that he had dishonestly misappropriated or converted to his own use the articles in question and an offence under Section 403 has been committed. 42 CWN 783. In the above case Mukherjee, J., remarked : "If the accused had disputed his liability in law to return the articles instead of denying their receipt, there would have been a complete answer to the criminal prosecution." The accused an employee of the post office was supplied with postal stamps for sale to the public. Held, that the transaction was not a loan but an entrustment. 1960 All Cr R 261 : 1960 All WR (HC) 415.

In the instant case, the averments made in the complaint petition show that money was handed over by the opposite party to the petitioners to supply levy cement with the abolition of the control on cement the system of supply of levy cement was abolished. Therefore, the money given by the opposite party No. 1 to the petitioner No. 1 for the purpose cannot be fulfilled. It was the duty of the petitioners to refund the money as requested by the opposite party as well as the Government of India. In spite of that the money was not refunded. In view of the above, it cannot be said that the averments made in the complaint petition even if it is taken to be true, do not make out a case of criminal breach of trust or misappropriation or simple misappropriation. This is dependent upon the intention of the parties. The petitioners stated that there were outstanding balances as per the accounts and if the accounts are taken into consideration the petitioners would not be liable to pay. All these matters require full dress trial. It can be ascertained only after recording evidence of the witnesses for the complainant and the petitioners. (M/s.) Modi Cement Ltd. v. 2. Civil and criminal liability.—In dealing with a case of criminal breach of trust the jury should bear in mind the difference between civil and criminal liability. AIR 1940 Mad 329 : 41 Cr LJ 824. Where in the allegations contained in the plaint, it is manifest that the complainant's age was that the accused acted dishonestly, it is a circumstance which distinguishes a civil from a criminal liability. 1957 All WR (HC) 255. The determining factor is judging whether a case is one of criminal breach of trust or a criminal breach of contract is whether the person proceed against and acted dishonestly. 1976 Cr LJ 449. It must be proved that the accused in an offence under Section 405 was entrusted with the property or with any dominion over the property and the same was dishonestly misappropriated or converted to his own use. 1977 Cr LJ 1416. There was a business dealing between parties in which complainant had been supplying goods and the accused had been making the payments of goods supplied to them by cash/draft on different intervals. The complainant supplied goods to accused also and accused No. 2 being proprietor of accused issued cheque in favour of the complainant for the goods supplied to the accused. The cheque was dishonoured by the Bank. The complainant filed a complaint for cheating and criminal breach of trust. The Court held that it was a business dealing between two concerns between whom, there had been business dealings earlier also and no dispute arose. Criminal prosecution under Section 406 and 402 IPC by the complainant was abuse of the process of law. Sneh Lata v. M/s Swastika Agro Industrial Corporation, Jalandhar 2001 Cri LJ 4432 (P&H).

3. Applicability of.—In the case accused were charged of criminal breach of trust for having disposed of pledged goods with dishonest and fraudulent intention. Ingredient of the offence of criminal breach of trust are (1) accused must have been trusted with property or domain over it, and (2) accused must have misappropriated property or disposed of that property in violation of such trust. Goods pledge by pledger constitute entrusted of property. There may be circumstances where alleged breach is so gave and wanton as to warrant an inference of dishonest and fraudulent intention on part of pledge in disposing of pledged goods in which case it will constitute criminal breach of trust. It was observed that the act of pledge disposing of jewel ornaments pledged by debtor without notice to pledger for a price for below the real value might constitute criminal breach of trust. 1987 Cri LJ 447 (Del).

Requirement for Applicability. The terms of the section are very wide. They apply to one who is in any manner entrusted with property or dominion over property. The section does not require that the trust should be in furtherance of any lawful object. It merely provides, inter alia, that if such a person dishonestly misappropriates or converts to his own use the property entrusted to him; he commits criminal breach of trust. This section requires, (1) Entrusting any person with property or with dominion over property; (2) That person entrusted (a) dishonestly misappropriates or converts to his own use that property; or (b) dishonestly uses or disposes of that property or willfully suffers any other person so to do in violation – (i) of any direction of law prescribing the mode in which such trust is to be discharged, or (ii) of any legal contract made touching the discharge of such trust.

The most essential ingredient of proof of criminal breach of trust, therefore, is misappropriation with a dishonest intention. R. Venkatakrishnan vs. Central Bureau of Investigation, 2009 (11) SCC 737 : 2009 (10) JT 597 : 2009 (12) SCR 762 : 2009 (11) Scale 102 : 2009 (6) SLT 375.

4. Scope.—"The offence, as here defined, appears to include any dishonest misappropriation by persons in whom confidence is placed as to the custody or application of particular property whether it be by legal authority or private contract or consent. Persons as clerks, agents, servants or otherwise, under whatsoever name have a confidence reposed in them by their employers and are, whether in the ordinary course of their employment or only occasionally entrusted with the property and persons whose employment does not extend beyond the particular occasion on which they are so entrusted, seem to be within this section. Those who technically called trustees if they commit a breach of trust are responsible as criminals for acts done by them dishonestly for their own gain to the despoiling of the persons for whom they are in trust, or for acts causing wrongful gain to themselves or wrongful loss to such persons. Sections 407-409 make special provisions for various cases in which property is entrusted to agents or contractors who commit this offence.

'This definitions includes those who are entrusted in any manner with property, as warehouse-keepers, etc., are entrusted only with the possession or custody of property. Persons who are empowered to take or deliver possession of property whether such power is derived from the owner or from any other person, and persons who are entrusted with any dominion over property are also included. Property which is bulky or which cannot, for other reasons be delivered from hand to hand, is usually represented by some writing or other thing. Thus the key of the warehouse or place where goods are lodged, the bill of lading, delivery order, or other document however called, which is used in the ordinary course of business to show the possession or control of property and which enables the holder to transfer or receive or otherwise deal with it, are made to represent the property itself. A person entrusted with such a document or thing has a dominion over the property thereby represented."—Morgan and Macpherson, 365. Evidence of trust and dishonest misappropriation are sufficient to constitute an offence under this section. 1 Weir 460 ; 16 WR Cr 39 ; 9 All 666 ; 3 WR Cr 44 ; 1914 MWN 894 : 16 MLT 505 : 15 Cr LJ 688 ; AIR 1957 All 122 : 1957 All LJ 147 : 1957 Cr LJ 170 ; AIR 1955 Pat 338 : 1955 Cr LJ 1096. The value of property is immaterial. 27 All 28 ; AWN 1881-82.

"Negligence or other misconduct causing the loss of the entrusted property may make the person entrusted civilly responsible, but will not make him guilty of this offence. There must be the intention so cause wrongful gain or wrongful loss to constitute a criminal breach of trust."—Morgan and Macpherson. See also 106 Ind Cas 682. To constitute an offence of criminal breach of trust there must be an entrustment, there must be misappropriation or conversion of one's own use or use in violation of credit to a Provident Fund or Family Pension Fund established by any law for the time being in force, shall be deemed to have been entrusted with the amount for the contribution so deducted by him and if he makes default in the payment of such contribution to the said fund in violation of said law, shall be deemed to have dishonestly used the amount of the said contribution in violation of a direction of law as aforesaid.

The word "property" is used in the Penal Code in a much wider sense than the expression 'moveable property'. There is no good reason to restrict the meaning of the word 'property' to moveable property only when it is used without any qualification in Section 405 or in other section of the Penal Code. Requirement for. This section classes together public servants, bankers, merchants, factors, brokers, attorneys and agents. The duties of such persons are of a highly confidential character, involving great powers of control, over the property entrusted to them and a breach of trust by such persons may often induce serious public and private calamity. High morality is expected of these persons. They are to discharge their duties honestly.

The following are the essential ingredients of the offence under this section : (1) The accused must be a public servant; (2) He must have been entrusted, in such capacity with the property; (3) He must have committed breach of trust in respect of such property. R. Venkatakrishnan vs. Central Bureau of Investigation, 2009 (11) SCC 737 : 2009 (10) JT 597 : 2009 (12) SCR 762 : 2009 (11) Scale 102 : 2009 (6) SLT 375.

5. Criminal Breach of Trust—Proof of mens rea.—In Kanhaiya Lall v. Emperor, 168 Ind Cas 58 : 38 Cr LJ 491 : 1937 OLR 202 : 1937 OWN 505 : AIR 1937 Oudh 331, the Court observed : "My principal reason for holding that the facts of this case do not constitute the offence of criminal breach of trust is that there is no satisfactory evidence on the record which convinces me that the accused, B. Kanhaiya Lall, at the time when he is said to have misappropriated certain sums of money had guilty of knowledge or mens rea as to convert what at best amounted to a civil wrong or tort into a penal offence' amounting to criminal breach of trust by a servant. The distinction between a civil wrong, which gives rise to a suit for damages for that wrongful act or tort, and a criminal offence punishable under the Penal Code is very clear. Every breach of trust gives rise to a suit for damages, but it is only where there is evidence of a mental act of fraudulent misappropriation that a commission of embezzlement of any sum of money becomes a mental offence punishable as criminal breach of trust under Sections 408 and 409, I.P. Code. It is the mental act of fraudulent misappropriation that clearly demonstrates an act of embezzlement which is a civil wrong or tort from the criminal breach of trust punishable under Section 408, I.P. Code. This is clearly brought out in the observations of Coleridge. J., in R. v. Williams Sarah, 7 C & P 338 and in R. v. Lynch, 6 Cox CC 445. This malicious intent on the part of a servant to deprive his and cannot be regarded as a trustee under Section 405. The essence of the offence under Section 405 is the dishonest conversion of the property entrusted, but the act of cheating itself involves a conversion. Conversion signifies the depriving of the owner of the use and possession of his property. When the cheat afterwards sells or consumes or otherwise uses the fruit of his cheating he is not committing an act of conversion, for the conversion is already done, but he is furnishing evidence of the fraud he practised to get hold of the property. Therefore cheating is a complete offence by itself. 162 Ind Cas 592 : 37 Cr LJ 637 : 1936 Cr C 637 : 43 LW 548 : 1936 MWN 281 : AIR 1936 Mad 353 : 70 MLJ 635 (FB) in the same case Lakshman Row, J., observed : "More offences than one were committed, viz., obtaining delivery of property by cheating under Section 420, I.P. Code, and criminal breach of trust under Section 406, I.P. Code, and as stressed by the Crown Prosecutor, acts constituting the offence of obtaining property by cheating cannot by themselves constitute the offence of criminal breach of trust. The ingredients of the offences are different and so is the evidence requisite to establish them. There can be a breach of trust independently of cheating and the offences are distinct and separate. The offence under Section 420 is complete as soon as delivery is obtained by cheating, and without further act of misappropriation there can be no breach of trust." See also 159 Ind Cas 656 : 1935 MWN 914 : 42 LW 923 : 1935 Cr C 1314 : 69 MLJ 681. The offence of criminal breach of trust may be broadly defined as the fraudulent appropriation of another's property by a person to whom it has been entrusted or into whose hands it has lawfully come. It is akin to cheating, theft and criminal misappropriation but differs from them in important respects. In criminal breach of trust the property is lawfully acquired or acquired with the consent of the owner, but dishonestly misappropriated by the person to whom it is entrusted. In cheating the property is wrongfully acquired in the first instance by means of a false representation. In theft the property is taken without the consent of the owner and the dishonest intention to take property exists at the time of such taking. In criminal misappropriation the property is innocently acquired, often equally by chance, but by a subsequent change of intentions and the retaining becomes wrongful and fraudulent. The expression "entrusted" has a corresponding meaning and embraces all cases in which goods are entrusted. AIR 1951 Punj 103 : 54 PLR 18. To constitute a breach of trust the property must in the first instance have come into the hands of the accused in a lawful manner or with the consent of the owner. (1977) 4 Cr LJ 244. Criminal intention is necessary in cheating at the time of entrustment. 1978 Cr LJ (NOC) 33. Proof of entrustment is sufficient in criminal breach of trust but in cheating the dishonest or the fraudulent intention must be shown to be present from the very inception. 1970 Pat LJR 600.

10. Dishonestly.—The word "dishonestly" means the doing of an act with the intention of causing wrongful loss or wrongful gain, and wrongful gain is gain by unlawful means of property to which the person gaining is not legally entitled. For either in wrongful loss or gain, the property must be lost to the owner or the owner must be wrongfully loss or gain, the property must be lost to the owner or the owner must be wrongfully kept out of it. 1 Weir 416 : 3 MHC App 6. 8. Actual abandonment or destruction.—If an article is abandoned it becomes res nullius, and there can be no theft or breach of trust. But a very clear distinction is to be drawn between an intention to destroy and to abandon and an actual destruction and abandonment. The very fact that the owner of the property intends to destroy or abandon that property and hands it over to some person to effect those purposes is a clear indication that he still maintains his right as owner of that property and those right subsist until the abandonment or destruction is completed. As long as the destruction or abandonment is not fulfilled and so long as it is still in the hands of the owner to countermand such destruction or abandonment the property is still the property of the owner and taking it out of his possession is theft and improper use of it is breach of trust. 9. Sections 405 and 415.—Property obtained by cheating cannot be capable of being fraudulently converted under Section 405, I.P. Code. The notion of a trust is that there is a person trustee or entrustee, in whom confidence is reposed by another who commits property to him ; this again supposes that the confidence is freely given. A person who obtains property by a trick from another bears no resemblance to a trustee

Accused persons at the point of dagger attempted to loot informant. All the witnesses, who were present and chased and caught hold of the accused have identified them that he was caught red handed while he was committing road robbery and seeing the police he attempted to run away along with his co-accused, but he was arrested on the spot and as such his conviction under Sections 393 and 397 of the Indian Penal Code is well founded and requires no interference by this Court. Rabindra Chaurasia vs. State of Jharkhand, 2010 (3) CriLJ 3349 (Jhar).

Attempt to murder and dacoity.—On perusal of the statement of the complainant though he had not stated anything against the co-accused but by his statement for the involvement of the appellant/accused is found to be proved that he is the person who armed with a country-made pistol tried to cause injury to the complainant and also commit robbery by forcibly taken away the motor-cycle belonging to him. Moreover, the prosecution as discussed herein above also proved the seizure of the looted property, the motor-cycle from the possession of the appellant/accused and in such circumstances offence punishable under Section 307 of IPC and 394 read with 397 of the IPC is fully proved by the prosecution against the appellant.

In such circumstances, for the offence of robbery, the minimum sentence provided with the aid of Section 397 of IPC is of seven years and no grounds are available for any reduction of the aforesaid sentence. Hariballabh K. Rawat vs. State of M.P., 2010 (2) CrLJ 2309 (Gwalior).

It would not be necessary for the witness to further state as to what was the size of the knife to attract the provisions of Section 397, Penal Code. (1988) 34 DLT 1 (Del).

The informant in his examination in-chief of his statement in the trial Court has frankly and candidly stated that since he was in a state of tension and was concerned with his life and safely, he could not visualise as to who was pointing out the knife and kukri, towards him. On the face of this, evidence, it cannot be said that the prosecution has proved that the respondent used a deadly weapon during the robbery and consequently, he cannot be convicted under Section 397, IPC. State of Maharashtra v. Mahipal Singh, 1996 Cri LJ 2485 (Bom).

2. Uses.—The word "uses" in this section must be construed in a wide sense, so as to include not merely cutting, stabbing, shooting (as the case may be) but also carrying the weapon for the purpose of overawing the person robbed. 6 LBR 41 : 13 Cr LJ 267 : see also 35 PLR 555 : 1934 Cr C 838 : AIR 1934 Lah 522 ; AIR 1931 All 367 : 32 Cr LJ 567 : AIR 1933 Lah 35 : 34 Cr LJ 45 ; AIR 1932 Oudh 103 : AIR 1029 Sind 150 ; 1961 Ker LJ 548 : AIR 1956 Bom 353 : 1956 Cr LJ 700. The difference in the wording of the section and wording of Section 398, is noted. AIR 1975 SC 905 : 1975 Cr LJ 775 which weapon will come within the section. AIR 1980 SC 2127 : 1980 Cr LJ 1977 ; (1984) 1 Crimes 216.

What is essential to satisfy the word "uses" for the propound and Section 397, IPC is the robbery being committed by an offender who was armed with a deadly weapon which was within the vision of the victim so as to by capable of creating a terror in the mind of the victim and not that it should be further shown to have been actually used for cutting, stabbing, shooting, as the case may be. Ashfaq v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (2004) 1 Crimes 117 (SC) : (2004) 3 SCC 116 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 687 : AIR 2004 SC 1253 : 2004 CR LJ 936.

Toy pistol is not a deadly weapon whether its impact be on the frightened victim. Babulal Jairam Maurya v. State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cri LJ 281 (Bom).

Pistol used in robbery not fired.—In the cases of Manik Shankarrao Dhotre and Ors. vs. State of Maharashtra, 2008 Cri LJ 1505 = 2008 (2) AIR Bom R 302 and Shravan Dashrath Datrange vs. State of Maharashtra, 1998 Cri LJ 1196, are cited for proposition that Section 397 is individual offence; whereas Section 394 is both individual and vicarious. The sentence for offence under Section 397 of the IPC cannot be awarded to those of the members of the group of dacoits who did not use any deadly weapon. A plain reading of Section 397 of the IPC would make it clear that such guilt can be attributed only to that offender who uses any deadly weapon or causes grievous hurt to any person during course of the commission of the robbery.

In this case though revolver/pistol was not fired or other weapon was not used for causing hurt, but threats with revolvers/pistols were given. It has come in evidence that all the accused were armed and threats were given by them to various witnesses as discussed earlier. Pawan Kumar Sibban Kewat vs. State of Maharashtra, 2010 (2) CrLJ 1973 (Bom) (Aurangabad).

Whether possession of knife or seeing it in hands of some of culprits would not be sufficient to attract provisions of Section 397, IPC. The offender must have used a deadly weapon. The word used may also include showing of blades of knife in a menacing way so as to give threat or cause fear in mind of victim. Rajkumar Bhikram Dhobi v. State of Maharashtra, (1994) 2 Crimes 467 (Bom).

Robbery by using deadly weapons. The sentence for offence u/S 397 of the IPC cannot be awarded to those of the members of the group of dacoits who did not use any deadly weapon. A plain reading of Section 397 of the IPC would make it clear that such guilt can be attributed only to that offender who uses any deadly weapon or causes grievous hurt to any person during course of the commission of the robbery. The provision postulates that only the individual act of accused will be relevant to attract Section 397 of the IPC. In other words, the provision inevitably negates the use of the principles of constructive or vicarious liability engrafted under Section 34 of the IPC. In the present case complainant did not pin point who amongst the applicants assaulted him by means of a sword-stick. Consequently, the conviction of the applicants for offence u/S. 397 of the IPC is not legal and proper. The dangerous weapons i.e. the sword, kukri and sword-stick were found in the Maruti van used by accused persons. The possession thereof could not be attributed to any individual accused. Under these circumstances, the conviction of the accused for offence u/S 4 read with Section 35 of the Indian Arms Act is also improper and illegal. The only order of conviction and sentence which will have to be upheld is, therefore, one u/S 395 of the IPC. Manik Shankarrao Dhotre and Ors. v. State of Maharashtra, 2008 CriLJ 1505 (Bom)

Sec. 397 negates use of principles of vicarious liability under Sec. 34.—The sentence for offence u/S 397 of the IPC cannot be awarded to those of the members of the group of dacoits who did not use any deadly weapon. A plain reading of Section 397 of the IPC would make it clear that such guilt can be attributed only to that offender who uses any deadly weapon or causes grievous hurt to any person during course of the commission of the robbery. The provision postulates that only the individual act of accused will be relevant to attract Section 397 of the IPC In other words, the provision inevitably negates the use of the principles of constructive or vicarious liability engrafted under Section 34 of the IPC In the present case complainant did not pin point who amongst the applicants assaulted him by means of a sword-stick. Consequently, the conviction of the applicants for offence u/S. 397 of the IPC is not legal and proper. The dangerous weapons i.e. the sword, kukri and sword-stick were found in the Maruti van used by accused persons. The possession thereof could not be attributed to any individual accused. Under these circumstances, the conviction of the accused for offence u/S 4 read with Section 35 of the Indian Arms Act is also improper and illegal. The only order of conviction and sentence which will have to be upheld is, therefore, one u/S 395 of the IPC Manik Shankarrao Dhotre and Ors. v. State of Maharashtra, 2008 CriLJ 1505 (Bombay).

4. Permissibility of conviction with assistance of Section 34.—The provisions postulates only the individual act of the accused to be relevant to attract Section 397. IPC and thereby inevitably negates the use of the principle of constructive or vicarious liability engrafted in Section 34. Ashfar v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (2004) 1 Crimes 117 (SC) : (2004) 3 SCC 116 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 687 : AIR 2004 SC 1253 : 2004 CR LJ 936.

5. Such offender.—The words "such offender" in this section mean any offender who uses a deadly weapon and no other. 3 LBR 121 : 3 Cr LJ 954 ; 62 Ind Cas 865 : 72 Ind Cas 517 ; 51 Cal 266 ; 7 Mys LJ 169 : 81 Ind Cas 800 : 52 Bom 168.

6. Joint-liability.—Section 397 does not provide for joint liability as in Section 149 does. AIR 1935 All 132 ; but see AIR 1933 Lah 104 : 68 Ind Cas 817.

The liability under Section 397 IPC is individual and not constructive. Shravan Dashrath Datrange v. State of Maharashtra, 1997 (2) Crimes 47 (Bom).

7. Sentence.—Under Section 397, a lesser sentence must be enhanced to seven years' rigorous imprisonment. 29 Cr LJ 35 : 9 PLT 572 : 106 Ind Cas 451. The highest punishment under Section 397, can be inflicted only on the offender who actually uses a deadly weapon. 13 Bur LT 148 : 22 Cr LJ 593 : 10 LBR 269 : 62 Ind Cas 865 ; see also AIR 1933 Nag 252 : 1933 Cr C 936. Section 34 has no application to provisions of Section 397. 130 Ind Cas 267 : 1931 Cr C 145 : 33 Cr LJ 476 : AIR 1931 Pat 49. The use of a deadly weapon by one of the offenders at the time of committing robbery cannot attract Section 397, for imposition of minimum sentence on another offender who had not used any deadly weapon. Appellant committed robbery causing grievous hurt to PW 1. Hence, there is no hesitation in confirming conviction. But considering age of appellant the Rigorous Imprisonment is reduced. Mahendranath Parida v. State, (1995) 1 CCR 777 (Ori).

Death sentence—Rarest of rare cases. The murders were not only cruel, brutal but were diabolic. The High Court has held that those who were guilty of rape and murder deserve death sentence, while those who were convicted for murder only were to be awarded life sentence. The High Court noted that the whole incident is extremely revolting, it shocks the collective conscience of the community and the aggravating circumstances have outweighed the mitigating circumstances in the case of accused persons; but held that in the case of others it was to be altered to life sentence. The High Court itself noticed that five members of a family were brutally murdered, they were not known to the accused and there was no animosity towards them. Four of the witnesses were of tender age, they were defenseless and the attack was without any provocation. Some of them were so young that they could not resist any attack by the accused. A minor girl of about fifteen years was dragged in the open field, gang raped and done to death. There can be no doubt that the case at hand falls under the rarest of rare category. There was no reason to adopt a different yardstick. In fact, main accused assaulted witness and took the money from the deceased.

Above being the position, the appeal filed by the accused persons deserves dismissal, which we direct and the State's appeal deserves to be allowed. Accused are also awarded death sentence. In essence all the six accused persons deserve death sentence. Ankush Maruti Shinde vs. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2009 SC 2609 : 2009 (6) SCC 667 : 2009 (6) JT 358 : 2009 (7) SCR 182 : 2009 (6) Scale 388 : 2009 (3) Supreme 760 : 2009 (4) SLT 470.

The High Court held that since he was acquitted in the said case the arrest of Ilyas becomes doubtful and the defence version that he was not arrested as stated by the prosecution but was arrested from his house is believable. It was, therefore, concluded that the accused was shown to the witnesses. It was also pointed out that Section 397 is not a substantive offence and the accused could not have been convicted under Section 397 only but could have been convicted under Section 394 read with Section 397. As the conviction has been recorded under Section 397 and the use of the weapons was not fully established, the respondent is entitled to acquittal.

The conclusions arrived at by the High Court are absolutely sketchy. It came to abrupt conclusion that the accused must have been shown to the witnesses. There is no foundation to such a plea. First Information Report was lodged under Section 394 IPC and charge was accordingly framed. Because of the use of deadly weapon, the trial Court convicted the accused under Section 397 IPC. The trial Court have altered the charge, but that was not done. The High Court could have altered the conviction and imposed adequate sentence. There was no prejudice involved.

Since the High Court's reasonings were perverse the impugned judgment is set aside. However, the respondent is convicted for offence punishable under Section 394 IPC for which he was originally charged. He is sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for 5 years. He shall surrender to custody forthwith to serve the remainder of sentence. The appeal is allowed to the aforesaid extent. State of Uttar Pradesh vs. Ilyas, AIR 2009 SC 1145 : 2009 (1) SCC 365 : 2008 (13) JT 197 : 2008 (15) SCR 142 : 2008 (15) Scale 142 : 2008 (9) SLT 717.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

10. Conviction.—Dacoity with attempt to cause death was the charge but n evidence showed that room where Test Identification Parade was held was totall secluded from police station and it could be said that the police had not obliterate themselves from identification parade. The complainant's evidence, that accuse entered his shop and showing them arms like chopper and revolver had looted them was very much insufficient to inspire confidence and was discarded. The accused entered the field of informant causing injuries to persons present there and committed robbery of harvested crops. 11. Acquittal.—Evidence of one prosecution-witness implicating' appellant besides others not corroborated by other prosecution-witness who had not seen appellant alongwith dacoits. There were inconsistency in evidence—Not safe to rely on evidence implicating appellant and no dependable evidence to connect him in commission of crime—Conviction was held to be not sustainable. Ratkanta Paramanik v. State, (1994) 3 Crimes 372 (Ori).

13. Circumstantial evidence.—When two accused persons are proved to have committed robbery and murder in one and same transaction and subsequently stolen properties were recovered from them, both robbery and murder is presumed to have been committed by both accused persons and hence their conviction is proper. Mukund @ Kundu Mishra v. State of M.P., 1997 (4) Supreme 359.

We would take up the first circumstance. The witness Alwarsamy (PW-4), in his evidence, very clearly admitted that he was not on the talking terms with Thilagavalli, who was none else, but his own sister. At the time when he saw the accused, he (Alwarsamy) was accompanying his real elder brother, namely Ramasubbu. The prosecution did not bother to examine Ramasubbu, though his statement was also recorded. It has come in the cross-examination of this witness that he attended the funeral, though he was on cross terms with the family of the deceased and during the whole funeral, the accused was actually present.

What surprises us is that in spite of this, this witness did not say anything either to the husband of Thilagavalli or even to the Police and his statement was not recorded for good long three days. Now, if the witness had seen the accused following Thilagavalli and he also knew about the violent death of Thilagavalli, and had seen the accused at the funeral, one wonders as to why the witness kept quiet without telling it to anybody. As if this is not sufficient, the Investigating Officer was specifically asked the question as to why these witnesses were not examined by him. The Investigating Officer has admitted that he could not give any reason for not examining any of these witnesses on the same day. He also claimed that the Investigating agency had suspected the accused only after the examination of Alwarsamy and Ramasubbu. It is an admitted position that the statement of these witnesses were not recorded. It was obvious, therefore, that the delay in recording the statement of these witnesses and the stony silence maintained by Alwarsamy would make him an extremely unreliable witness. In our opinion, the Trial, as well as, the Appellate Court have not given the due weight to this weighty circumstance. The Appellate Court has almost apologetically observed that the prosecution would have done better by examining Alwarsamy without any waste of time. However, the Appellate Court chose to accept his evidence. Unfortunately, the Appellate Court has not even applied its mind to the circumstance that according to this witness, the accused was present in the funeral. That crucial circumstance seems to have been escaped the notice of the Appellate Court. Ordinarily, we would not discuss the evidence in our appellate jurisdiction, however, when it is found that the crucial circumstances have escaped the notice of the Appellate Court and/or the Trial Court, this Court would consider the evidence lest any injustice is caused. In our opinion, the evidence of Alwarsamy should not have been believed. This takes care of the first circumstance.

When we see the Inquest Panchanama it is apparent that there was one ear stud on the body of the deceased. Therefore, this gives a shattering blow, firstly to the evidence of Subbiah and secondly, to the credibility of the investigating agency. As if this is not sufficient, when the accused was arrested about 12 days after the incident he is said to have confessed that he had sold "one" ear stud in the shop of Shankar. When we see the evidence of Shankar it comes out that the witness said that the accused had come to sell an ear stud, but he had refused to buy, as it was only one piece of ear stud out of the pair that accused had offered to sell. He, therefore, says that he gave one pair of ear stud to the investigating agency, which pair ultimately has come up before the Court as Material Object.

This slip-shod evidence, therefore, is very hopelessly insufficient in establishing the fact that the so-called ornaments belonged to and were on the person of Thilagavalli. We do not know what was the public prosecutor doing at the time of the examination-in-chief and why he did not confront the witness on these ornaments. We do not know as to how the Trial Court permitted these questions in re-examination. The purpose of the re- examination is only to get the clarifications of some doubts created in the cross examination. One cannot supplement the examination-in-chief by way of a re-examination and for the first time, start introducing totally new facts, which have no concern with the cross examination. The Trial Court has obviously faulted in allowing such a re-examination. Be that as it may, even if we accept that the Trial Court was justified in allowing the re-examination, the evidentiary value of the contents of the re-examination, in our firm opinion, is nil.

As regards the fourth circumstance, we think that it was for prosecution to explain the fracture suffered by the deceased. Even otherwise that circumstance is extremely insignificant.

It has also come in evidence that the accused was a known person to his family members. One wonders as to why would the accused whom the deceased knew would venture to rob her. Motive of robbery does not seem to be present in the present case. The absence of motive in a case which depended on circumstantial evidence is more favourable to the defence.

The jacket on the person of the accused was said to have had human blood. In our opinion, this circumstance is insignificant, particularly because the blood group is not tested upon and secondly, it is actually absurd thing that the accused would keep on wearing the same blood stained clothes for 12 days. In short, we are of the clear opinion that both the Courts below have erred in convicting the accused of the offences under Secs. 302 and 392 read with Sec. 397 of IPC. Pannayar vs State of Tamil Nadu by Inspector of Police., 2009 AIR SCW 5608 : 2009 CrLJ 4454 (SC) : AIR 2010 SC 85.

Independent witness. The accused were amongst others accused, who committed dacoity at the residence of Lallukhan and looted property from his house. The prosecution witnesses identified the accused appellants came at the residence of Lallukhan and committed dacoity. Witnesses stated that Liyakat snatched wrist watch and Rs. 2,500/- from him. Wrist watch recovered from Liyakat was identified by Lallukhan belonging to him. From the bare perusal of the statements of the prosecution witnesses mentioned above, it is clear that the prosecution has been able to prove the case against the accused appellants beyond reasonable doubt for the offences charged against them. Accused Liyakat was arrested and on the basis of information given by him under Section 27 of the Evidence Act wrist watch was recovered from him Lallukhan proved and identified that the wrist watch recovered from Liyakat belonged to him. The arrest memo and recovery memo were proved by the independent witness.

The prosecution has been able to prove case beyond reasonable doubt against the accused for the offences under Sections 3 and 25 of the Arms Act. and they have been rightly convicted and sentenced under Section 3/25 of the Arms Act. I am in agreement with the findings recorded by the trial Court for the offences under Sections 395, 397, IPC against the accused and for Sections 3 and 25 Arms Act against the accused appellant. Ramzan and Anr. vs. State of Rajasthan, 2010 (3) CrLJ 2607 (Raj).

Eye witness—Circumstantial evidence. Accused murdered deceased and committed robbery her gold ornaments. Eye witness who saw violent death of deceased, kept quite about incident. Delay in recording his statement. We would take up the first circumstance. The witness Alwarsamy (PW-4), in his evidence, very clearly admitted that he was not on the talking terms with Thilagavalli, who was none else, but his own sister. At the time when he saw the accused, he (Alwarsamy) was accompanying his real elder brother, namely Ramasubbu. The prosecution did not bother to examine Ramasubbu, though his statement was also recorded. It has come in the cross-examination of this witness that he attended the funeral, though he was on cross terms with the family of the deceased and during the whole funeral, the accused was actually present.

Sole testimony of injured witness. In the present case complainant was driving a car when the incident took place. He was near red light. It is not the plea of the appellants that there was no sufficient light for injured complainant to see the accused persons. The road on which the incident took place is one of the main roads of city and is a well lit road. The victim had sufficient and good opportunity to see the accused persons since, one accused came to the window of the driver seat, opened the door and asked him to move aside, the other accused entered from the left and he was sandwiched between the two accused persons. The three accused on back seat of the car were holding knives and his briefcase, containing cash and other papers. The victim was being pointed and threatened with knives. His wrist watch and money was removed by the accused. He saw three accused taking his briefcase and sitting on the rear seat. Complainant had begged for his life from the accused persons. The incident was not committed in a lightening manner and the complainant had received injuries and got good time to see the accused persons. If a witness had sufficient time to see assailants and even has with the assailants and got injured at the hands of the assailants, who had come to rob him, the faces of the assailants gets engraved in the memory of the victim due to the gravity of incident and injuries he gets at the hands of the accused persons and it is not easy for him to forget those who put his life in danger, caused injuries to him and robbed him. There is nothing unnatural if a victim identifies his tormentors or the robbers at a later stage during trial. Such an identification cannot be doubted because the person who is identifying has suffered at the hands of the appellants. Here the complainant was truthful and the person whom he had not seen during the incident was not identified by him in the Court, despite police having made him the accused and only those five were identified by him who were actually involved and had robbed him at knives points. Conviction of accused persons on sole testimony of complainant, proper. Vinod Kumar and Ors. v. State, 2007 CriLJ 2861 (Del).

14. Injuries.—Accused attacked deceased and injured with chopper and removed ornaments from body of deceased. The ferocious attacks on the victims, the number of injuries inflicted and the manner in which it was inflicted and the gravity of those injuries would clearly reveal the intention or motive of the accused. At any rate his acts cannot escape falling either under Clause 3 or Clause 4 of Section 300 IPC. The Court below is, therefore, perfectly justified in holding him guilty of offence punishable under Section 302 IPC. Rijo vs. State of Kerala, 2010 (2) CriLJ 1315 (Ker).

Further, though complainant P.S.I. has stated in his evidence that he secured the presence of panchas at the scene of offence itself and seized from the possession of accused panchas knives, the said panchas have not been examined to prove the seizure of knives under the panchanama have not stated anything about the Police apprehending the accused at the scene of offence itself and seizing from the person of accused, the two knives. Though it is alleged that the said four persons were holding knives and clubs also, no club is said to have been seized from any of the accused. Besides this, no evidence whatsoever is placed on record by the prosecution to establish that knives said to have been seized from the person of accused were deadly weapons so as to attract the penal provisions of Section 398 IPC. Arun Anthony Swamy vs. State of Karnataka. 2010 (2) CrLJ 1948 (Karn).

1. Scope.—In order to commit the offence of preparation, it is not necessary that the prisoners should have done an overt act towards the commission of the dacoity. What the law contemplates is that they should have done some act to get ready for a dacoity, and the collection of men from different villages, coupled with the collection of arms, sufficiently proves the required preparation. The mere assemblage to commit dacoity does not amount to preparation, but when it is found, that the members of the gang had taken into their possession instruments breaking and arms for the offensive and defensive purposes and they actually proceeded to a place near the scene of contemplated dacoity, and offence under this section has been contemplated. 6 PR 1916 Cr : 34 Ind Cas 100 ; 4 DLR (Simla) 154 : AIR 1949 East Punj 340. In order to constitute the offence of preparation to commit dacoity some act amounting to preparation must be proved. Apart from this, it should also be proved that the act for which preparation was made was dacoity. Under Section 402 assembly of five or more is needed to establish a charge of dacoity but in instant case only three accused persons were arrested by the police while they were attempting to commit the dacoity. It was held that accused could not be convicted under Section 399/402. Asgar v. State, 2003 Cr LJ 1997 (Raj) : 2003(2) Cur Cri R 384 : 2003(1) Raj LR 564 : 2003(2) Raj LW 1209. The offences of commission of dacoity, preparation for it and assemblage for the same purpose, have this in common, that they presume an intention or agreement to commit dacoity by five or more persons. A mere assembly without further preparation is not a preparation within the meaning of this section, for if it were Section 402, would be redundant. 41 Cal 350 : 18 CWN 498 ; see also 71 Ind Cas 360 ; 81 Ind Cas 168 : 22 ALJ 1028. The present section is one of the few exceptions to the general rule. (1980) 49 Cut LT 222. The conspiracy is to be proved first, thereafter, any step taken with the intention and for the purpose of forwarding that design will be a preparation punishable under this section. 1982 Cr LJ 449 : (1982) 21 Del LT 26. Preparation in Section 399, devising or arranging means essential for the purpose of commission of the offence of dacoity in respect of which determination to commit the offence exists. AIR 1952 SC 1809 (any stage antecedent to such determination would not ordinarily amount to preparation).

There is manifestly a distinction between the offence under Sections 399 and 402. The offence under Section 402, is complete as soon as five or more persons assemble together for the purpose of committing a dacoity. Preparation for committing a dacoity may take place before or after the dacoits assemble. AIR 1960 Pat 582 : 1960 Cr LJ 1650. Section 399, is attracted when some additional step is taken in the course of preparation. AIR 1960 Punj 482 : 62 Punj LR 156 : 1960 Cr LJ 1234. No overt act, in addition to preparation need be proved for showing the purpose. 1960 All Cr 163 : 1960 ALJ 277. The circumstantial evidence was not in any manner consistent with innocence of the accused and it unambiguously showed that within all human probability they had embarked on the enterprise of dacoity. They had prepared themselves for the crime and had assembled for committing it. They were, therefore, guilty under Sections 399 and 404. AIR 1959 All 727 : 1959 All Cr R 312 : 1959 Cr LJ 1274 : AIR 1956 All 464 : 1956 Cr LJ 956 : 1956 All LJ 853. The presence of at least five persons taking part in robbery is an essential ingredient of dacoity and indeed, is the one ingredient which distinguishes it from simple robbery. It is clear that in Sections 365 and 396, Indian Penal Code, and in offences under Sections 397 and 398, where the charge is that the accused has actually taken part in a dacoity, this ingredient of at least four other persons having the common intention must be present before there can be a conviction. In Section 402, which makes punishable the act of assembling for the purpose of a dacoity, the section itself makes it clear that the above ingredient must be present. What is punishable under Section 399, is the making of any preparation for the committing of any dacoity. AIR 1958 25 : 61 CWN 856 : ILR (1958) 1 Cal 447 : 1958 Cr LJ 25 ; AIR 1954 Kutch 1 : 1954 Cr LJ 366.

Mere assemblage for the purpose of commission of the dacoity is a distinct offence punishable under Section 402, of the Penal Code. Hence, such assemblage cannot be deemed to be preparation for the commission of a dacoity punishable under Section 399, of the Penal Code. AIR 1951 All 452. The natural inference from the fact that the accused were found assembled in the dark night inside a grove, some furlongs away from the village abadi, and far from their own homes, with two guns and a pistol and a lot of cartridges would be that they assembled there for the purpose of the commission of a dacoity. 1951 ALJ 466. In a case under Section 399, it is not necessary for the prosecution to prove that the intention of the accused was to commit dacoity in the house of a particular person of a particular village. AIR 1960 Pat 582 : 1960 Cr LJ 1650. Similarly it is not necessary to prove causing of actual injury (AIR 1960 Punj 482 : 1960 Cr LJ 1234) or recovery of home breaking implements. (AIR 1959 All 727 : 1959 All Cr R 312 : 1959 Cr LJ 1274. On facts it was held that accused had assembled together for the purpose of committing dacoity but in the absence of any evidence about preparation for committing the dacoity, the accused can safely be found to be guilty under Section 402, and not under Section 399. AIR 1973 SC 488.

It must be proved that there were persons who had conceived the design of committing dacoity. The accused were convicted for having assembled in the orchard for the purpose of committing dacoity in the village. The police party raided the place on information furnished by an informant and arrested the accused. It was observed that prosecution failed to prove that appellants along with other companions had assembled at that lonely orchard for purpose of committing dacoity and not for any other purpose. Mere possession of fire-arms could not be sufficient to prove that they intended to commit dacoity and not any other crime. Held, that opposition failed to prove charge under Section 399, or under Section 402, against appellants. 1987 Cri LJ 1391 (Pat). punishable under Section 406. In order to bring the case within purview of Sections 399 and 402, it is incumbent upon prosecution to prove beyond reasonable doubt that accused persons were making preparation for committing dacoity and that they assembled there for. Further under Section 402, IPC, the number of dacoits should be five or more. Chhotey v. State, 1995 (32) ACC 125 (All).

On apprehending the accused and their personal search revealed recovery of deadly weapon. Hence, all the ingredients of Section 399, IPC, is made out. Hence, no infirmity in order. Dalip Kumar v. State, (1995) 1 East Cr C 38 (Del).

2. Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoun-dable—Triable by Court of Session.

3. Charge.—"I, (name and office of the Sessions Judge, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused), as follows :—

That on or about the..........day of..........at...........you made preparation by...... (specify the act) for committing dacoity and thereby committed an act punishable under Section 399, of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

4. Acquittal.—The very commencement of prosecution story appears unnatural and improbable. Further police avoided presence of public witnesses the story of actual arrest was also not trustworthy. In the circumstances conviction and sentences are set aside and appellant acquitted. Ram Lal v. State. 1994 (31) ACC 699 (All).

There was not an iota of evidence to suggest that accused were devising or arranging means or measures necessary for commission of an offence of dacoity. It was also not established that they had assembled at the place for committing dacoity. In view of this and going through at the time of reasoning adopted by trial court cannot escape the conclusion that conviction under Sections 399 and 401, IPC, deserved to be quashed and accordingly quashed. Khyali v. State of M.P., 1994 Cr LR (MP) 45.

When raid was undertaken on secret information that dacoits will be committing dacoity and—Two public witnesses associated with the raid—One not produced in evidence—Other also not inspiring confidence. Interference warranted in the order of acquittal. State (Delhi Administration) v. Prem Chand. (1994) 53 DLT 778.

Conviction of the accuseds—Appeal against the same was filed—Prosecution version brought with improbabilities and impossibilities—Conviction held to be not sustainable. Maqbool Ahmad v. State of U.P., 1995 JIC 44 (Alld).

The prosecution story was not based on truth. The trial court has not properly scanned the evidence on record nor has evaluated the circumstances available on record. Hence, order set aside. Raghubir v. State of U.P., 1995 JIC 210 (All).

The accused persons alleged to have made preparations for commission of dacoity. The evidence showed that they were possessing arms but they had not used them. In addition to this, not a single penny was recovered from their possession and there was no public witness in support of prosecution case. It was held that accused persons were entitled to the acquittal. Amar Singh v. State, 2003 Cr LJ 1321 (All) : 2003 All LJ 516 : 2003 (46) All Cri C 316 : 2003 (1) All Cri R 256.

In a Bombay case where the accused allegedly made and assembled. The accused armed with deadly weapons for committing the dacoity. It was held that possession of chopper or knife, dagger or a spear by itself was not sufficient to show that persons possessing such weapons are members of gang of dacoits and had assembled for committing the dacoity. Possession of such day to day use weapons is customary for villagers. In the absence of some natural, credible and specific evidence trial judge had landed in error of passing the order of conviction which was set aside. Sadashiv v. State, 2003 Cr LJ 3661 (Bom) : 2003 ( ) All MR (Cri) 1717 : 2003(4) Bom LR 292.

The accused was charged under Section 399 for making preparation to commit dacoity after police conducted raid on receiving secret information. Trump witness of prosecution stated that one of appellants instructed his associates after boarding down from vehicle that they were to be well prepared with their weapons and as soon as cashier was to come from bank he was to be looted. No other evidence was available. It was held that conviction of appellant for said offence was not proper. Arun Vinayak Garkar v. State, 2004 Cr LJ 1053 (Bom) : 2003( ) All MR (Cri) 1481 : 2004 (Sup) Bom CR 103.

Non-joining of public witnesses in raiding party make the case of prosecution doubtful. Investigation regarding acts of senior officer should not be done by junior officer. Appellant acquitted. Ramjatan v. State, (1995) 3 CCR 737 (Alld) : 1995 JIC 669 (All).

5. Sentence.—When the incident was considerably old and convict being 80 years of age hence sentence was reduced to period already undergone—So far accused 6 is concerned, his conviction under Section 25 (1) (a), was confirmed. The occurrence is said to have taken place in 1976 and A-6 is aged about 80 years. Therefore his sentence of one year's R.I., is reduced to the period already undergone. Nasru v. State of U.P., 1994 SCC (Cri) 51 at p. 53 : 1994 Supp(2) SCC 493 : 1993(4) Scale 29 : 1993 Cr LR (SC) 731.

In a Jharkhand case, the conviction of the accused, who was awarded sentence for four years RI and had already been in custody for a period of 3 years, was reduced to the period already undergone. Ravi Rajwar v. State, 2003 Cr LJ 634 (Jhar) : AIR 2003 Jhar HCR 48 : 2002 (3) East Cri C 315.

1. Amendment.—The words in italics were substituted for the words "transportation for life" by Act 269, 1955, Section 117 and Sch. (with effect from 1.1.1956).

2. What constitutes offence.—In order to sustain a conviction under this section, evidence must be forthcoming that there was a gang of persons, that they were associated together and such association was for the purpose of habitually committing dacoity and robbery. 1 CWN 146 ; 27 Cal 139 : 4 CWN 97. The associating and purpose of association may be proved by direct evidence, viz. that the accused met, and determined to join together for the purpose of habitually committing dacoity. In the absence of direct evidence, the associating and purpose of association may be established by proof of fact from which they may be reasonably inferred. 32 Mad 179 : 83 Ind Cas 683. For an offence under this section something more than a casual association is necessary. The section involves the motion of continuity and indicates a more or less intimate connection with a body of persons extending over a period of time sufficiently long to warrant the inference that the person affected has identified himself with a band, the common purpose of which is the habitual commission of dacoity. 63 Ind Cas 455. The offence under Section 400, is entirely a creation of a statute and is intended to break up gangs mentioned therein by punishing also their associates who share their purpose. Section 400, appears to postulate the existence of a definite gang operating for a definite period and the object of the section would seem to be provide for the punishing of those proved to be members of such a gang against whom evidence is not forthcoming. ILR 1962 AP 96 : 1963 (2) Cr LJ 121 : AIR 1963 AP 314 ; see AIR 1966 AP 344 (the existence of an agreement and the preparation of the persons in the agreement can only be inferred from the circumstance of the case).

3. Scope.—To support a conviction under this section it is necessary to prove, (1) that a gang of dacoits existed, and (2) that the accused belonged to that gang. It is not sufficient to prove that the accused repeatedly gave shelter and assistance to the dacoits. 1 Bom LR 156 ; AWN 1886, 65 ; 18 PLR 1910 Cr : 6 Ind Cas 492 ; 23 WR Cr 18. There are many points which have to be considered in determining what is an adequate sentence to pass upon an accused convicted of an offence falling under Section 400, IPC. Among these may be noted the following ; (i) how long has the accused belonged to the gang ; (ii) what dacoities have been committed by the gang since the accused joint it ; (iii) in how many of these dacoities did the accused actually take part ; (iv) what are the character of the dacoities in which the accused actually took part. Whether they were accompanied with murder, culpable homicide, grievous hurt, torture, or with any acts of a specially brutal character, or were they only dacoities of ordinary character. LBR (1872-1892), 441. The term "belong" in this section implies something more than the idea of casual association it involves the action of confirmity and indicates more or less intimate connection with a body of persons extending over a period of time sufficiently long to warrant the inference that the person affected has identified himself with a band, the common purpose of which is the habitual commission of dacoity. 1930 Cr C 1079 : AIR 1930 Oudh 455 : 100 Ind Cas 440 : 19 Cr LJ 705 : 47 Cr LJ 471 ; 7 Ind Cas 1012 ; ILR 1962 Andh Pra 96 ; 1963 (2) Cr LJ 121 : AIR 1963 AP 314 ; AIR 1956 Ori 177 : 22 Cut LT 317 : ILR 1956 Cut 195 : 1956 Cr LJ 1203 (having evidence of previous conviction). 1953 MWN 933 (evidence of bad character admissible to prove relevant fact which cannot be proved habit alindu). It is not necessary for a conviction under this section that the person convicted must have taken part in any dacoity. Ibid. The evidence as to prior criminal proceedings against the accused which resulted in an acquittal cannot be relied on where the accused is again charged for the same offence but that same can be relied on where the latter proceeding relates to a totally different offence. 5 OWN 760 : 112 Ind Cas 337 : AIR 1928 Oudh 430. Evidence respecting commission of offence and proceedings under Section 110, Cr PC, are admissible. AIR 1925 Cal 872 : 52 Cal 525 : 26 Cr LJ 1037 : 42 CLJ 501 : 87 Ind Cas 925. Where the accused is charged under Section 400, IPC, evidence of previous conviction is admissible as evidence to prove habit and association. AIR 1930 Oudh 455 : 128 Ind Cas 739. The offence contemplated in this section is one of a very special character and entirely the creature of statute and should therefore be strictly construed. Association for the habitual pursuit of dacoity is the gist of the offence. Although the evidence need not show the same degree of particularly as to the commission of each dacoity as is required to support a substantive charge of that crime, it must be established, for the purpose of conviction under the section, that the accused belong to a gang whose business is the habitual commission of dacoity. The special conspiracy must be proved. 16 CWN 69 : see also 65 PLR 1911 : 17 Ind Cas 1006 ; 1 Bom LR 15 : 1 CWN 146 ; LBR (1872-1892), 441. The mere fact that some women are the mistresses of dacoits does not render them liable also as dacoits. Rat Un Cr C 863. A conviction can be under this section even when no actual commission of dacoity is proved. The element of the offence is association with the knowledge that it is formed for the purpose of committing dacoity habitually. Hence, where sentence is already passed for the offence of committing dacoity there is no bar to the passing of a sentence under this section. 27 OC 385 : 89 Ind Cas 836 : AIR 1925 Oudh 374 ; see also 23 ALJ 18 : 86 Ind Cas 282 : 52 Cal 595 : 42 Cr LJ 501 : 26 Cr LJ 123. The essence of the section is the agreement habitually to commit dacoity not the actual commission of dacoities. Existence of such an agreement and the participation of any person in that agreement may be inferred from the circumstances. 1928 Cal 309 : AIR 1921 All 32 : 19 ALJ 725 : 22 Cr LJ 663 : 63 Ind Cas 455.

The importance of the word "necessarily" in the section is to be borne. AIR 1956 Orissa 177 : 1956 Cut LT 317 and the section is intended to break up the gang mentioned there by punishing also their associates. AIR 1963 AP 314 : ILR 1962 AP 46 : 1963 (2) Cr LJ 121 (the offence is entirely a statutory one). A conviction under this section is considered bad in law merely because evidence on record would also justify conviction of a special offence under Section 395, IPC. AIR 1959 AP 387 : 1959 Cr LJ 987. For the meaning of "gang" referred to in this section see AIR 1963 AP 314 : ILR 1962 AP 46. It is not necessary that the accused should have taken part in any dacoity. 1972 Cr LJ 1074 (expression "associate" taken along with the words "habitually committing dacoity.").

4. Evidence and proof.—Proof that an article which is traced to the possession of an accused was stolen of a condition precedent for any presumption under Section 114. ILR 1961 AP 96 : 1963 (2) Cr LJ 121 : AIR 1963 AP 314.

In 1953 MWN 933 the following points were sought for, obtained and proved viz., (1) the existence of the gang for the purpose of committing dacoity during the time specified in the charges ; (ii) their association for that purpose ; (iii) relationship by blood or marriage or community or interest among them ; (iv) approver's evidence corroborated on material points ; (v) confession of co-accused recorded with all legitimate precaution and ensuring that it was a voluntary and truthful one ; (vi) evidence relating to the 14 specific cases of dacoity committed by the gang as well as other similar dacoities ; (vii) evidence of recoveries of properties stolen in these dacoities and found in possession of the accused ; (viii) simultaneous absence from their homes in batches or singly of members of this gang coincident with the occurrence of dacoities in the area operated upon ; (ix) decrease in the number of dacoities after the apprehension of the deceased ; (x) habitual commission of dacoities proved by the aggregate acts ; (xi) sameness in the modus operandi in regard to all these dacoities ; (xii) opinion of the Police officers in regard to this modus operandi ; (xiii) prompt complaints given by the victims in all these cases ; and (xiv) identification of the most of the accused at parades held with all precautions to ensure a fair and legitimate identification. Held, that the conviction under Section 400, was correct.

5. Sentence.—It is a serious offence and the maximum penalty should be added. AIR 1961 Pat 260 : ILR 38 Pat 1251.

6. Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compou-ndable—Triable by Court of Session.

7. Charge.—"I (name and office of Sessions Judge, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused), as follows :—

1. Scope.—To sustain a conviction on a charge under this section, there must be proof that association was for the purpose of habitual theft. The habit should be proved by an aggregate of acts. 9 PR 1880 Cr ; 1946 OWN 316 : 227 1C 204. It is not sufficient to prove that the accused is simply a member of a robber tribe ; it should also be shown that he actually conserted with persons who were themselves associated for the purpose of habitually committing theft or robbery. 37 PR 1869 Cr. There must be evidence that the accused were members of a gang associated for the purpose of habitually committing theft, before there should be conviction of an offence under this section. 4 CWN 97. Previous convictions under Section 110. Cr PC, are relevant. AIR 1930 Sind 211 : 126 Ind Cas 468. Previous conviction and proceedings under Section 110. Cr PC, are admissible for proving habit though not of general bad character. Such evidence is not excluded by Section 54, Evidence Act. AIR 1930 Sind 211 : 126 Ind Cas 468 : but see 31 Cr LJ 192 : 21 Cr LJ 386 : 47 Cal 154. But reports of existence of gang of cattle-lifter and frequence of thefts in particular area, made to police are inadmissible being hearsay. Ibid. Evidence of frequent commission of or complicity in theft or robberies is enough evidence for conviction. 31 CLJ 192 : 47 Cal 144 : 55 Ind Cas 994. Mere fact that accused was found to have received stolen property from gang is not sufficient to convict them under Section 401. Being number of gang associated for purpose of committing burglaries is different from actually taking part in them. Generally concurrent sentences should be given though consecutive sentences are illegal. AIR 1932 Lah 298 : Ind Cas 27 : 33 Cr LJ 251 : 33 PLR 602. It is not necessary for a conviction under this section that the person convicted must have taken part in any one theft or robbery. 118 Ind Cas 423 : 30 Cr LJ 922 : AIR 1929 Oudh 321. In determining to that extent in any particular case the punishment should approach to or recede from the maximum limit prescribed by the section, the trying Magistrate has to take into account several factors, inter alia the antecedents of the prisoner. whether such antecedents speak well or ill of him, such as his character and state of life whether good or bad including previous convictions, if any, 24 SLR 252 : AIR 1930 Sind 211. This section ought not to be resorted to when the persons sought to be brought within its four corners might have been made responsible, for distinct and individual offences : nor is it intended to affect them unless an association for the actual commission or theft of robbery is clearly made out. AWN 1816. 16 : see also AWN 1886. 15 : Rat Un Cr C 418 ; 5 CPLR Cr 24 : 33 PR 1886 ; 3 PR 1915 : 15 CWN 462 . 14 Bom LR 273 ; 10 Ind Cas 23 ; 36 PWR 1912 Cr : 1 Cr LJ 690 : 1 Weir 452. To sustain a conviction under this section it is necessary to prove : (1) there existed a gang of persons ; (2) that those persons were associated for the purpose of committing theft or robbery (3) that theft or robbery was committed habitually : (4) that the accused was a member of such a gang. 13 PR 1914 (Cr) ; 110 PLR 1916 ; 47 Cal 154 ; 1923 Lah 666 ; 73 Ind Cas 815 ; 26 Bom LR 1223. As regards value of approver's evidence to prove an offence under this section, vide 87 Ind Cas 846 : 26 Cr LJ 1024. The object of this section is to punish the persons who organise thieving expeditions and form a party to commit theft. 28 Cr LJ 179 : 28 PLR 19 : 99 Ind Cas 851. 'To belong" means to be one of the gang. AIR 1927 Lah 524 : 28 PLR 19 : 28 Cr LJ 179. The word 'belong' implies something more than casual association. It involves the notion of continuity and the proof of a more or less intimate connection with a body of persons extending over a period of time sufficiently long to warrant the inference that the person affected had identified himself with the gang the common purpose of which was the habitual commission of either theft or robbery. AIR 1960 Guj 5 : 1960 CR LJ 1204 ; (1960) 1 Guj LR 34 ; (1978) 38 Cut LT 683 ; 1974 Mad LJ (Cr) 203. It is not necessary that the members of the gang should be members right from the very begining. Ibid. The word "belong" something more than the casual association. 1980 Mad LJ (Cr) 793 ; 1981 Cr LJ (NOC) 36.

2. Evidence.—In the absence of direct evidence, in a prosecution under this section, the purpose of association may be established by proof of acts from which this may be reasonably inferred. So the prevalence of theft in certain areas and the rise and fall coinciding with action taken against members of the supposed gang are as much relevant circumstances as are the conviction obtained against certain members. ILR 1937 Nag 315 : 166 Ind Cas 582, 527 : 38 Cr LJ 237, 251 : AIR 1937 Nag 27 (FB). The evidence of previous convictions of dacoity and order under Section 110, Cr PC, are admissible for the purpose of proving habit and association in a subsequent trial under this section. Ibid. Where several persons are being tried under Section 401, of being members of a large gang, the evidence that a big gang was in existence and was committing acts of depredation on the community all over India, Burma and Ceylon and that some of the accused, who are residents of a particular village, were found associated together in crime characteristic of the gang in distant parts of India, is sufficient to justify a Judge even on ; very little proof of actual association of particular accused, in leaving it to the jury to decide whether the particular accused is a member of the gang. AIR 1938 Mad 858 : 1938 MWN 595 : 1938 M Cr C 145. Where several persons are being tried under Section 401, for being members of a gang the evidence of association before the period of charge is admissible to corroborate the evidence of association during that period. Ibid. Where several persons are being tried under Section 401, for being members of a gang, proof of their association outside British India for the purpose of committing crime is not barred under Section 188, Criminal Procedure Code, read with Section 401, Penal Code, as the Court is not concerned with the trial of a person for an offence committed outside British India, but with the fact that the accused committed offence outside British India, which affords evidence that the accused associated together for the purpose of committing crime. Ibid. Habit is a fact in issue to the proved for the purpose of establishment of the ingredient of the offence under this section. (1972) 38 Cut LJ 683.

3. Two serious cases.—Where two serious cases are started against persons accused under Section 401, of being members of gang, it is not only permissible to confine the two trials but it is also convenient and proper when all the accused are members of one gang. AIR 1938 Mad 858 : 1938 MWN 595 : 1938 M Cr C 145.

4. Criminal Procedure Code, Section 271.—In a trial under Section 401, Penal Code, although a number of charge-sheets are originally filed against the accused, there is nothing objectionable if only one charge is framed in the Sessions Court against all the accused, if all the accused are in fact members of that gang, for all the members of the gang can be tried together for the offence of being members of that gang and it matters not how and when they were arrested. AIR 1938 Mad 858 : 1938 MWN 595 : 1938 M Cr C 145.

Though the offence falling under Sections 399 and 402, would probably involve similar ingredients, the difference between the two is that under Section 402, mere assembly without preparation is enough while under Section 399, some additional step is taken by way of preparation. (1961) 26 Cut LT 571 : 1960 Cr LJ 1234 ; 1983 UP (Cr) Rul 259 ; (1982) 2 LR (Cr) 548 ; (1972) 1 Cut LR Cr 37, 1982 Jab LJ 300 : 1983 MPLJ 449.

Sec. 402. Assembling for the purpose of committing dacoity.—Whoever, at any time after the passing of this Act, shall be one or five or more persons assembled for the purpose of committing dacoity, shall be punished with rigorous imprisonment for a term, which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

1. Scope.—A mere assembly without further preparation is not a preparation under Section 399. This section applies to the case of mere assembly without proof of other preparation. 18 CWN 498 ; see also 23 All 124. Section 402 contemplates a stage when the whole project still lies in the realm of design and intention without any attempt having yet been made to give it a concrete shape. AIR 1958 Cal 25 : 61 CWN 856 : ILR (1958) 1 Cal 447 : 1958 Cr LJ 25 ; 28 Cut LT 571 ; 1982 Cr LJ 448 ; (1982) 21 Del LT 26. The members of an unlawful assembly were held to be guilty of an offence under this section on their own admission that they not only knew that the assembly was an assembly for committing dacoity but that all the members (including themselves) composing it lived on the proceeds of dacoity and had no other means o living. 7 WRC 61. But an assemblage of 5 or more persons for the purpose o concerning plans for committing dacoity yet remote or contingent or for discussing the possibility of committing it is not within the meaning of this section, which postulates a determination to commit a dacoity. 22 Ind Cas 833 ; 32 Ind Cas 343 ; AIR 1962 All 13 1962 All Cr R 90 : 1962 (1) Cr LJ 3 (benefit of doubt from the surrounding circumstances). Proof of being member of the gang is not enough. Proof of the actua part taken by each is not necessary. 34 Ind Cas 1000 ; see also 84 Ind Cas 860 : AIR 1925 All 62 : 22 ALJ 1028 : 26 Cr LJ 380 ; 106 Ind Cas 350 : AIR 1928 Lah 144 : 29 Cr LJ 14 So accused belonging to different villagers found together in a lonely place armed for committing dacoity can be convicted under this section. 27 Cr LJ 605 : 94 Ind Cas 269. Where persons are accused under Sections 309/402, it is difficult to give direct evidence of the purpose of the assembly. 1949 AWR 471. The intention or agreement to commit dacoity is to be established before the member of the assembly can be punished under Section 402. 1953 Cr LJ 990 : AIR 1953 Bhopal Section 21. The essentia ingredient of the offence under the section are the accused besides being members of an assembly of five or more persons, the purpose of which was committing of dacoity. AIR 1979 SC 1412 : 1979 Cr LJ 1090 ; 1982 Cr LJ 449 ; 1978 Cr LJ 877. 1979 All Cr C 179 ; 1980 Cr LJ (NOC) 21.

A police officer who conducted a raid to arrest the accused under Section 399 read with Section 402, IPC, was appointed Investigating Officer, to investigate it. Held, it is violative of principles of natural justice. 1986 Cr LJ 1031 (Pat).

2. Assembly for Dacoity.—The oral evidence adduced in the case is only to the effect that the petitioner was found in the company of others and also that the first accused in the case had in his possession a dagger. Merely from these facts, it may not be possible to draw an inference that the persons were assembled for the purpose of committing dacoity. Of course concrete evidence with regard to the intention behind the assembly may not be easy to get: but then the available facts and circumstances should at least justify a reasonable inference that the gathering had such an intention. There is not even any circumstantial evidence available in the present case to show that the petitioner was actually available at the spot with an intention to commit dacoity. Nijamudeen v. State of Kerala, 2002 Cri LJ 3266 : 12002(2) ALD (CRL) 165.

3. Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compound-able—Triable by Court of Session.

OF CRIMINAL MISAPPROPRIATION OF PROPERTY

Sec. 403. Dishonest misappropriation of property.—Whoever dishonestly misappropriates or converts to his own use any moveable property, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

(a) A takes property belonging to Z out of Z's possession in good faith, believing, at the time when he takes it, that the property belongs to himself. A is not guilty of theft ; but if A, after discovering his mistake, dishonestly appropriates the property to his own use, he is guilty of an offence under this section.

(b) A, being on friendly terms with Z, goes into Z's library in Z's absence, and takes away a book without Z's express consent. Here. if A was under the impression that he had Z's implied consent to take the book for the purpose of reading it, A has not committed theft. But, if A. afterwards, sells a book for his own benefit, he is guilty of an offence under this section.

(c) A and B, being joint owners of a horse. A takes the horse out of B's possession, intending to use it. Here, as A has a right to use the horse, he does not dishonestly misappropriatesit. But, if A sells the horse and appropriates the whole proceeds to his own use, he is guilty of an offence under this section.

Explanation 1.—A dishonest misappropriation for a time only is a misappropriation within the meaning of this section.

A finds a Government promissory note belonging to Z, bearing a blank endorsement. A, knowing that the note belongs to Z. pledges it with a banker as a security for a loan, intending at a future time to restore it to Z. A has committed an offence under this section.

Explanation 2.—A person who finds property not in the possession of any other person, and takes such property for the purpose of protecting it for, or of restoring it to, the owner, does not take or misappropriate it dishonestly, and is not guilty of an offence ; but he is guilty of the offence above defined, if he appropriates it to his own use, when he knows or has the means of discovering the owner, or before he has used reasonable means to discover and give notice to the owner, and has kept the property for a reasonable time to enable the owner to claim it.

What are reasonable means or what is a reasonable time in such a case, is a question of fact.

It is not necessary that the finder should know who is the owner of the property, or that any particular person is the owner of it : it is sufficient if, at the time of appropriating it, he does not believe it to be his own property or in good faith believes that the real owner cannot be found.

(a) A finds a rupee on the high-road, not knowing to whom the rupee belongs. A picks up the rupee. Here A has not committed the offence defined in section.

(b) A finds a letter on the road, containing a bank note. From the direction and contents of the letter he learns to whom the note belongs. He appropriates the note. He is guilty of an offence under this section.

(c) A finds a cheque payable to bearer. He can form no conjecture as to the person who has lost the cheque. But the name of the person, who has drawn cheque, appears. A knows that this person can direct him to the person in whose favour the cheque was drawn. A appropriates the cheque without attempting to discover the owner. He is guilty of an offence under this section.

(d) A sees Z drop his purse with money in it. A picks up the purse with the Intention of restoring it to Z, but afterwards appropriates it to his own use. A has committed an offence under this section.

(e) A finds a purse with money, not knowing to whom it belongs ; he afterwards discovers that it belongs to Z, and appropriates it to his own use. A is guilty of an offence under this section.

(f) A finds a valuable ring, not knowing to whom it belongs. A steals it immediately without attempting to discover the owner. A is guilty of an offence under this section.

1. Gist of offence.—To constitute the offence under this section, there must be misappropriation of moveable property and the misappropriation must be dishonest. In order to be dishonest, the property must be misappropriated or converted "with the intention of causing wrongful gain to one person or a wrongful loss to another", i.e., with the intention of causing gain by unlawful means of property to which the person gaining it is not legally entitled, or the loss by unlawful means of property to which the person losing it is legally entitled. Where there is no intention to cause wrongful gain or wrongful loss of property and merely an intention to deprive the owner temporarily of the use of the property, dishonesty is not made out. 27 PR 1887 Cr ; see AIR 1950 All 266 ; 5 Al Cr D 713 : 6 DLR (Pat) 149 ; AIR 1961 Assam 132 : (1960) 1 Assam LR 224 : 1961 All Cr R 405 : 1961(2) Cr LJ 457. Bare intention to misappropriates not enough. 1961(1) Cr LJ 624. Criminal misappropriation takes place when the possession has been innocently came by, but where by a subsequent change of intention, or from the knowledge of some new fact with which the party was not previously acquainted, the retaining becomes wrongful and fraudulent. 15 Cal 388. Mere retention of money is not an offence. 1928 Bom 205 : 30 Bom LR 624 : 29 Cr LJ 922. In a case of alleged misappropriation, it is not enough for the prosecution to show that the accused received certain sums of money and failed to account for them, unless and until the prosecution can point to state of facts which led inevitably to the conclusion that the accused was guilty, the prosecution has failed to discharge the onus which lies on him. 61 Cal 168 ; see also AIR 1933 PC 7 : 64 MLJ 290 : 1933 Cr C 130 : 43 Ind Cas 224 : 34 Cr LJ 550 (PC). 2. Theft and misappropriation—Distinguished.—"In theft the object of the offender always is to take property which is in the prosecution of a person out of that person's possession ; and the offence is complete as soon as the offender moved the property in order to a dishonest taking of it. In the offence of criminal misappropriation, there is not necessarily an invasion of the possession of another person by an attempt to take from him that which he possesses. The offender is already in possession of the property and is either lawfully in possession of it, because he has found it or is a joint owner of it, or has possession, it not strictly lawful, is not punishable as an offence because he has acquired it under some mistaken notion of right in himself or of consent given by another (see the Illustrations to Section 403). The offence consists not in wrongfully obtaining possession but in misappropriation, either permanently or for a time, of property which is already without wrong in the possession of the offender. The dishonest intention to appropriate the property of another is common to theft and to criminal misappropriation. But this intention which is theft is sufficiently manifested by a moving of the property must in the other offence be carried into action by an actual misappropriation or conversion".—Morgan, and Macpherson, 359. In both the cases the property is moveable property. Where property, lost by the owner, is found in the possession of the accused, the offence committed by the accused is not theft but misappropriation as the property was not taken from the possession of the owner. 1 LBR 123. Persons retaining in his custody animals which have strayed and using them is guilty under Section 403. AIR 1957 Assam 35 : 1957 Cr LJ 349. An easy method of differentiating between the offence of theft, cheating with delivery of property, criminal misappropriation and criminal breach of trust is to find out whether the original taking was honest or dishonest and whether it was with the consent of the owner or without it. In theft the original taking is without honesty and without the consent of the owner, and in criminal breach of trust it is with both. In obtaining property cheating the taking is dishonest but with the consent of the owner, and in criminal misappropriation it is honest but without the consent of the owner. AIR 1928 Nag 113.

3. Misappropriation and murder.—The accused demanded money for wine and gambling from his mother and on her refusal he committed her murder and removed her jewellery. The testimony of eye-witnesses who were none else but his own father and brother, was consistent and corroborated by medical evidence. The conviction of accused for murder and misappropriation of jewellery of the deceased person was held proper. Raj Kumar v. State, 2003 Cr LJ (NOC) 249 (MP).

4. Dishonestly.—Where there is no dishonest intention an offence is not made out. Cr Reg 1st May, 1872. In a case of criminal misappropriation, the Court should consider the question, whether the money was kept with a dishonest intention, or only on a wrong opinion that the prisoner was justified in keeping it. In the latter case, the act of accused would not constitute the offence of criminal misappropriation. Rat Un Cr C 700. 5. Misappropriation and conversion.—The essential ingredient for an offence under this section is proof of dishonest misappropriation of the property or conversion to one's own use. 47 Ind Cas 667 ; 40 All 190. Misappropriation means setting apart the thing appropriated to the wrong person or for wrong use and dishonestly. 16 Cr LJ 1915 : 31 Ind Cas 651. AWN 1895, 9. A person who found coin from land bought by him cannot be convicted under this section Rat Un CR C 8. This section is no way restricted to appropriating property to' one's own use. If a trustee repudiates the trust and asserts that he is holding on behalf of a person other than the one who entrusted it to him ; he is as much guilty of misappropriation as if he had up his own claim. 92 Ind Cas 585 : 48 All 288 : 7 Cr LJ 297.

Where it is alleged that the complainant lent a jewel to the accused who dishonestly retained it and converted it to his own use prima facie an offence under Section 403, or Section 406. Accused was held guilty for dishonestly misappropriating the amount entrusted to him and falsified the accounts. ILR 1953 TC 600 : 1953 Cr LJ 1777 : AIR 1953 TC 537.

Ordinarily if a person receive a money which he is bound to account for and does not do so, he is prima facie guilty of the offence of misappropriation. In the case of a servant charged with misappropriation will be established if the prosecution proves that the servant received the goods, that he was under a duty to account to his master and has not done so. 1962 Ker LT 679 : (1962) 2 Ker LR 256. There can be criminal misappropriation by Bhagdar where there is clear evidence and the status of the person charged under the West Bengal Bargadars Act, 1950, can not be availed of to prevent the application of the ordinary law of this law. I. LR (1957) 1 Cal 506.

For finding the accused guilty under the section, it must be shown that he was in possession of moveable property or had dominion over it. 1978 Cr LJ 1379. The owner "converts to his own use" must necessarily connote the user of or dealing with the property in derogation of the rights of the owner. AIR 1956 Mys 40 : 1956 Cr LJ 630 ; AIR 1958 Mys 82 : 1958 CR LJ 784. In a criminal misappropriation the property comes into the possession of the accused innocently in some natural manner but by subsequent change of intention the retention become unlawful, criminal misappropriation in while in criminal breach of trust the placing of the accused in a position of trust and there is dishonest use in the disposal of the property invidation of the trust. 1967 Mad LJ (Cr) 20 ; 1964 Jab LJ 724.

6. Moveable property.—A bull set at large by a Hindu at the time of performing funeral ceremonies in accordance with Hindu religious usage is not property "capable of being misappropriated". 8 All 51. A bull dedicated to an idol and allowed to roam at large is not free bastia and therefore res nullius. 11 M 145 ; see also 23 Cr LJ 401 : 67 Ind .Cas 497. The offence consists in the dishonest misappropriation or conversion of moveable property, and before a conviction can be recorded, it must be proved that the article forming the object of the charge was moveable property. 18 Bom 212. Standing crops are immovable property. When a judgment debtor cuts the crops under attachment and removes them he commits an offence under this section. 22 M 151. Where a bullock followed a cow and owner lost possession of same, bullock cannot be subject or theft but of misappropriation. 18 Cr LJ 300 : 38 Ind Cas 332 : 10 Bur LT 261. The word "property" is used in much a wider since. AIR 1962 SC 1821 : (1962) 2 Cr LJ 805.

7. Explanation 1.—The offence under this section consists in the dishonest misappropriation or conversion either permanently or for a time, of property which is already without wrong in the possession of the offender. 12 M 49. Where the brother of a girl, who picked up a gold necklace, got possession of the necklace from the latter on the representation that it belonged to an acquaintance of his, but latter on delivered it to the police, although repeating to the police, representing made to his sister, which were found to be untrue to the knowledge of the accused, held. that he was guilty under the section. 24 R 1886 Cr. The essential thing to be proved in such case is that the accused was actuated by dishonest intention or not, which is to be inferred from false accounting, absence of bona fide or reasonable explanation for nor-accounting. AIR 1956 Mad 452 : 1956 Cr LJ 1079 ; AIR 1959 HP 14 : 1959 Cr LJ 973. Where the person entrusted with funds for disbursement for a particular purpose misappropriate by preparing false documents, he is guilty under the section. AIR 1972 SC 958 : 1972 Cr LJ 593. According to this Explanation 1, a dishonest misappropriation for a time only is misappropriation within the meaning of this section. (1973) 17 MLJR (Cr) 78 ; AIR 1972 SC 952.

8. Explanation 2.—It deals derelict property and abandoned articles. A human body dead or alive is not also property capable of theft or misappropriation just like fish in a navigable river creek etc., as lacking in having an owner and as such incapable of theft or misappropriation. 1978 Cr LJ 1379.

9. Charge.—In a case in which the accused is charged under this section, the charge should specify the person to whom the property belonged. 14 WR Cr 13. Several cases of misappropriation constitute separate offences. 15 WR Cr 5. Sessions Judge can convert conviction from Section 405 to 403. AIR 1935 Oudh 14. Where charge under Section 403, is not properly drawn up it is not fatal unless prejudicial to the accused. 70 Cr LJ 301.

10. Proof.—The fact of misappropriation can be proved by direct as well as by circumstantial evidence. 34 CLJ 200. Where a police constable of seventeen year's standing caught stray sheep intended for sacrifice and on his transfer from the thana to which he was attached to another thana took it with him there, held, that it was sufficient evidence of dishonesty and that he was guilty of an offence under this section. 17 ALJ 145. Proof of receipt of money and mere failure to account for is not sufficient. Proof of conversion by accused to his use must be shown. AIR 1938 Lah 634.

In order to prove an offence under Section 403, the prosecution has to prove that the property in this case was the property of the complainant and that the accused misappropriated the sum or converted it to his own use or that he did so dishonestly. AIR 1958 SC 56 : (1959) 2 SCA 221 : 1958 SCJ 343 : 1958 All Cr R 273 : 1958 Cr LJ 228.

11. Completion of the offence.—Under this section the offence is complete the moment the accused receives or retains the money with a dishonest motive of appropriating it or converting it into his own use. 1921 Pat 31 : 56 Ind Cas 775. Section 403, itself would not apply if there is merely an intention to misappropriate and there is no actual dishonest misappropriation. 5 AI Cr D 73 : 6 DLR (Pat) 149.

In absence of allegation as to entrustment to husband complaint under Sections 403/406, IPC against him is liable to be quashed. Pradipta Basu Roy Chowdhury v. Babita Basu Roy Chowdhury, 1997 (2) East Cr C 161 (Cal).

12. Cases.—It is a possible view that an accused is guilty of criminal breach of trust between the misappropriation and the repayment, but Courts should be slow when repayment is at once made on demand to assume guilt in accused person. Criminal liability is not the same as civil liability. 97 Ind Cas 1041 : 27 Cr LJ 1217. It cannot be laid down as an absolute rule applicable to all cases that if a man cannot move a thing away, he cannot dishonestly convert it to his own use. 92 Ind Cas 747 : 27 Cr LJ 331 : 50 MLJ 94. Where a Sub-Inspector of Police who came across a stray bullock advertised for the owner but as none turned up had it sold after 20 days, he is not guilty of any offence under this section. 91 Ind Cas 37 : 23 ALJ 128. In the instant case, the averments made in the complaint petition show that money was handed over by the opposite party to the petitioners to supply levy cement with the abolition of the control on cement the system of supply of levy cement was abolished. Therefore, the money given by the opposite party No. 1 to the petitioner No. 1 for the purpose cannot be fulfilled. It was the duty of the petitioners to refund the money as requested by the opposite party as well as the Government of India. In spite of that the money was not refunded. In view of the above, it cannot be said that the averments made in the complaint petition even if it is taken to be true, do not make out a case of criminal breach of trust or misappropriation or simple misappropriation. This is dependent upon the intention of the parties. The petitioners stated that there were outstanding balances as per the accounts and if the accounts are taken into consideration the petitioners would not be liable to pay. All these matters require full dress trial. It can be ascertained only after recording evidence of the witnesses for the complainant and the petitioners. (M/s.) Modi Cement Ltd. v. 1. Scope.—"This section is intended on to the punish servants and strangers who could possibly have no right to or interest in, the effects of a dead man, and who misappropriated such effects, but not to punish near relations who take possession of and deal with the effects under a claim of independent ownership or as heir to the deceased. 25 Ind Cas 514. It is not necessary for a conviction under this section that the accused should misappropriate it to his own use. 12 WR Cr 39 ; 11 WR Cr 1. Under this section all the elements are required to constitute the offence which would be required to constitute the offence of criminal misappropriation in respect of a person who is alive. 12 WR Cr 39. The essential ingredient of offence under Section 404 was the knowledge on the part of the accused that the property in question was in possession of the deceased person at the time of that person's death and had not since been in the possession if any person legally entitled to such possession. 1961 MPLJ (Notes) 130. This section relates to a description of property peculiarly needing protection. The offence consists in pillaging of moveable property during the interval which elapses between the time when the possessor of the property dies and the time when it comes into the possession of some person or officer authorized to take charge of it. The proof should be that the property belonged to or was in the possession of the deceased person at the time of his death, and that it has since been misappropriated or converted to his own use by a person who knew or had reason to know that it belonged to the deceased."—Morgan and Macpherson.—This section is expressly limited to moveable property alone and criminal misappropriation or conversion is easily possible of the moveable property where the materials which have been secured from the building are removed. OF CRIMINAL BREACH OF TRUST

Distinguishing of the offences.—"This offence like the offence of criminal misappropriation is characterised by an actual fraudulent appropriation of property. There is not originally a wrongful taking or moving as in theft, but the offence consists in wrongful appropriation of property, consequent upon a possession which is lawful. The offence is distinguishable from criminal misappropriation because the subject of it is not property, which by some casually or otherwise, but without criminal means, comes into the offender's possession ; but the property, which is entrusted to the offender by the owner or by other's lawful authority and which the offender holds subject to some duty or obligation to apply it according to the trust"—Morgan and Macpherson.

There was a business dealing between parties in which complainant had been supplying goods and the accused had been making the payments of goods supplied to them by cash/draft on different intervals. The complainant supplied goods to accused also and accused No. 2 being proprietor of accused issued cheque in favour of the complainant for the goods supplied to the accused. The cheque was dishonoured by the Bank. The complainant filed a complaint for cheating and criminal breach of trust. The Court held that it was a business dealing between two concerns between whom, there had been business dealings earlier also and no dispute arose. Criminal prosecution under Section 406 and 402 IPC by the complainant was abuse of the process of law. Sneh Lata v. M/s Swastika Agro Industrial Corporation, Jalandhar 2001 Cri LJ 4432 (P&H).

3. Applicability of.—In the case accused were charged of criminal breach of trust for having disposed of pledged goods with dishonest and fraudulent intention. Ingredient of the offence of criminal breach of trust are (1) accused must have been trusted with property or domain over it, and (2) accused must have misappropriated property or disposed of that property in violation of such trust. Goods pledge by pledger constitute entrusted of property. There may be circumstances where alleged breach is so gave and wanton as to warrant an inference of dishonest and fraudulent intention on part of pledge in disposing of pledged goods in which case it will constitute criminal breach of trust. It was observed that the act of pledge disposing of jewel ornaments pledged by debtor without notice to pledger for a price for below the real value might constitute criminal breach of trust. 1987 Cri LJ 447 (Del).

Requirement for Applicability. The terms of the section are very wide. They apply to one who is in any manner entrusted with property or dominion over property. The section does not require that the trust should be in furtherance of any lawful object. It merely provides, inter alia, that if such a person dishonestly misappropriates or converts to his own use the property entrusted to him; he commits criminal breach of ust. This section requires, (1) Entrusting any person with property or with dominion over property; (2) That person entrusted (a) dishonestly misappropriates or converts to his own use that property; or (b) dishonestly uses or disposes of that property or willfully suffers any other person so to do in violation – (i) of any direction of law prescribing the mode in which such trust is to be discharged, or (ii) of any legal contract made touching the discharge of such trust.

The most essential ingredient of proof of criminal breach of trust, therefore, is misappropriation with a dishonest intention. R. Venkatakrishnan vs. Central Bureau of Investigation, 2009 (11) SCC 737 : 2009 (10) JT 597 : 2009 (12) SCR 762 : 2009 (11) Scale 102 : 2009 (6) SLT 375.

4. Scope.—"The offence, as here defined, appears to include any dishonest misappropriation by persons in whom confidence is placed as to the custody or application of particular property whether it be by legal authority or private contract or consent. Persons as clerks, agents, servants or otherwise, under whatsoever name have a confidence reposed in them by their employers and are, whether in the ordinary course of their employment or only occasionally entrusted with the property and persons whose employment does not extend beyond the particular occasion on which they are so entrusted, seem to be within this section. Those who technically called trustees if they commit a breach of trust are responsible as criminals for acts done by them dishonestly for their own gain to the despoiling of the persons for whom they are in trust, or for acts causing wrongful gain to themselves or wrongful loss to such persons. Sections 407-409 make special provisions for various cases in which property is entrusted to agents or contractors who commit this offence.

'This definitions includes those who are entrusted in any manner with property, as warehouse-keepers, etc., are entrusted only with the possession or custody of property. Persons who are empowered to take or deliver possession of property whether such power is derived from the owner or from any other person, and persons who are entrusted with any dominion over property are also included. Property which is bulky or which cannot, for other reasons be delivered from hand to hand, is usually represented by some writing or other thing. Thus the key of the warehouse or place where goods are lodged, the bill of lading, delivery order, or other document however called, which is used in the ordinary course of business to show the possession or control of property and which enables the holder to transfer or receive or otherwise deal with it, are made to represent the property itself. A person entrusted with such a document or thing has a dominion over the property thereby represented."—Morgan and Macpherson, 365. Evidence of trust and dishonest misappropriation are sufficient to constitute an offence under this section. 1 Weir 460 ; 16 WR Cr 39 ; 9 All 666 ; 3 WR Cr 44 ; 1914 MWN 894 : 16 MLT 505 : 15 Cr LJ 688 ; AIR 1957 All 122 : 1957 All LJ 147 : 1957 Cr LJ 170 : AIR 1955 Pat 338 : 1955 Cr LJ 1096. The value of property is immaterial. 27 All 28 ; AWN 1881-82.

"Negligence or other misconduct causing the loss of the entrusted property may make the person entrusted civilly responsible, but will not make him guilty of this offence. There must be the intention so cause wrongful gain or wrongful loss to constitute a criminal breach of trust."—Morgan and Macpherson. See also 106 Ind Cas 682. To constitute an offence of criminal breach of trust there must be an entrustment, there must be misappropriation or conversion of one's own use or use in violation of any legal direction or of any legal contract and thirdly the misappropriation or conversion or disposal must be with a dishonest intention. AIR 1940 Mad 329 : 41 Cr LJ 824. The accused, a receiver of a cotton mill appointed by the High Court. In the exercise of his discretion demanded and received payment over and above the market rate in respect of bales allotted to a shopkeeper. The accused however failed to account for the extra- payment. Held, as the sum was paid by way of illegal gratification, there could be no question of entrustment in such payment. The criminality of the act consisted in illegal payment of the money and the subsequent misappropriation or conversion of the same did not arise. AIR 1953 SC 478 : 1954 Cr LJ 102. Where a Court trying a person for an offence of criminal breach of trust finds that the case is not covered by Section 84, I.P. Code. It should consider another aspect of the case namely whether even if Section 84 did not cover the case. The state of mind in which the accused did not exclude the existence of a dishonest intention which is an essential ingredient of the offence of criminal breach of trust. AIR 1939 Mad 407 : 40 Cr LJ 642. To constitute an offence under this section, the prosecution must prove entrustment. AIR 1951 *A*jm 15 ; AIR 1951 Cal 206.

But for the purposes of this section it is not necessary that the entrustment should be express. *A*n implied entrustment will suffice. AIR 1950 *A*jm 76. *A*lthough the burden of proving entrustment of money rests on the prosecution, if it is proved that the accused was not in possession of the amount entrusted to him, it is for the accused to prove satisfactorily that he had not embezzled or misappropriated the amount but the amount had been stolen or that he had been robbed of it. It is not for the prosecution to prove how he disposed of it. AIR 1950 Sau 13. This section does not apply to partners. 146 Ind Cas 416 : 37 CWN 982 : 1933 Cr C 953 : 34 Cr LJ 958 : AIR 1933 Cal 582 ; but see 35 Bom LR 1518. When a person allows others to misappropriate the money entrusted to him, that amounts to a criminal breach of trust as defined by Section 405, 1952 Cr LJ 46 : 1952 BLR Kut 7 : AIR 1951 Kut 81. The section consists of property is a positive part and a negative part. The positive part deals with criminal misappropriation or conversion of the property and the negative part consists of dishonestly using or disposing of the property in violation of any direction of law or any contract concluding the discharge of trust. AIR 1966 All 619 ; 1956 Cr LJ 1165 ; see also 1960 Cr LJ 1250 ; AIR 1960 SC 889 (in a charge of criminal breach of trust the prosecution is not obliged to prove the presence page of conversion). In the absence of proof of entrustment of property or of dominion over the property of another, the section will not be applicable. 79 CWN 538 ; 74 CWN 782 ; 1979 Chand LR (Cr) 43. The expression "entrusted" is used in a wide sense and includes all cases in which the property of voluntarily handed over for a specified purpose and is disposed of dishonestly contrary to the purpose. Requirement for. This section classes together public servants, bankers, merchants, factors, brokers, attorneys and agents. The duties of such persons are of a highly confidential character, involving great powers of control, over the property entrusted to them and a breach of trust by such persons may often induce serious public and private calamity. High morality is expected of these persons. They are to discharge their duties honestly.

The following are the essential ingredients of the offence under this section : (1) The accused must be a public servant; (2) He must have been entrusted, in such capacity with the property; (3) He must have committed breach of trust in respect of such property. R. Venkatakrishnan vs. Central Bureau of Investigation, 2009 (11) SCC 737 : 2009 (10) JT 597 : 2009 (12) SCR 762 : 2009 (11) Scale 102 : 2009 (6) SLT 375.

According to Section 405, I.P.C. a dishonest misappropriation or conversion to his own use or dishonest use or disposal of property in violation of any direction of law or of any legal contract is a necessary ingredient of offence of criminal breach of trust. Jugal Kishore Saraf v. State of Assam, (1994) 2 GLR 174 (Gau).

5. Criminal Breach of Trust—Proof of mens rea.—In Kanhaiya Lall v. Emperor, 168 Ind Cas 58 : 38 Cr LJ 491 : 1937 OLR 202 : 1937 OWN 505 : AIR 1937 Oudh 331, the Court observed : "My principal reason for holding that the facts of this case do not constitute the offence of criminal breach of trust is that there is no satisfactory evidence on the record which convinces me that the accused, B. Kanhaiya Lall, at the time when he is said to have misappropriated certain sums of money had guilty of knowledge or mens rea as to convert what at best amounted to a civil wrong or tort into a penal offence' amounting to criminal breach of trust by a servant. The distinction between a civil wrong, which gives rise to a suit for damages for that wrongful act or tort, and a criminal offence punishable under the Penal Code is very clear. Every breach of trust gives rise to a suit for damages, but it is only where there is evidence of a mental act of fraudulent misappropriation that a commission of embezzlement of any sum of money becomes a mental offence punishable as criminal breach of trust under Sections 408 and 409, I.P. Code. It is the mental act of fraudulent misappropriation that clearly demonstrates an act of embezzlement which is a civil wrong or tort from the criminal breach of trust punishable under Section 408, I.P. Code. This is clearly brought out in the observations of Coleridge. J., in R. v. Williams Sarah, 7 C & P 338 and in R. v. Lynch, 6 Cox CC 445. This malicious intent on the part of a servant to deprive his master of some of money due to that latter and the fraudulent misappropriation as included by such mental act or intent to deprive the master of his property without any outward or visible trespass in the fraudulent mental distinction between a civil wrong arising out of a breach of trust and the offence of criminal breach of trust..... Every offence of criminal breach of trust involve a civil wrong in respect of which the complainant may seek his redress for damages in the Civil Court but every breach of trust, in the absence of mens rea, cannot legally justify a criminal prosecution". 1957 MPWN 495. A deprivation even for a short time is within the meaning of the criminal breach of trust. If the Managing Director of a Bank entrusted with securities owned by the pledger disposes of their securities against the stipulated terms of the contract entered into by the parties, with the intents of causing wrongful loss to the pledger and wrongful gain to the bank, there can be no question but that the Managing Director has necessary mens rea required by Section 405. Where the accused is able to establish that due to incessant rain the paddy supplied to him by Government for milling it into rice was damaged resulting in short delivery of rice, than there is no mens rea on the part of this accused and hence an inference regarding dishonesty of the accused will not be justified. 6. Property.—The property referred to in this section must, as in Section 403, be moveable property and criminal breach of trust cannot be committed in respect of immoveable property. 23 Cal 272 ; AIR 1930 Rang 158 : 8 Rang 13. The word "property" is used in the Penal Code in a much wider sense than the expression 'moveable property'. There is no good reason to restrict the meaning of the word 'property' to moveable property only when it is used without any qualification in Section 405 or in other section of the Penal Code. 7. Entrusted.—The term "entrustment" is not necessarily a term of law. It may have different implications in different context. In its most general signification, all it imports is the handing over the possession for some purpose which may not imply the confessing of any proprietary right at all. 1935 Cr 1210 : AIR 1935 Rang 453. The words "in any manner" in the section show that the entrustment of property with the accused may be brought about in various ways. 159 Ind Cas 656 : 1935 MWN 914 : 42 LW 923 : 1935 Cr C 1314 : 69 MLJ 681. 8. Actual abandonment or destruction.—If an article is abandoned it becomes res nullius, and there can be no theft or breach of trust. But a very clear distinction is to be drawn between an intention to destroy and to abandon and an actual destruction and abandonment. The very fact that the owner of the property intends to destroy or abandon that property and hands it over to some person to effect those purposes is a clear indication that he still maintains his right as owner of that property and those right subsist until the abandonment or destruction is completed. As long as the destruction or abandonment is not fulfilled and so long as it is still in the hands of the owner to countermand such destruction or abandonment the property is still the property of the owner and taking it out of his possession is theft and improper use of it is breach of trust. 9. Sections 405 and 415.—Property obtained by cheating cannot be capable of being fraudulently converted under Section 405, I.P. Code. The notion of a trust is that there is a person trustee or entrustee, in whom confidence is reposed by another who commits property to him ; this again supposes that the confidence is freely given. A person who obtains property by a trick from another bears no resemblance to a trustee and cannot be regarded as a trustee under Section 405. The essence of the offence under Section 405 is the dishonest conversion of the property entrusted, but the act of cheating itself involves a conversion. Conversion signifies the depriving of the owner of the use and possession of his property. When the cheat afterwards sells or consumes or otherwise uses the fruit of his cheating he is not committing an act of conversion, for the conversion is already done, but he is furnishing evidence of the fraud he practised to get hold of the property. Therefore cheating is a complete offence by itself. 162 Ind Cas 592 : 37 Cr LJ 637 : 1936 Cr C 637 : 43 LW 548 : 1936 MWN 281 : AIR 1936 Mad 353 : 70 MLJ 635 (FB) in the same case Lakshman Row, J., observed : "More offences than one were committed, viz., obtaining delivery of property by cheating under Section 420, I.P. Code, and criminal breach of trust under Section 406, I.P. Code, and as stressed by the Crown Prosecutor, acts constituting the offence of obtaining property by cheating cannot by themselves constitute the offence of criminal breach of trust. The ingredients of the offences are different and so is the evidence requisite to establish them. There can be a breach of trust independently of cheating and the offences are distinct and separate. The offence under Section 420 is complete as soon as delivery is obtained by cheating, and without further act of misappropriation there can be no breach of trust." See also 159 Ind Cas 656 : 1935 MWN 914 : 42 LW 923 : 1935 Cr C 1314 : 69 MLJ 681. The offence of criminal breach of trust may be broadly defined as the fraudulent appropriation of another's property by a person to whom it has been entrusted or into whose hands it has lawfully come. It is akin to cheating, theft and criminal misappropriation but differs from them in important respects. In criminal breach of trust the property is lawfully acquired or acquired with the consent of the owner, but dishonestly misappropriated by the person to whom it is entrusted. In cheating the property is wrongfully acquired in the first instance by means of a false representation. In theft the property is taken without the consent of the owner and the dishonest intention to take property exists at the time of such taking. In criminal misappropriation the property is innocently acquired, often equally by chance, but by a subsequent change of intentions and the retaining becomes wrongful and fraudulent. The expression "entrusted" has a corresponding meaning and embraces all cases in which goods are entrusted. AIR 1951 Punj 103 : 54 PLR 18. To constitute a breach of trust the property must in the first instance have come into the hands of the accused in a lawful manner or with the consent of the owner. (1977) 4 Cr LJ 244. Criminal intention is necessary in cheating at the time of entrustment. 1978 Cr LJ (NOC) 33. Proof of entrustment is sufficient in criminal breach of trust but in cheating the dishonest or the fraudulent intention must be shown to be present from the very inception. 1970 Pat LJR 600.

10. Dishonestly.—The word "dishonestly" means the doing of an act with the intention of causing wrongful loss or wrongful gain, and wrongful gain is gain by unlawful means of property to which the person gaining is not legally entitled. For either in wrongful loss or gain, the property must be lost to the owner or the owner must be wrongfully loss or gain, the property must be lost to the owner or the owner must be wrongfully kept out of it. 1 Weir 416 : 3 MHC App 6. 11. Disposal of property in violation of any direction of law, etc.—A person; who pledges what is pledged to him, may guilty of criminal breach of trust. There are two elements to constitute the offence : (l) the disposal in violation of any direction of law or contract express or implied describing the mode in which the trust ought to be discharged. (2) and such disposal must be made dishonestly. Great caution ought to be used in drawing the inference of dishonesty from a breach of duty imposed by civil law. 1 Weir 461 : 6 MH Cr App 28 ; 1 Weir 464 ; UBR (1897-1901) Vol. I 345 ; 17 Bom LR 670. 12. Proof required.—It is incumbent upon the prosecution in order to establish a charge of breach of trust to prove : (l) that the accused was entrusted with property and (2) that he dishonestly misappropriated or converted to his own use of that property. 14. Debtor and creditor.—The only underlying idea in Section 405 is undoubtedly this that the property which is the subject matter of entrustment, or in respect of which dominion is passed over to the accused, does not even for the time being become the property of the accused which he could use for his own purpose. Thus the section does not cover the case of a loan or of an advance money when the borrower or the depositor intends to use or utilise that money, for the time being, till he is in possession of it, although he may have to return an equivalent amount latter or in to person making the advance with or without interest, or compensation for the use thereof AIR 1954 All 583 : 1954 Cr LJ 1293 : 1954 All LJ 97 ; 29 Cut LT 415 : ILR (1963) 399. 17. Section 405 of the Penal Code clearly contemplates being done with respect to the property indicating either misappropriation or conversion or its use or disposal of the contract express or implied. The real dispute between the parties in the instant case was as to the nature of the agreement between the party when the motor was entrusted to the appellant. The appellant only put forward his version of the agreement, in the letter which did not show any charge in the use charge in the use of the motor. The appellant was in possession both before or after the letter. No misappropriation or conversion occurs as a result of the letter. 25. Ingredients of offence under.—Criminal breach of trust is defined in Section 405 of IPC. The ingredients of an offence of the criminal breach to trust are :

1. Entrusting any person with property or with any dominion over property.
2. That person entrusted (a) dishonestly misappropriating or converting to his own use that property; or (b) dishonestly using or disposing of that property or willfully suffering any other person so to do in violation—

(i) of any direction of law prescribing the mode in which such trust is to be discharged, or

(ii) of any legal contract made touching the discharge of such trust.

26. Criminal breach of trust and cheating.—As essential ingredients of Sec. 405 and Sec. 420 were missing, no offence is made out against appellants.

Appellants, partners of firm in which Complainant was also a partner, allegedly conspired and cheated him to deprive him of share in profit by dissolving firm behind his back. Partnership firm in question was constituted on premises that four persons of a Company would represent firm. Partnership stood dissolved at very inception as it was never acted upon. In view thereof, question of any wrongful act on part of accused does not arise

We, however, in this case are satisfied that the appellants by no stretch of imagination can be said to have committed an offence particularly when admittedly the new firm has been cancelled from its very inception. If the new firm has not derived any income, the question of depriving the claimant therefrom does not arise. Whether the constitution of the said firm was illegal, or mala fide, thus, need not be gone into as by reason thereof the respondent cannot be said to have suffered any loss.

We may notice that as regards commission of an offence in terms of Sec. 405 of Indian Penal Code, this Court in Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd. and others, (2006) 6 SCC 736 : 2006 AIR SCW 3830] held that where the first ingradient of criminal breach of trust, that is, entrustment is missing, the same would not constitute a criminal breach of trust.

As regards essential ingredients of the offence of cheating, it was stated :

> "(i) deception of a person either by making a false or misleading representation or by other action or omission, (ii) fraudulent or dishonest inducement of that person to either deliver any property or to consent to the retention thereof by any person or to intentionally induce that person to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit if he were not so deceived and which act or omission causes or is likely to cause damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property."

The aforementioned ingredients of Sec. 420 of Indian Penal Code are also absent in the instant case. [See also Suryalakshmi Cotton Mills Ltd. v. Rajvir Industries Ltd. and Ors., 2008 (1) SCALE 331 : 2008 AIR SCW 1956]. V.R. Dalai and Ors. v. Yogendra Naranji Thakkar and Anr., AIR 2008 SC 2793 : 2008 (9) SCR 107 (SC) : 2008 (6) JT 564 (SC) : 2008 (8) Scale 156 (SC) : 2008 (4) Supreme 374 (SC) : 2008 (5) SLT 289 (SC) : 2008 (2) JCC 1418 (SC).

27. Partnership—Criminal breach of trust.—A perusal of Section 405 of the Penal Code indicates that four ingredients have to be satisfied before an act can constitute an offence of criminal breach of trust. The essentials of the offence of criminal breach of trust are : (i) entrustment of property or dominion over the property by one person to another; and (ii) a dishonest misappropriation or conversion of that property by the agent for his own use; or (iii) a dishonest use of disposal of the property in violation of the mandate of law prescribing the mode in which the entrustment is to be discharged; or (iv) a dishonest use or disposal of property in violation of the terms through any legal contract either expressed or implied regarding the discharge of the entrustment or wilfully allowing some other person to do so.

Thus, the fact of entrustment of the property must be established before a charge under Section 405 can be made out. In the present case, the property belonged to the accused and the complainant. They had jointly purchased the property in order to develop the same. It was to be developed by the partnership firm when both the accused and the complainant were partners of that firm. Therefore, the question of the accused being entrusted with the property does not arise as one partner cannot entrust the property of the firm to another. So far as the question of having dominion of the property is concerned, all the partners have dominion over the property of the partnership concern. In the present case, the property though purchased by the accused and complainant, jointly, it was to be developed by the partnership concern and therefore the accused and complainant have dominion over the property. As these basic ingredients which constitutes an offence under Section 405 are not fulfilled, the order issuing process in the matter was not proper. Mahindra Dipchand Jain v. Ashok Sardarmal Parekh and Ors., 2008 CriLJ 3825 (Bom).

When story of entrustment of gold ornaments to accused not proved beyond reasonable doubt, no offence made out. Renukana Sengupta v. Delejani Sengupta, 1996 Cri LJ 28, 39 (Cal).

When civil matters are being motivated brought into Criminal Trial Court to quash F.I.R. for abusing process of Court. Rajesh Aggarwal v. State of Bihar. 1996 (2) Crimes 465 (Pat).

There was no entrustment of properties or that they committed an offence punishable either under Section 406 or 420, I.P.C. Ultimately, from the overall reading of the complaint, it can easily be measured that if at all there is anything, it is only a breach of agreement which would lead to civil litigation and not criminal case. If the Magistrate has applied his mind to these allegations, he could have easily come to the conclusion that no criminal offence is made out from the allegations made in the complaint. On the other hand, the learned Magistrate was swayed away by the fact that all allegations made in the complaint that prima facie, is a matter to be investigated by the police. Even from the reading of the prayer, it is seen that the respondent has requested the Court to refer to the police under Section 156(3), Cr.P.C. and there is no prayer to take action against the petitioners. Nandakishore and others v. State and another, 2002 Cri LJ 2746 (Kant.) : AIR 2002 Kant HCR 1570 : 2001(1) Crimes 184 : 2002(4) Kant JT 490.

2. 3. Agreement.—An agreement allowing a person who had committed criminal breach of trust to refund the property misappropriated, cannot operate to bar a subsequent prosecution for the offence of criminal breach of trust. 1 weir 463 : see (1909) 10 Cr LJ 417 because the complainant gave time for repayment, that is no ground for acquittal.

Refusal to refund money to depositors on the date, amounts to breach of contract which is civil liability. B.D. Kalra v. State of Haryana, 1992 Cr LT 254 (P&H).

4. Breach of contract does not necessarily result but offence under Section 406 or 420.—In a case where there is a breach of an agreement executed between the parties merely because there is a breach and several amounts which are due and payable by one party to the other are not paid it cannot be said that the offence punishable under Section 420 or that the offence of criminal breach of trust is committed by the accused. There are catenas of judgments of the Supreme Court wherein it has been observed that in order to attract the provisions of Section 406 or Section 420 of the Indian Penal Code the ingredients of the said offence have to be established. It is, no doubt, true that in a given case of a breach of contract a prosecution could be launched under the provisions of Section 406 or Section 420 and at the same time simultaneously a civil suit could also be filed. However, this is not always true and in order to establish that the breach of contract had resulted into an offence punishable under 406 or Section 420, IPC, there should be sufficient material on record on the basis of which such inference can be drawn. National Small Industries Corporation Ltd. v. *M/s. 5. Partnership.—In a partnership, it is open to a partner to spend the money he receives and account for it in dealing with the partnership, and such a partner is plainly entitled to be called upon for an account of the expenditure of the money which he has received. In a case where it was not satisfactorily made out that this was not done, and it would not be made out in the absence of a proper demand for an account, it was held that no dishonest conversion could be found, which would justify the conviction of a partner under this section. 35 Cal 1108 ; see also 145 Ind Cas 416 : 37 CWN 982 : 1933 Cr C 953 : 34 Cr LJ 958 : AIR 1933 Cal 582 ; AIR 1956 UP 7 : 1956 UP 7 : 1956 Cr LJ 919 but see AIR 1932 Bom 57 : 1932 Cr C 81 : 33 Bom LR 1518 : 138 : 136 Ind Cas 493. When clause in partnership deed shows that one partner could sign on behalf of others, signing of document by one without consent of others' does not amount to criminal breach of trust or cheating. Anwarul Islam v. State of-West Bengal, 1996 Cr LJ 2912 (Cal).

6. Burden of proof.—Where in a charge of criminal breach of trust, the accused pleads payments to the proper person, the burden of proving non-payment is on the prosecution and not on the accused. Rat Un Cr C 872 ; see also 28 SLR 84 : AIR 1934 Sind 22 : 1934 Cr C 220. The prosecution must prove that trust has been created in respect of the property. 85 Ind Cas 839 ; 25 CWN 831 : 65 Ind Cas 1004 ; AIR 1950 Kutch 37.

7. Evidence.—"The evidence in support of a charge of criminal breach of trust must show : (1) that the accused person was in some manner entrusted with the property or with a domain over it. The offence consist in the betrayal of some trust or confidence reposed in the offender. Dealing concerning property between independent persons in the course of which debts or claims by one against the other arise are not subject of this offence. There can be no criminal misappropriation unless some trust or confidence exists, (2) It must be proved that the accused has dishonestly misappropriated or disposed of the property in violation of his duty. As to the proof of the criminal misappropriation in cases where money has been misappropriated, it will often be of the following kind either the offender has wilfully made false entries in his books or else he has denied or wilfully omitted to acknowledge the receipt of money. A person, who keeps the accounts, or otherwise duly acknowledges the receipt of money, cannot ordinarily be supposed to intend to commit a criminal breach of trust. On the other hand the mere fact of his making an entry in the books of account will not protect him. The fact of not paying over money or not accounting for it, will not probably of itself be thought sufficient to justify a conviction, even though the accused person sets up a frivolous excuse or advances a claim wholly unfounded. But the absconding of the accused, coupled, with a refusal to account or a false account, furnishes strong evidence of criminal misappropriation of the money. If the evidence in support of the charge leaves it doubtful whether the offence which has been committed is theft or criminal breach of trust, the Court may nevertheless proceed to judgment and award punishment (see Section 72)".—Morgan and Macpherson.

Where money was paid to a person for a particular purpose and in the case of the purpose, failing, it was appropriated towards a debt due to him, there is no offence of criminal breach of trust. 92 Ind Cas 895 : 27 Cr LJ 383. The question whether the property in the goods has or has not passed to the purchaser is relevant to the decision of cases under Section 409, I.P. Code, but it is not necessarily decisive. The decisive test is whether there was an entrustment within the meaning of Section 405, and the necessary criminal intent. AIR 1939 Sind 1 : 40 Cr LJ 173. A person can not be said to be entrusted with property within the meaning of Section 405, when he obtains possessions by trick. AIR 1942 Sind 162 : 44 Cr LJ 123. A trust implies confidence placed by one man in another. It implies necessarily that the confidence was freely given and that there is a true consent. There is no true consent if confidence is obtained as a result of a trick. If there was a trick or deceit, a true consent arise ; there can be no entrustment, and no offence under Section 406, I.P. Code, because an essential element of the offence is an entrustment. Ibid., see also 42 CWN 648. To establish an offence of criminal breach of trust it must be proved that the ownership or beneficial interest in the property in respect of which criminal breach of trust is alleged to have been committed must be in some person other than the accused and the latter must hold it on account of some person or in some way for his benefit. 1963 Raj LW 638 : ILR (1963) 13 Raj 1124 : 1964 (1) Cr LJ 614. 8. Cases.—To make out a case for criminal breach of trust, it is not sufficient to show that the money has been returned. From the provision of the agreement entered into between the petitioner and the Government it is clear that there is only entrustments of the materials to the petitioner which he is liable to account to the department at the time of completion of the work or termination of the contract. There is no stipulation of payment of sales tax etc. By the petitioner to the Government for the materials supplied so as to attract the characteristics of sale. Merely because of the fact that the agreement provides right to the respondents to realise double the value of the materials found short with the petitioner the entrustment will not become a sale and it will only mean the penalty provided for the failure of the return of the entrusted materials. Therefore in view of the fact that the terms of the contract involved in this case clearly established that the department materials are entrusted to the petitioner so as to attract the offence of breach of trust punishable under S. 406, I.P.C., the contention raised by the petitioner that the facts and circumstances of the case and the materials on record do not disclose even prima facie the offence punishable under S. 406, IPC, alleged against him is not sustainable. The fact that another case is instituted by the respondents against one Krishnan Nair alleging offence punishable under S. 378, IPC with regard to certain materials alleged to have been committed in breach of trust by the petitioner herein is no ground for the petitioner to seek discharge in this case on the ground that no case is made out against him. The fact that the provisions of the agreement contain a clause for arbitration and respondents had resorted to arbitration and the arbitration proceedings are pending against him is also no ground to discharge the petitioner in this case. Further the fact that a civil remedy is available to the respondents to realise the amount due from the petitioner to the respondents in respect of which breach of trust is alleged to have been committed by the petitioner in this case will not in any way affect the right of the respondents to prosecute the petitioner for the criminal liability of breach of trust. C.K. Sreedharan v. State of Kerala 1999 Cri LJ 758 (Ker).

9. Compounding of Offences.—Accused charged for criminal breach of trust but later on accused entered into a compromise and compromise deed was signed, however payment was made outside the court. In such circumstances permission for compounding the offence can be granted. Without expressing any opinion on merits of the case, it is stated that in the present case the accused respondent was acquitted on the basis of compromise and since payment was made outside the Court, therefore, no purpose will be served in proceeding further against no call any interference by the Court. State of Rajasthan v. Akhlesh Kumar Sharma, 2002 Cri LJ 2347 (Raj).

10. Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoun-dable—Triable by Court of Session.

11. Charge.—I (name and office of the Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows :

That on or about the .... day of............. at............. you being entrusted with .... (mention the property) committed criminal breach of trust, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 406 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

12. Conviction and sentence.—A man of unsound mind should not be convicted under this section. AIR 1939 Mad 407 : 40 Cr LJ 642. Where sentence is inadequate, vide AIR 1943 Sind 164 : 44 Cr LJ 798. In AIR 1972 SC 1809, it has held that while a Magistrate's powers are specifically limited by Section 33 of the Criminal Procedure Code, they must also be exercised as not to contravene Section 65 of the Indian Penal Code.

13. Practice and procedure.—On being summoned in a complaint case, one of the accused filed a revision. It was found that the accused-petitioner was unaware of the specific. The complaint against him was, therefore, quashed. (1986) 2 Crimes 449 (Del).

Where the Magistrate in a complaint case issued a process to the accused who moved for quashing it on the plea that the dispute related to a civil matter. The complaint did not contain the allegation that the property was purchased at Nayagaon, may the property in question did not lie in Assam. Held, no case was made out and there was no reason to hold him guilty of any offence. (1986) 2 Crimes 408 (Gau).

Where petition was filed under quashing complaint filed by respondent against petitioner—Offences was held under I.P.C.—Offences were non compoundable—Respondent's wife filing application before Magistrate to dismiss her complaint. Since offences are non-compoundable application not allowed. However, since parties have compromised it will be mock trial ultimately resulting in acquittal. Complaint quashed. Rajpal v. Smt. Rani, (1995) XXII Cr LT 76 (P&H).

23. Acquittal.—When certain amount was withdrawn from Co-operative Society of which accused was Sanchalak, it would create civil liability only and hence accused acquitted. Nathu Singh v. Ram Singh, 1994 (31) ACC 835.

The accused while working as secretary of Cooperative Bank failed to distribute the cash amongst the loanee members and misappropriated the same. He had accepted the entrustment of money but pleaded that the same was not distributed as while returning from bank the money was robbed from him. It was found that money had been recovered and robbery case against four persons was still pending. Prosecution had also failed to prove his case beyond reasonable doubt. Hence acquittal of accused was proper. Sadasiv Mahapatra v. Prafulla Kumar Das, 2003 Cr LJ 3947 (Ori) : 2003(25) OCR 606 : 2003(2) Orissa LR 122.

24. Nonpayment of Provident Fund dues—Offences by Companies.—A Company is primarily liable for an offence under the Act. The said liability may extend to other persons only under the conditions laid down in the aforesaid Section. In other words, vicarious liability only arises to the directors if the conditions laid down for the Provision under Section 14-A are fulfilled. A director of a company may be concerned only with the policy to be followed and he may not have any role in the management of the day-to-day affairs of the company. Such persons are, in other words immune from prosecution. In the instant complaint/report filed, apart from the allegation and the statement made by the informant that the Directors of the Company have legal duty to deposit the provident fund, there is no other averment or material from which the Magistrate could have satisfied himself that petitioners are either responsible for the conduct of the business of the Company or they took part in the running of it. Furthermore, there is a specific bar against the Court taking cognizance and proceeding with trial of such offences, under Section 14-AC of the Act of 1952, except on a report in writing of the facts constituting such offence made with previous sanction of the Central Provident Fund Commissioner or such other officer as may be authorized by the Central Government. Therefore, making of bald allegations in the complaint, is not enough to attract the provisions under the Act of 1952. The facts essential to constitute the offence attracting the provisions have to be stated. Therefore, in the absence of necessary allegations of the facts attracting the provisions of the Act of 1952 or the Penal Code, it cannot be said that the prosecution launched and cognizance taken by the Magistrate against accused-petitioners is proper. Thus, order of cognizance and process issued against accused-petitioners deserve to be set aside. However, the order of cognizance passed by the Magistrate as against the Company would be proper. Mod Alkalies and Chemicals Ltd. and Ors. v. State of Rajasthan, 2008 CriLJ 2879 (Raj).

1. Scope.—"A clerk or servant who takes his master's property is punishable for theft (See Section 381). The present provision seems to apply to cases in which there is some special trust, as where the clerk or servant is entrusted with his master's property that he may sell or dispose of it, or where he is appointed to collect money and to pay it over to his employer. The criminal misappropriation by such person of the particular property entrusted to him, is an offence here made punishable in the same manner as the taking of master's property by a servant when the property taken is not in his possession or charge in the time of his service or employment, as the theft by a menial servant of money or other property from his master's house."—Morgan and Macpherson, 369. The Complainant a displaced person, was allotted a shop by Rehabilitation Department. He was not allowed to enter us own shop by the accused person. The complainant had been harassed for almost four decades and was compelled to spend most of his life in the court proceedings all these years, the complainant was pushed from pillars to posts. Perhaps that was one of the most exceptional cases in which admittedly the real owner of the shop was deprived of its possession and use for almost four decades and during this period, he was not paid a penny as a rent or compensation in any form. It was held that even if the entry into the shop was lawful and the accused persons retained it unlawfully and dishonestly for more than 37 years and therefore they were clearly guilty of committing continuous trespass for all these years which is punishable under Section 448, IPC. Kripal Singh v. Wazir Singh 2001 Cri LJ 1566 (Delhi) : 2001(1) CCR 486 : 2001(1) JCC 104 (Del.).

2. Charge of general deficiency.—On a charge under Section 408, I.P. Code, of general deficiency in a certain fund handled by the accused. It is open to the Court to examine the evidence in respect of each item of money embezzled which went to make up the total sums embezzled as entered in the chargesheet. This is a way of examining the facts of the case which is most favourable to the accused; and he certainly cannot complain that he has been in any way prejudiced thereby. 164 Ind Cas 302 : 37 Cr LJ 941 : 1936 OWN 607 : Cr C 985 : AIR 1939 Oudh 376.

3. Cases.—In order to sustain a conviction for the abetment of criminal breach of trust by a servant, it must be proved that the accused knew that in respect of such transaction, the servant was acting dishonestly and was committing a breach of trust, and that the accused abetted the servant in doing it. 4 CWN 306. The accused was a clerk and charged for offence of criminal breach of trust but documents produced showed that accused at no time was entrusted with money of society. It was alleged against the accused who was working as cashier-cum-accountant in the complainants company that he made wrong totals and misappropriated the amount belonging to the complainants. It was found that accounts on which the presention relied were not regularly kept though the entries were made by the accused himself the accounts books were always in the custody of the complainant and his other two clerks working in the office. The compulsion made by the accused was found not to be voluntarily made. It was inferred from the circumstances that it was made under threat and coercion. The accused was held entitled to acquittal. Dwarkadas Rameshwar Paldiwal v. Satyanarayan Makhanlal Gododiya 1999 Cri LJ 4425 (Bom).

In Nandlal Lakhata v. State of Bihar, 2001 Cri LJ 1900 (Pat) by virtue of a fresh deed of 1992 the petitioner was made a working partner and also was getting salary from the firm. He was made sole incharge of the business and all transactions of the firm were to be carried on by him in the capacity of the working partner. The complainant alleged that the statement regarding stock and its amount was found to be false on physical verification. When the stock was verified it was found that the article which were available on that date were of Rs. 5,75,555.12 p., whereas according to the statement prepared by the petitioner the materials in the stock were available of worth Rs. 4,22,625.16 p. Thus, according to the complainant there was less stock of materials found in the firm premises. Moreover, subsequently it was found that the complainant left Patna after locking the firm. The argument that being a partner of the firm the petitioner cannot be said to have committed criminal breach of trust and, therefore, it was a case of civil liability only cannot be accepted and the accused was held liable for committing criminal breach of trust.

Traditionally a conviction under section 409, IPC would invariably a jail sentence of varying duration according to the amount involved, the inevitable result being that the accused spends a period of time in jail at the state expense, benefit by virtue of retention of the property and the complainant or the aggrieved institution is the worst affected having to writ off the loss that has occurred. A court must aim at off setting these factors while in no uncertain terms conveying the message that crime does not pay by ensuring that there is no unjust enrichment occurring to the accused and that the party is made to part with much more than what has been taken away. In property offeneces and where misappropriation of money is involved, an accused would cheerfully sit in jail at state expense and then come out and benefit from the unjust enrichement and it is this aspect that the courts need to take cognizance of while it is unfair and unnecessary to burden the state by maintaining the accused in a jail for years together and increasing the number of unemployed thereafter. It appears far more rational that the three fold objective would be acheved by imposing a fine on the accused of at least three times the amount involved in the offence and by not prescribing the money in default sentence because again experience has shown that many an accused would find it more profitable to stay in jail for sometime rather than pay up a heavey fine. Also by following such a procedure the aggrieved party of the institution can be adequately compensated. State v. Hanamappa, 2000 Cri LJ 2428 (Kant) : ILR 2000 Kant 1974 : 2000(2) Kant LJ 362 : 2000(3) Cur Cr R 328 (Kant).

1. Amendment.—The words in italics were substituted for the words "transportation for life" by Act 26 of 1955, Section 117 and Sch. with effect from 1.1.1956.

2. Scope.—"The criminal breach of trust which is here punishable is committed only when the banker, merchant, etc., is entrusted in the way of his business with property or with documents which give him dominion over property, and not otherwise it seems that the property must be entrusted to him in such manner that he becomes subject, by contract, express or implied, or by force of law, to a certain duty in regard to it. A factor or agent who sells the goods of his employer and receives the money on his behalf, if he commits a criminal breach of trust by dishonestly misappropriating his principal's money will be punishable under this section. But the relation between a banker and his customer is not necessarily of the same fiduciary kind. The money which the customer place in his banker's custody becomes the banker's money ; he may employ it as he pleases and he commits no breach of trust even he puts it in jeopardy ; only he is of course answerable for the payment of the amount which he has received. It seems that a banker would be criminally liable under the present section only in case he under took some particular duty (in the way of his business) in relation to the property entrusted to him ; as if he received Government paper or other securities into his custody, undertaking to keep them safely, and to receive interest, etc.—" Morgan and Macpherson, 369, 16 All 88. For a conviction under this section all the elements laid down as constituting the offence must be provided and if the charge is that a worthless property has been substituted for a valuable one, it must be positively shows that there was some valuable property in the package when it came under the control of the accused. 41 Cr LJ 37 : 86 Ind Cas 38 : 26 Cr LJ 662 : 29 CWN 260 : AIR 1925 Cal 501. To make out an offence under this section a criminal intention is necessary and this is a matter of inference from the facts proved. But it cannot be sustained in respect to the acts from an agent. 87 Ind Cas 962 : 26 Cr LJ 1042 : AIR 1925 Oudh 675. If the property under the control of the public servant disappears and his connection with the conspiracy is proved, conviction will follow, even when there is not the slightest evidence of any money having been received by him. 28 OC 230 : 88 Ind Cas 830 : 26 Cr LJ 1217. When a postmaster received a V.P. letter and handed over the same to the addressee without getting payment on or before 20-10-25 and then altered his account so as to make it appear that he only handed it over again on 20-10-15, held, that he was guilty of criminal breach of trust and falsification of accounts in the absence of proof by him of the absence of dishonest intention. 102 Ind Cas 488 : 28 Cr LJ 522 : 52 MLJ 703. Where it was found that the accused was a "tax- daroga" and cashier of the Municipality, that the amounts which he is said to have embezzled were received by him and that he failed to account for them, held, that all the elements constituting an offence under this section were present. 45 CLJ 207 : 28 Cr LJ 469 : AIR 1937 Cal 409. A person accused of offence under this section is not protected by Section 136, Bombay Local Boards Act. AIR 1942 Sind 45 : 43 Cr LJ 514.

An offence under Section 409 presupposes an entrustment. But in the case of a deposit with a banker, it becomes the money of the bank he is only under a contractual obligation to pay the sum deposited when demanded. 5 AI Cr D 53 : 1950 ALJ 808 : 1951 AWR (HC) 85. Though the Tahsildar and the Treasurer were ultimately responsible for the cash and the cashier had only the cash-book, yet it cannot be denied that he was entrusted with the cash when he handled the cash day to day and was responsible for cash in the sub-treasury. AIR 1951 Am 15. See (1956) 9 Sau LR 323, where it was held that the gist of the offence under the section is that the accused, though he might be a public servant, must be shown to have been either required or authorised to receive the property in respect of which the breach is alleged.

Section 409 is limited to a class and does not apply to every one who may happen to be interested as prescribed by the section, but only to the class of persons therein pointed out. PCA No. 38 of 1952, dated 3.3.1953 (PC).

3. Intention.—So far as the present case is concerned, the accused respondent handed over the charge to P.W.3 Badri Dan on 17.1.1984 and in the charge handing over report he wrote that the above mentioned amount was with him and he would deposit the said amount and the same was deposited by him on 3.2.1984 and the reason for depositing that amount on 3.2.1984, as stated by the accused respondent, is that his father died on 25.1.1984. In these circumstances to say that the accused respondent committed criminal breach of trust for that amount cannot be accepted as there was no dishonest intention on the part of accused respondent. Had there been dishonest intention, he would not have mentioned in the charge report about that amount. State of Rajasthan v. Magar Ram, 2002 Cri LJ 3307 (Raj.) : 2002(3) Raj Cri C 1406 : 2002(3) Raj LR 247 : 2002(3) WLC 252.

4. Section 409 and Prevention of Corruption Act.—In 1954 Cr LJ 96 : AJR 1954 All 80, the validity of the provisions of the section were challenged on the ground of discrimination in case of the prosecution of a person for an offence under Section 409, I.P.C. and not for an offence under Section 5 (1) (C) of the Prevention of Corruption Act. It was held that the provisions do not offend Article 14 of Constitution and are not void in view of Article 13 (1) of the Constitution : see also AIR 1954 All 80 : 1954 Cr LJ 9 : AIR 1957 Punj 110 : 1957 Cr LJ 659 ; AIR 1957 SC 458 : 1957 SCJ 229 : 1957 Cr LJ 575 ; AIR 1957 SC 592 : 1957 SCJ 519 : 1957 Cr LJ 892 (where it was held that the offence under Section 5(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act and Section 409 of Penal Code are not identical). The question again arose whether Section 5(l)(c) of the Prevention of Corruption Act prior to amendment in 1952, protanto repeals Section 409 and it was answered in the negative in 1957 MLJ(Cr) 599 : 1958 Cr LJ 15 and AIR 1957 458 ; AIR 1955 Bom 451 : ILR 1955 Bom 484 ; AIR 1954 HP 76 : 1954 Cr LJ 1481 ; AIR 1954 Raj 211 : 1954 Cr LJ 1446 : AIR 1954 Hyd 56 : ILR 1953 Hyd 573 : 1954 Cr LJ 464 ; AIR 1953 Cal 681. The offence created by Section 5(1) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 is distinct and separate from this section. AIR 1960 SC 397 : 1960 Cr LJ 539 : AIR 1958 AP 29 : (1957) 2 Andh WR 332. See in this connection the offence under this Section and Section 4 of the Employees Provident Funds Act, 1973 which can not be deemed to be the same offence. 1976 Cr LJ 838.

If the Special Judge has no jurisdiction to try an offence under Section 5(2) of the P.C. Act for want of valid sanction, he lacks jurisdiction to take cognizance of allied offences and to try the same, in view of the specific powers on a Special Judge with limitations specified in Section 7(3) of the Amendment Act. Where there is no valid sanction for prosecution under Section 5(1)(c) read with Section 5(2) the conclusion becomes inevitable that, the orders of conviction recorded against the accused in respect of the charges under Sections 409 and 468 of the IPC and the sentences passed against him thereunder cannot be sustained and thus, are liable to be set aside. Duryodhan Patra vs. State of Orissa, 2010 (3) CrLJ 2505 (Orissa).

5. Criminal breach of trust or cheating.—Held, on fact that the applicant could be held liable for the offence of cheating ,and obtaining delivery of property by commission of that offence, which would be punishable under Section 420 and Section 409 would not apply. AIR 1957 All 122 : 1957 Cr LJ 110 : 1957 All LJ 147.

When accused departed from terms and exhibited film publicly without consent of complainant as owner of film, accused committed the offence of breach of trust. Krishna Rao Keshav v. State of U.P, 1997 Cri LJ 1129 (Alld).

As correctly pointed out by the learned Special Public Prosecutor and as laid down in the decision in Vishwa Natn v. State of J. & K. AIR 1983 SC 174; 1983 Cri LJ 231, after committing the criminal breach of trust in respect of the money over which the accused had complete dominion, the refund of the amount after detection would not absolve him of the offence. Once it is proved that the amount was entrusted to him, then under Section 106 of the Evidence Act, he was to establish as to what happened to the said amount and that fact lies within the knowledge of the accused and as such, the burden of establishing the said fact is upon him. In this case, according to the defence, the appellant never received any amount from the loanees. But alternatively, it is contended that the amount had been paid back. This cannot be accepted because the person, who received back the amount from the appellant himself, has come to the box and deposed that after receipt of the money, the appellant made false entries in the pass-books. He had also stated that after the entire loan amount had been discharged, the appellant made entry in the passbook to the effect that the entire loan had been paid to the Bank. S. Jayaseelan v. State by SPF, C.BI, Madras, 2002 Cri LJ 732 (Mad.) : 2002(2) Rec Cri R 484.

Where in a scheme for sale of Canadian gold coins, there was neither entrustment of any property nor act of deceiving any person fraudulently or dishonestly, involved in the scheme. 6. Essentials of the offence.—Before a person can be said to have committed criminal breach of trust within the meaning of Section 405 I.P.C., it must be established that he was either entrusted with dominion over property which he is said to have converted to his own use. In order, to establish "entrustment of dominion" over property to an accused person the mere existence of that person's dominion over property is not enough. It must be further shown that his dominion was the result of entrustment. (1965) 1 SC WR 586 : 1965 (2) Cr LJ 431 : (1965) 2 SCJ 186 : AIR 1965 SC 1433 (nature of the dominion of the partnership was not one of the kind contemplated in the section). See also (1963) 1 SCR 253 : 1962 (2) Cr LJ 805 : AIR 1962 SC 182 (in case of director of the company) where it was held that what Section 409 requires is that the person alleged to have committed criminal breach of trust with respect to any property be entrusted with that property or with dominion over that property in the way of his business as an agent. The expression in the way of his business' means that the property is entrusted to him in the ordinary course of his duty. It is not correct to say that the word 'agent' refers to a professional agent. 1953 AC 407 and (1985) 16 QBD 487 and 1935 Mad WN 649 distinguished.

Criminal breach of trust can still be established in the absence of any evidence showing the modus operandi in committing embezzlement or showing how and by whom goods were removed. 1965 (1) Cr LJ 539 : AIR 1965 All 233.

Any dishonest removal of materials in charge of a public servant by himself or by some one else at his instance, amounts to criminal breach of trust under Section 409 I.P. In a case of goods consigned by railway found to be rotten and owner not turning up, the station master ordered destruction of potatoes but the goods clerk instead of destroying the same sold it. Held the goods clerk was guilty of offence under Section 409. ILR 1950 Nag 957 : AIR 1951 Nag 150 : 52 Cr LJ 36.

Where there was no offence under Section 420, I.P.C., conviction has been made out against the respondents and prosecution has failed to prove the ingredients required to be established by prosecution to convict the accused persons under Sections 465/471, I.P.C. Therefore the respondents cannot be convicted on the basis of evidence brought on record by prosecution. No offence under Sections 409, 420/465 and 471 is made out. State of Haryana v. Prem Singh, (1994) 2 Recent CR 725 : (1994) 3 Recent Cr R 69 (DB) (P&H).

7. Trust.—The existence or non-existence of trust in any particular case does not depend upon the use of legal terms employed by the parties but upon the actual facts of the case. AIR 1938 Sind 57. 9. Dishonesty.—When a person misappropriates to his own use property that does not belong to him, the misappropriation is dishonesty even though he intended to restore it at some future time. LBR (1827-1892) 505. The prosecution is not bound to prove the actual mode of misappropriation. 8 Ind Cas 687. Dishonesty is an essential ingredient in the offence of Criminal Breach of Trust under Section 409, I.P. Code, and must be proved before there can be conviction. 11. Breach of trust by agent.—The offence of criminal breach of trust by an agent is made out if it is shown that the person charged was entrusted with the property or money in question in his capacity of an agent. Section 409 does not require that he should still be an agent at the time of the commission of the breach of trust. Once it is shown that the property or money was entrusted to the accused in his capacity of an agent, the offence falls under Section 409, 15 Pat 108 : 164 Ind Cas 74 : 37 Cr LJ 877 : 17 Pat LT 302 : AIR 1936 Pat 350.

Secretary of Co-operative Society is an agent of the society with in the meaning of Section 409, I.P.C. (1988) 1 Crimes 662 (SN).

12. Sale Transactions.—The complainant who is a dealer and supplier of raw materials for pharmaceutical Industries supplied certain material to accused. These goods were supplied on credit. After the accused fell in arrears in respect of the bill relating to those goods, the complainant approached the accused to make payment on which thirteen cheques were issued towards payments of amount due by the accused to the complainant. The cheques were bounced. It was on the basis of the said allegation that the comlainant sought to prosecute the accused of offences under section 409, IPC. The court observed and held as under: "Admittedly the goods in question were sold by the comlainant to the accused which means that the title in the property passed to the accused the moment the sale was completed. It may be pertinent to remember that passing of the in title in the movable property is not dependent on the payment of sale consideration and it is completed when an offer to purchase at a price is accepted by the buyer and the delivery of goods or payment of price or both may be postponed under the agreement as contemplated in Section 5 of Sale of Goods Act. Thus the question of commission of any offence under section 409 or even under section 406 of the IPC in respect of goods sold in this case does not arise. M/s HICEL Pharma Ltd v. State of AP, 2000 Cri LJ 2566 (AP) : 2000(2) An LT (Cri) 260(262).

13. Principal and Agent.—In the instant case, the accused was appointed as sales organiser meaning thereby that he was working as agent. The accounts were settled and a sum of Rs. 23.37 lacs was found outstanding against the accused. It was held that there was a dispute of accounting between principal and agent and that the agent could not be hasassed for such a dispute by resort to the criminal proceedings. *S.K. Agarwal v. 14. 15. Splitting up and Joinder of charges.—A Secretary of a Co-operative Central Bank and the Assistant Secretary between them embezzled the deposits which were sent from other Central Banks. The offences alleged were conspiracy to commit criminal breach of trust and also specific charges with regard to definite sums of money. When the case came on for trial the prosecution split up the case to be tried into four separate trials. In the first trial, the Secretary was given three years under Section 409. He was also convicted of conspiracy. No separate sentence was passed upon him. In the second trial, he had been given two years under Section 409. No separate sentence for conspiracy was passed upon him. Assistant Secretary was given three years under Section 409 in the first trial and four years in the second trial. No separate sentence was passed upon him on the conspiracy charge. The prosecution in the first trial alleged a separate conspiracy to embezzle a particular sum of money. In the second trial, they went a little further and alleged a separate conspiracy to embezzle money coming from a certain Bank ; Held, that the method of splitting up the charges as adopted by the prosecution was improper. AIR 1938 Cal 697.

17. Banker.—For an offence under Section 409, the fist esential ingredient to be proved is that the property was entrusted. When Section 405 which speaks of a person being in any manner entrusted with property, it does not contemplate the creation of a trust with all the technologies of the law of trust. It contemplates the creation of a relationship whereby the owner of the property makes it over to another person to be retained by him on the happening of certain event. The person who transfers possession of the property to the second party still remains the legal owner of the property and the person in whose favour possession is so transferred has only the custody of the property to be kept or disposed of by him for the benefit of the other party, the person so put in possession only obtaining as a special interest by way of a claim for money advanced or spent upon the safe keeping of the thing or such other incidental expenses as may have been incurred by him. When securities have been delivered with a view to cover the repayment of any overdraft by the pledger Bank to the pledge Bank and it is agreed that they are to be disposed of the arising of stipulated contingency only then by the very fact of the delivery of the securities to the bailee, the latter becomes a trustee in terms of the contract not for all purposes but only for the limited purposes indicated by the agreement between the party. Unless a person has a direct witness of writing of another person, the evidence of such a person cannot be considered, as a truthful witness unless circumstances justify that he had an opportunity to see the accused at the time of writing. In the instant case the informant though had a chance to see the accused petitioner at the time of writing when he was discharging his official duties, but there is no statement made by PW 3 that he had any occasion to see the accused petitioner at the time of writing or putting his signature. Not only that he also did not identify writing of the torn cheque on the basis of which the handwriting expert gave his opinion and PW 3 though at the relevant time was the Incharge Manager of the Bank had the opportunity to see the hand writing of the accused petitioner, he stated he had no occasion to go through the hand writing of the accused petitioner. Therefore, the sole basis of conviction on the basis of the alleged hand writing of the accused petitioner fails.

It is settled law that in a criminal case, if the prosecution fails to produce any witness like in the instant case, the handwriting expert, an adverse presumption is to be drawn against the prosecution for non-production of the said witness. In the instant case, the prosecution even did not try to examine the handwriting expert. Not only that the trial Court also did not feel it necessary to examine handwriting expert even when the Apex Court observed that without examining the expert as a witness in Court no reliance can be placed on the opinion evidence. In the instant case, there can be no doubt that relying on the opinion evidence and the evidence of PW 1, the Courts below committed an error and acted on emotion and sentiments, rather without legal admissible and trustworthy evidence to influence their judgment. The evidence on record does not establish the case against the accused petitioner beyond reasonable doubt. Satyajit Roy vs. State of Tripura, 2010 (3) CriLJ 3397 (Gau).

18. Breach of trust by employee of post office.—Where the accused who functioned as sub-post Master did not take requisite care before passing vouchers and did not care to verify whether the vouchers were genuine or forged thereby permitted a large number of fraudulent withdrawals on the basis of forged vouchers, it was held, even though, it could be said that accused acted in a negligent manner but that by itself would not constitute an offence under Section 409, IPC, though it may expose the accused to disciplinary action under the relevant rules. *L. 21. Purchase of land by Chief Minister.—Tamil Nadu Small Scale Industries Corporation Ltd. (TANSI) a Govt. company decided to sell its defunct units for which tenders were invited. The firm of which Chief Minister of State (TN) was a partner was highest tenderer. The highest tender was accepted and land was sold to Chief Minister's firm. The foundation of charge was that the property in question was deliberately sold for less value with a view to confer pecuniary advantage to Chief Minister's firm which resulted in loss to the state company and gain to Chief Minister. The trial Court convicted all the accused but High Court acquitted them in appeal. Further appeal having been preferred to Supreme Court, it was held that in view of failure of the prosecution to show that the guide line value is Rs. 7.32 lakh per ground and in view of the positive evidence as brought out showing that the value of land of TANSI foundry unit could be about 3 Lakhs per ground particularly when the sale was by way of open tender, it cannot be said beyond reasonable doubt that the property in question had been under sold and there was loss to TANSI. Though Court held the accused Chief Minister not guilty but advised her to return the property to TANSI uncondition-ally. R. Sai Bharathi v. *J. 23. Temporary misappropriation.—In appropriate case if the court is satisfied that the accused had made good the loss that at the very highest this may be a ground for leniency but that it can never be a ground for a court to condone the entire act and hold that the offence has not been committed. The law makes a very clear provision for offences of temporary misappropriation and breach of trust and similarly. in cases where property has been removed fradulently and dishonestly and theft or robbery has taken place it is necessary to very clearly lay down that the law envisages that the offence is complete when the ingredients of the section are satisfied. There can be no condonation of completed offences. State of Karnataka v. Mazhar Alam. 2000 Cri LJ 2534 (Kant).

The defence of the accused was that the amount of Rs. 10.500/- was not taken away by him but that it was being taken to the Head Post Office for deposit and that the bag was lost in the lorry while in transit. There was enough evidence on record to satisfy the court that the defence taken was plausible and at the earliest point of time the accused admitted the liability. made good the amount to the post office. On a combination of these factors. it was held that that was a case where the offence could not be said to have been completed and the facts of the case really constitute an exception to the general rule. Ibid.

24. Evidence and proof.—To establish a charge of criminal breach of trust. the prosecution is not obliged to prove the precise mode of conversion. misappropriation or misapplication by the accused of the property entrusted to him over which he has dominion. The principal ingredient of the offence being dishonest misappropriation or conversion which may not ordinarily be a matter of direct proof. entrustment of property and failure in breach of an obligation to account for the property entrusted. if proved. may in the light of other circumstances. justifiably lead to an inference of dishonest misappropriation or conversion. It is not necessary nor possible in every case to prove in that precise manner the accused person has dealt with or misappropriated the goods of his master. Long pendency of matter. The social impact of the crime, e.g. where it relates to offences against women, dacoity, kidnapping, misappropriation of public money, treason and other offences involving moral turpitude or moral delinquency which have great impact on social order, and public interest, cannot be lost sight of and per se require exemplary treatment. Any liberal attitude by imposing meager sentences or taking too sympathetic a view merely on account of lapse of time in respect of such offences will be result-wise counter productive in the long run and against societal interest which needs to be cared for and strengthened by string of deterrence inbuilt in the sentencing system. Ankush Maruti Shinde vs. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2009 SC 2609 : 2009 (6) SCC 667 : 2009 (6) JT 358 : 2009 (7) SCR 182 : 2009 (6) Scale 388 : 2009 (3) Supreme 760 : 2009 (4) SLT 470;; See also Bikram Dorjee vs. State of West Bengal, AIR 2009 SC 2539 : 2009 (2) Crimes 354 (SC) : 2009 (7) JT 325 : 2009 (6) Scale 325 : 2009 (6) SCR 884 : 2009 (3) Supreme 772.

Taking into consideration the facts and circumstances of the case that the petitioner is not stated to be a previous convict, that he is employed with the State Government and that he may lose his job in case he remains in jail, petitioner has faced protracted litigation and has undergone sufficient mental harassment. So keeping in view the circumstances of the case, it is a fit case that no useful purpose would be served by sending the petitioner to jail for undergoing the remaining period of imprisonment. Geeta Rani v. State of Haryana, (1994) 1 CC Cases 397 at P. 401 (P&H).

Where there was conviction order and appeal was filed against the appellant was in jail for more than two months. Sentence was reduced to the period already undergone. Raj Singh v. State of U.P., 1994 SCC (Cri) 1785 : 1995 Supp(4) SCC 500.

The counsel for the appellant has only prayed for reduction of sentence so that the appellant was not incarcerated at such distance of time. The offence took place wayback in July 1969. No purpose would be served now in incarcerating the appellant at this stage. Yet the law must have its course. Section 409, I.P.C. leaves no choice with the Court, but to award some imprisonment besides imposition of fine. The Supreme Court was apprised as to whether the appellant had suffered any incarceration during the stage of investigation. If he had then the custody so suffered, which was reckonable, should be taken to be the imprisonment already undergone for the offence committed and the Supreme Court reduced the period of imprisonment to that period while sustaining that of fine. But in case the appellant had not suffered any imprisonment so far. Then the Court reduces his sentence till the rising of the Court while sustaining the fine. To fulfil either purpose, the Special Judge, District Bankantha, Palanipur was directed to summon the appellant and to verify these faces and should it be necessary, to keep him imprisoned till the rising of the Court as ordered as the second alternative. Jaydev Shrichand Danani v. State of Gujarat, 1992 Cr LJ 3595 at 3596 SC.

As regards sentence, the court held that though the facts that the accused had lost has jab and also he paid back the misappriated amount could be taken into consideration, it could not be forgotten that the accused had committed the act of dishonesty not only towards the Bank but also to the Public. However in view of the fact that the accused had been facing the agony for a long time the sentence of two years was reduced to 1½ years on each count. *Jayaseelan v. The accused more than fully reimbursed the entire amount that was found to be short. The trial of the accused dragged on for about 10 years. The moment the offence was detected he was placed under arrest and suspension. In view of the above circumstances, it was held that the accused deserved maximum leniency in grant of sentence and that the award of sentence of simple imprisonment till rising of court along with fine would be proper. State of Karnataka v. Basappa 2000 Cri LJ 2327 (Kar) : ILR 2000 Kant 2361 : 2000(6) Kant LJ 187 (Karn) (DBI).

Misappropriation of small sum which too is deposited after a long period, merits leniency in award of sentence. Dasarathi @ Bhalana Nath Madal v. State of Bihar, 1997 (2) East Cr C 435 (Pat).

The offence was detected as early in 1978 and about 20 years have been lapsed, after the offence have been committed and detected for a few months he was in jail. Therefore the interest of justice will be met in the circumstances of the case, that he is sentenced to imprisonment for the period he had already undergone and also to pay a fine of Rs. 10,000/- in default R.I for six months for the aforesaid offences. Arun Parshuram Sutar v. State of Maharashtra 1999 Cri LJ 438 (Bom).

30. Procedure.—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Magistrate of the first class.

31. Charge.—I (name and office af Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of th accused) as follows ;—

That on or about the..........day of...........at.........you being in any manne entrusted with property, to wit.......... (or with any dominion over property, t wit..........) in your capacity of a public servant (or in the way of your business as banker, merchant, factor broker, attorney or agent), committed criminal breach of trus in respect of that property and that you thereby committed an offence punishable unde Section 409 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

A charge under Section I.P. Code framed in accordance with Section 222 (2 Criminal Procedure Code can be combined with charge under Section 477-A, I.P. Cod if the latter offence is committed in the same transaction. AIR Oudh 122 : 45 Cr LJ 538 Joinder of charges of criminal breach of trust in respect of three gross sums, each mad up of separate items alleged to have been committed within 12 months is bad. 44 CWN 175. Where postman is charged under Sections 409, 467 and 471 for misappropriatin amount of money order and forging thumb impression and using such forge document, sanction of the Governor General was held necessary for prosecution unde Section 471, but trial could proceed for other offences. AIR 1941 Mad 38 : 42 Cr L 263. Where the offence is of committing criminal breach of trust by accused as "a clerk or as agent of the company, he may be charged according to Section 408 and may b tried by a 2nd class Magistrate. But where the charge is on the alternative footing tha the breach of trust was committed either as a clerk or as an agent of the company a second class Magistrate has no Jurisdiction to try such an offence. 69 LW 487 : (1947 2 MLJ 163. Criminal breach of trust by a public servant is a very serious offence and i included in the category of these serious offences which cannot be punished wit imprisonment, the Court in this respect having no discretion as in the case o numberous other offences which are punishable with imprisonment define or with both AIR 1950 Lah 199 (FB).

32. Sanction.—It cannot dogmatically be said that no sanction is necessary, unde any circumstances, to prosecute a public servant for offence under Section 409. Th special circumstances of each case are to be examined, and if it is found that th offence mentioned in Section 409 was committed in the discharge of official duty sanction becomes necessary. AIR 1950 Raj 51.

Sanction under Section 197 of the Code is not a condition precedent for an offenc under Section 409, IPC and as such want of sanction would not vitiate conviction of a public servant where entrustment and misappropriation by a public servant have been proved. N. Bhargavan Pillai by LRs v. State of Kerala, (2004) 2 Crimes 415 (SC).

If the Special Judge has no jurisdiction to try an offence under Section 5(2) of the P.C. Act for want of valid sanction, he lacks jurisdiction to take cognizance of allied offences and to try the same, in view of the specific powers on a Special Judge with limitations specified in Section 7(3) of the Amendment Act. Where there is no valid sanction for prosecution under Section 5(1)(c) read with Section 5(2) the conclusion becomes inevitable that. the orders of conviction recorded against the accused in respect of the charges under Sections 409 and 468 of the IPC and the sentences passed against him thereunder cannot be sustained and thus, are liable to be set aside. Duryodhan Patra vs. State of Orissa, 2010 (3) CrLJ 2505 (Orissa).

Sanction is not required for every offence. AIR 1955 SC 309 ; AIR 1956 SC 44 ; AIR 1960 SC 266 ; AIR 1966 SC 220. (if the acts complained are so integrally connected with the duties attaching to the office to be inseparable from them, then only sanction under Section 197 (1) would be necessary) : 1982 Cr LJ 1058 see also (1979) 2 Cr LJ 1367 : 1980 Cr LJ 118 ; (1961) 2 Cr LJ 615 (sanction of the Company Court) ; 1979 Cr LJ 537 (criminal acts as alleged are to be taken).

Where there was sanction for prosecution under Section 6 of the Act sufficient for purpose of sanction required for prosecution under Section 409 of Code—Offence under Section 5(l)(c) of the Act and under Section 409 of Code are one and same. Thus joint trial is illegal. Ganesh Chandra Dilingia. v. D.S.P.E. (CBI), (1995) 3 Gau LR 186.

Sanction to prosecute a Treasury Jamadar. While the Treasury Officer, was absent a lambardar deposited his revenue collections with the Jamadar for being deposited in the treasury. Held, Jamadar was a public servant who defalcated it. 1986 Cr LJ 995.

Where release on probation was held illegal—Misappropriation of amounts was not larger. Conviction was held to be fully confirmed. State of Gujarat v. Mahesh Kumar Ambalal Rana, (1994) 1 Crimes 535 (Guj) : 1994 Cr LR (Guj) 5.

When accused was acquitted of offence under Section 468, I.P.C., he cannot be convicted for knowledge or reason to believe about alleged forged document under Sections 420 or 471, I.P.C. in absence of direct or independent evidence. Arvind Balashankar Goshi v. State, 1991 Cri LJ 2241 (Guj).

33. Conviction.—Where the offence was of criminal breach of trust by public servant accused—Accused has forged cheques—He is held to have misappropriated public funds available with him by making entries in cash book. Accused was held liable for conviction. State of Punjab v. Baj Singh, 1995 Cr LJ 1311 (P&H).

The accused recorded the debt amount as Kurk Amin, and did not deposit in account of the society. He clearly committed criminal misappropriation of property. Hence liable to be convicted under Section 409, I.P.C. State of U.P. v. Nar Singh, 1995 (32) ACC 355 (All).

Where offence was of criminal breach of trust and falsification of accounts—Appellant accused an Accountant in company made false accounts in respect of amounts received by him from a dealer, hence offence was established—Being Accountant accused cannot be absolved of liability of any transition—Conviction was upheld. Inder Sain Jain v. State of Punjab, 1994 Cr LJ 1224 (SC) : AIR 1994 SC 1065.

Quantum of sentence. Imposition of sentence without considering its effect on the social order in many cases may be in reality a futile exercise. The social impact of the crime, e.g. where it relates to offences against women, dacoity, kidnapping, misappropriation of public money, treason and other offences involving moral turpitude or moral delinquency which have great impact on social order, and public interest, cannot be lost sight of and per se require exemplary treatment. Any liberal attitude by imposing meager sentences or taking too sympathetic a view merely on account of lapse of time in respect of such offences will be result-wise counter productive in the long run and against societal interest which needs to be cared for and strengthened by string of deterrence inbuilt in the sentencing system. State of Madhya Pradesh vs. Basodi. AIR 2009 SC 3081 : 2009 CrLJ 4284 : 2009 (2) Crimes 273 (SC) : 2009 (12) SCC 318 : 2009 (6) JT 92 : 2009 (6) SCR 1166 : 2009 (6) Scale 353 : 2009 (3) Supreme 501;: See also State of Madhya Pradesh vs. Sheikh Shahid, AIR 2009 SC 2951 : 2009 (12) SCC 715 : 2009 (8) JT 277 : 2009 (5) SCR 1038 : 2009 (5) Scale 679 : 2009 (3) SLT 744.

34. Acquittal.—When entrustment of money not denied by accused but his plea that he had forced money to co-accused cashier not proved. accused can not be acquitted when cashier already acquitted by lower appellate court. Bagga Singh v. State of Punjab, 1996 Cri LJ 2003 (SC) : AIR 1996 (SC) 3035 : 1996(8) SCC 217 : 1996(2) JT 595 : 1996(2) Scale 462.

Where accused Government servant was receiving Government money on behalf of officer authorised to receive as he was absent in office—Prosecution has alleged non-return of money in Government account by accused—Forgery alleged in cash book showing return of money by accused—Prosecution failed to explain as to why authorised officer left a gap in cash book above his signature—Accused's defence was that he has returned money. Defence of accused was held probable and, therefore, he must get benefit of doubt. Jagat Narayan Jha v. State of Bihar. 1994 Cr LJ 1100 (SC) : 1995 SCC (Cr) 246 : 1995 Supp(4) SCC 518.

Where the prosecution was under Section 409, I.P.C.—Resulting in the acquittal of the accused—Appeal against the same was filed—no interference warranted unless the order of acquittal happens to be perverse. It is not possible to hold that the view expressed by the Additional Sessions Judge is not the reasonable view to take on the basis of evidence on record. The Additional Sessions Judge after detailed discussion and marshalling of evidence, has rightly come to the conclusion that the prosecution has failed to prove the guilty of the respondent beyond reasonable doubt. The case does not call for any interference. State (Delhi Administration) v. T. Narayanan, (1994) 53 DLT 738 at pp. 741 742 (Del).

In absence of evidence that if misappropriated amount was lying with accused he misappropriated it for his own use, conviction not sustainable. N. Kishan Rao v. State of A.P., 1997(1) Crimes 285 (AP).

It was alleged that the cashier and Accountant of PWD had made fictitious entries on vouchers causing monetary less. Neither vouchers which were alleged to be fictitious nor note/report of Audit Unit was produced. Executive Engineers did not enquire about the said vouchers from the concerned junior Engineers. It was also not shown that any of the two accused were responsible for maintenance and upkeep of vouchers. It was held that the factum of entrustment and factum of misappropriation of entrusted articles was not proved. Acquittal of accused was held proper. State of UP v. Ganga Sahai Saxena, 2004 Cr JL 2670 : 2004 All LJ 1417 (All.).

In a case the conductor of bus had not deposited amount of sale of tickets with corporation, the records showed that the said conductor was not on duty from the date of offence and he had sent amount through his relations after 11 days. Prosecution could not establish that the retention of amount was wrongful and absence of conductor was not for a valid reason. It was held that the acquittal of the said conductor was proper, as no loss had been caused to corporation. State of Karnataka v. *N.R. 35. Quashing of Proceeding.—If proceedings are quashed on account of delay it would cause his carriage of justice. Nawal Kishore Sinha v. State of Bihar, 1994 (1) East Cr C (NOC) 4 (Pat).

When non-receipt of goods by Municipal Committee was sent for petitioner relinquished his charge as Section Officer and transferred to another place—Goods as order were sent after his relinquishment of charge—Thus he has no liability for non-receipt of goods after he relinquished charge—Nothing showing any misappropriation of property of Municipal Committee. F.I.R. lodged against petitioner was quashed. Ishar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1995) XXII Cr LT 322 (P&H).

Where criminal proceedings has initiated—Petitioner entrusted with a buffalo in an execution application—Buffalo had died and F.I.R. against the same was filed—Compensation offered by petitioner—Criminal proceedings quashed. Gurchant Singh v. State of Punjab, (1994) 3 CC Cases 493 (P&H).

Where there was registration of case after 9 years—Petition was filed for quashing of F.I.R. for offence under Section 409. Finally it was held that after lapse of so many years from time the work was carried out, both petitioners shall obviously be handicapped in proving their defence and in this situation the delay in registration of the case and its investigation acquire greater significance. Hence F.I.R. and subsequent proceedings are quashed. Krishan Kumar v. State of Haryana, (1994) 1 Recent Cr R 274 : (1994) 1 CC Cases 169 : (1994) 1 CC Cases 71 (P&H).

36. Bail.—Grant of anticipatory bail in discretionary relief and it must be based on sound judicial consideration. S.K. Sarkar v. State of W.B., (1994) 2 CHN 204.

37. Probation.—Where offence was under Section 409, Indian Penal Code—Benefit of probation may not be given. In such offences benefit was not justified. State of Gujarat v. Mahesh Kumar Ambalal Rana, 1994 Cr LR 5 (Guj).

38. Expression "direction of law" in context of Secs. 405 and 409.—It must be noted in this respect that Banking norms and established practices and procedures would contain directions of law prescribing the mode in which the trust is to be discharged. The expression direction of law in the context of Secs. 405 and 409 would include not only legislations pure and simple but also directions, instruments and circulars issued by an authority entitled therefore. Mir Nagvi Askari vs C.B.I., AIR 2010 SC 528 : 2009 AIR SCW 7089

39. Meaning of "illegal" and "legally bound to do so"—It carries a very wide meaning. If any ground for civil action can be founded on the basis of any act of omission or commission on the part of a person, has act may be held to be illegal or it may be held that he was legally bound to do an act which he had omitted to do. If a person is guilty of breach of a departmental order, he may be held to be guilty as he was legally bound to act in terms thereof. It does not matter whether the violation was in relation to the circular issued by the Reserve Bank of India or whether it was in violation of the guidelines issued by the Bank itself. Sudhir Shantilal Mehta vs. C.B.I., 2009(8) SCC 1 : 2009(11) Scale 217: 2009(10) JT 554. .

40. Essential ingredients of.—An offence of criminal breach of trust by a public servant attracts the penal provisions of Section 409 of the Indian Penal Code. Indisputably, the Bank entrusted its funds to its officers; they had the dominion over the said property; they were holding the said money in trust which is an comprehensive expression, inter alia, to denote a relationship of master and servant. The act of Criminal Breach of Trust per se may involve a civil wrong but a breach of trust with an ingredient of mens rea would give rise to a criminal prosecution as well. The ingredients of Section 409 are : 1. Accused must be a public servant, merchant, agent, a factor, broker or an attorney. 2. In his such capacity he must be entrusted with some property or must have gained dominion thereover. 3. He must have committed criminal breach of trust. The criminal breach of trust would, inter alia, means using or disposing of the property by a person who is entrusted with or has otherwise dominion thereover. Such an act must not only be done dishonestly but also in violation of any direction of law or any contract express or implied relating to carrying out the trust. Sudhir Shantilal Mehta vs. C.B.I., 2009 (8) SCC 1 : 2009 (10) JT 554 : 2009 (12) SCR 682 : 2009 (11) Scale 217 : 2009 (6) SLT 135.

Ingredients of Section 409 of IPC read as under :

(1) The accused must be a public servant;

(2) He must have been entrusted, in such capacity with the property:

(3) He must have committed breach of trust in respect of such property.

No case of criminal misconduct on their part has been made out before the formation of the contract. There is nothing to show that the appellants herein who hold different positions in the appellant-company made any representation in their personal capacities and, thus, they cannot be made vicariously liable only because they are employees of the company.

The First Information Report contains details of the terms of contract entered into by and between the parties as also the mode and manner in which they were implemented. Allegations have been made against the appellants in relation to execution of the contract. Sharon Michael vs. State of Tamil Nadu, 2009 (3) SCC 375 : 2008 (17) SCR 1412 : 2008 (13) JT 551 : 2009 (1) Scale 627 : 2009 (1) SLT 593:: See also R. Kalyani vs. Janak C. Mehta, 2008 (14) Scale 85.

41. Securities scam—Bank officers dominion over bank funds.—In the present case, the same has been done dishonestly to cause wrongful gain to main accused and in the process wrongful loss has been caused to the Bank. The instruments based on which the funds of Andhra Bank were transferred to the account of main accused were not physically available with Andhra Bank at the time the accused persons authorized the transfer of the funds of Andhra Bank to the account of main accused.

Main accused also utilized the said credit given and accordingly even cheques issued by him were honoured. Had it not been for the credits given on the relevant dates his account would have been overdrawn. Interest was not charged from main accused and was not debited from his account and loss was therefore caused to the bank.

Established banking norms are binding on an officer of the Bank in the matter of discharge of the trust i.e. in dealing with the money entrusted to him. He is required to follow the same and that would be an implied term of his contract of service as an officer of the bank. The accused before us here acted in breach of the same. We are therefore of the opinion that the prosecution has sufficiently been able to prove the involvement of co-accused as regards the offence of criminal breach of trust. Mir Nagvi Askari vs C.B.I., AIR 2010 SC 528 : 2009 AIR SCW 7089

OF THE RECEIVING OF STOLEN PROPERTY

Sec. 410. Stolen Property.—Property, the possession whereof has been transferred by theft, or by extortion, or by robbery, and property which has been criminally misappropriated or in respect of which * * * criminal breach of trust has been committed, is designated as "stolen property", [whether the transfer has been made, or the misappropriation or breach of trust has been committed, within or without India]. But, if such property subsequently comes into the possession of a person legally entitled to the possession thereof, it then cases to be stolen property.

1. Amendment.—In the asterisks marked place the words "the offence of after the word "which" have been omitted by the Amending Act, 1891 (12 of 1891) and by the Indian Penal Code Amendment Act, 1882 (8 of 1881) respectively. The words within brackets have been inserted by the Indian Penal code (Amendment Act). 1882 (8 of 1882). Section 9. In India read "India" which has been successively substituted for the words "British India" vide Indian Adaptation of Laws Order, 1948. 1950 Act 3 of 1951. Section 3 and Sch.

2. Principle.—"The receiver of stolen property though not strictly a participator in the offence by which the property has been acquired, facilitates the commission of that offence or at least renders its detection more difficult, by aiding the thief in the disposal of the property. But the Code does not treat the receiver as an accessory or abettor, or as an offender against public justice. It makes the offence of receiving stolen property a substantive offence, and punishes the receiver, not always as it punishes the principal offender but with a punishment more or less severe according to circumstances".—Morgan and Macpherson.

The possession must have been transferred by any of the offences enumerated in the section. AIR 1976 SC 917 : Cr LJ 679 ; 1970 All WR (HC) 368 : 1970 All Cr R 240 ; ILR 1963 Guj 1032.

3. Stolen property.—"An extended signification is given to the words "stolen property" which are used in the four subsequent sections. Not only things which has been stolen, extorted or robbed but also things which have been obtained by criminal misappropriation or criminal breach of trust are within the meaning here assigned to these words."—Morgan and Macpherson. 371 ; 15 Cr LJ 675 ; 1952 Cr LJ 744 : AIR 1952 Punj 178 (does not however include the money received by selling stolen property). Property is not stolen property, unless the act by which it has been acquired has been committed either in British India or elsewhere by a person who is liable to be tried in British India for offence committed elsewhere. 5 Bom 338 (FB). In (1963) 2 SCWR 145 : 1964 SCJ 407 : 1963 SCD 1018 : AIR 1964 SC 170 : (1964) 1 Cr LJ 129, it was held on proof of the following facts (1) the goods were recovered within a few days of the disappearance and (2) presence of silk and paper lables of the consignor on most of the woollen goods were recovered and (3) certain manuscripts writings on the bed sheet written by someone connected with consignor, that the above circumstances were sufficient to justify the finding that the property recovered was stolen. See also 1965 BLJR 209 : 1965 (2) Cr LJ 570 (possession of a particular person or in a locality before it was stolen need not be proved) ; 1965 (2) Cr LJ 570 (proof of stolen property) ; 1981 Cur LJ (Cr) 206 : 1982 Chand LR (Cr) 228 (in the absence of any proof that the bullock was stolen, it can not be termed stolen property as defined in Section 410) ; AIR 1976 SC 917 : 1976 SCC (Cr) 154 : 1976 Cr LJ 679 (in the instant case it was established that the possession of ornaments and valuable was transferred by theft. But recoveries Were alleged to have taken place more than two years after disappearance of the old widow).

4. But if such property, etc.—'The rules of the civil law applicable to the transfer and acquisition of moveable property, must be consulted to ascertain when 'stolen property' ceases to be so by reason of coming 'into the possession of a person legally entitled to the possession thereof. Suppose goods are found by the owner in the pockets of a thief or on his person and the owner takes the goods again into his possession, but afterwards, for the purpose of detecting the receiver, given them back to the thief desiring him to sell them as he had sold other stolen property. These goods having ceased to be 'stolen property', the person who receives or buys them from the thief, however guilty, is not a receiver of such property".—Morgan and Macpherson, 371, see also 11 PLR 1905 ; 113 PLR 1914.

5. Identification.—A conviction under this section is not maintainable, unless the stolen property is undoubtedly identified. 194 PLR 1912 ; 3 MLT 30. The identity of property alleged to be stolen, but recovered and produced and not distinguishable from the property stolen, may be generally established from the surrounding circumstances found to have existed rather than by the evidence of persons able to speak with personal knowledge on the matter. LBR (1893-1900) 199.

6. Theft.—"If stolen property is found soon after the possession of a person who cannot give a reasonable account of the way by which he became possessed of it, it is fair to presume that he himself is the thief. If the evidence leaves it doubtful whether the accused is guilty of theft or receiving stolen property, he may be adjudged guilty and punished under Section 72".—Morgan and Macpherson, 473. I LBR 39. The presumption arising from the possession of stolen property is one which is strengthened, weakened or rebutted by concomitant circumstances, such as the length of time elapsing, vicinity to the spot, nature of the property and the behaviours of the accused".—Morgan and Macpherson ; 373 ; 23 WR Cr 16. A missing bullock cannot be stolen within the meaning of this section. 30 Cr LJ 1133 : 119 Ind Cas 863 : AIR 1929 All 917.

1. Scope.—In a charge under this section, the prosecution has got to prove ; (1) that the property was stolen, (2) that it was received or retained by the accused and (3) that the accused knew or had reason to believe the property to be stolen. The prosecution may prove this ingredient either by positive evidence or by certain presumption. AIR 1933 All 893 : 38 Cr LJ 621.

A thief or misappropriator is outside the scope of the section. 1972 Cr LJ 456 : AIR 1972 SC 635 : AIR 1964 SC 110 : 1964 (1) Cr LJ 129, the conviction for theft is not a pre requisite to the conviction of the receiver under the section. The property has to be proved to be stolen. 1969 All WR (HC) 368 : 1970 All Cr R 240 ; 1981 Chand LR (Cr) 540. The accused is to be proved to have knowledge of the property being stolen. The accused was convicted under Section 411 on charge of theft of a cow. There are certain ingredients which are to be satisfied to establish offence under the section. Cow which was missing was ultimately found in the cow-shed of the accused. It was observed that mere act of possession would not give rise to the inference that person in possession was the receiver of the stolen property. No inference could also be drawn under Section 411 of Evidence Act in absence of proof that property found in possession of another had earlier been stolen. 1987 Cri LJ 959 (Ori).

2. Receivers.—"There must be a taking into his possession of the 'stolen property' by the receiver ; but a manual possession or a touching of the property is not essential to constitute a receipt of it. Where considerable time elapses between the theft and the discovery of the stolen article possession by itself does not require any explanation 1912 MWN 529 ; see also 57 Cr LJ 57 : 1933 Cr C 958 : AIR 1933 Cal 594 ; AIR 1933 All 893 ; AIR1 931 Pat 85 : 32 Cr LJ 614 : 12 PLT 1350. The offences of dishonest retention of property is almost contemporaneous with the offence of dishonestly receiving. A man who dishonestly receives property if he retains it must obviously continue dishonestly to retain it. It would be different, however, if the reception of the property were innocent. Then it would clearly be for the prosecution to show at what stage guilty knowledge of the receiver supervened to make the retention dishonest. 18 Lah 227 : 171 Ind Cas 342 : 38 Cr LJ 1068 : 39 PLR 1 : AIR 1937 Lah 700 : (1960) 1 Guj LR 100.

People do not secrete properties far away from villages in unknown place unless they are not in a position to claim them as their own and unless they have been dishonestly got they will not-hide the traces of the same. AIR 1954 Mad 433 : 1954 Cr LJ 58 : 1953 Mad WR 918. Doubtless there is a real distinction between receipt and retention. In some instances receipt of property may be honest, but subsequently when the offender comes to know that the property is stolen property and yet continues in possession of the same, he may be said to retain the same. But in Section 411 and 412, the word "receives" and "retains" occur side by side and the collection of receipt and retention of stolen property is obviously intended to do away with the necessity of proving the presence of dishonesty at the time of its possession. 4. Possession.—The word "possession" contemplated by this section and Section 412 is exclusive possession, otherwise the receiver or the possessor of the stolen property would run the risk of losing the stole property, if else could get hold of it. 161 Ind Cas 271 : 37 Cr LJ 454 : 1936 CWN 295. It cannot be laid down that is no circumstances can a man be convicted of being in possession of the property if there are inmates of the house other than himself. Under Section 114 of the Evidence Act, the Court may, if the circumstances justify it, draw a presumption of guilty against a person who is in possess on of stolen property ; but the section does not lay down that whenever a person is in possession of stolen property, a presumption of his guilt automatically arises. The illustration itself shows that the presumption will not arise unless the accused is in possession of the goods soon after the theft and unless he is unable to account for his possession 1936 *A*LJ 1158 : 1936 A Cr C 212 : 1936 *A*WN 973 ; see also CWN 1090 ; AIR 1936 Nag 200 : ILR 1936 Nag 78 : 164 Ind Cas 964 : 37 Cr LJ 1047 ":' AIR 1936 Oudh 380 : 1936 Cr C 989 : 164 Ind Cas 97 : 37 Cr LJ 907 : 1936 OWN 668 : 161 Ind Cas 132 : 37 Cr LJ 752. AIR 1949 HP 15 : 1949 *A*LJ 45. Considering the language of this section, dishonest retention is contra distinguished in this section from dishonest reception. In the former offence dishonesty supervenes after the act of acquisition of possession, while in the latter dishonestly is contemporaneous with the act of acquisition. The act of dishonest removal within the meaning of Section 379 constitutes dishonest reception with Section 411 and that being so the thief does not commit the offence of retaining stole property merely by continuing to keep the possession of the property he stole. The theft and the taking and retention of stolen goods from one and the same offence and cannot be punished separately. AIR 1950 BP 66 : AIR 1950 Kuteh 88.

6. Believe.—The word "believe" is a very much stronger word than "suspect" and it involves the necessity of showing that the circumstances were such that a reasonable man must have felt convinced in his mind that the property with which he was dealing must be stolen property. 17 Cr LJ 25 : 32 Ind Cas 153 : 33 Cr LJ 169 : AIR 1929 Oudh 213 ; see also 134 Ind Cas 401 : 32 Cr LJ 1184 : 8 OWN 517 ; 134 Ind Cas 401 : 8 OWN 517 : 32 Cr LJ 1184 : 6 Luck 658 : 1932 Cr C 592 : AIR 1932 Oudh 25. The word "believe" is much stronger than the word "suspect". AIR 1950 Assam 193: (1963) 50 JD 370.

7. Knowing or having reason to believe the goods to be stolen.—The receiver should know or have reason to believe the goods to be stolen, but it is immaterial whether or not he knows who stole them. The offence made punishable is not the receiving stolen property from any particular person, but receiving such property knowing it to be stolen. The receiver must have a dishonest intention, but whether he takes the goods for some purpose of profit or gain to himself, or merely to assist the theft or in order to conceal them, this taking cannot but be intended to cause wrongful gain or wrongful loss, and is therefore dishonest.—Morgan and Macphersan. 371. 1913 MWN 969 ; AWN 1898 70. The mere recovery of certain property from the house of the two petitioner was not sufficient by itself to attribute guilty knowledge to either of them unless there were some circumstances connecting them with the possession of the property. The existence of knowledge of an accused person can be seldom proved by positive evidence. AIR 1950 All 631.

8. Guilty knowledge.—In order to sustain a charge of dishonest receipt of stolen property "guilty knowledge" at the time of the receipt is necessary. 1 Weir 469 ; 4 MHC App 42 ; 2 Cr LJ 189 ; AWN 1883 17 ; 1937 MWN 327 ; 18 NLJ 237 ; AIR 1935 Pat 451 : 16 Pat LT 568 : 159 Ind Cas 577. There can be no hard and fast" rule as to time, within which the stolen article should be found with accused, to hold him guilty of being in possession of stolen articles but two and a half moths after a dacoity is not a long time. 103 Ind Cas 62 : 28 Cr LJ 638 : AIR 1927 Oudh 277. Mere" suspicion on the accused's part that property was dishonestly acquired is not enough to make person guilty under this section. AIR 1928 Cal 264. (If the accused was aware of the theft or did he believe the goods to be stolen, deliberately shut his eyes to the circumstance).

9. Charge to the jury.—It is only a dishonest retention or receipt of stolen property that constitutes an offence under Section 411 I. P. Code ; if therefore, a Sessions Judge fails or omits to tell the jury in his charge that there must be dishonest receipt or retention, it is a serious defect amounting to misdirection. 59 M 995 : 165 Ind Cas 387 : 37 Cr LJ 1150 : 1936 MWN 985 : 44 LW 558 : 71 MLJ 586.

10. Proof.—To support a charge of receiving stolen property the prosecution must prove 1st, that the property is stolen property, that is, that it comes within the definition of Section 410, having been obtained by someone of the offences there mentioned ; 2nd the receiving or retaining of the accused person ; 3rd the guilty knowledge of the accused. His dishonest purpose may be inferred if the above matters, are satisfactorily proved and left unexplained. As to the proof the receiver's guilty knowledge, from the caution necessary in this sort of traffic, it must often happen that no express disclosure is made to him, and yet he knows the property to have been stolen as well as if he had actually witnessed the theft. In this, as in other cases, it is sufficient if circumstances are proved which, to persons of ordinary understanding in the situation of the accused person, must have led to the conclusion that the property was stolen or otherwise dishonestly acquired. Thus, if ornaments, bundles of clothes of various kinds or moveables of any sort from persons destitute of property and without any lawful means of acquiring it, and especially if it is proved that the property was brought at untimely hours and under circumstances of evident concealment it may well be concluded that it was received with a full understanding of the guilty mode by which it has been acquired. And this will be still further confirmed, if it appears that the property was purchased for a sum far below its real value, or was concealed in places not usually employed for keeping such property, or if the marks on it are effaced, or if false or inconsistent stories are told as to the mode of its acquisition. Another circumstances from which such guilty knowledge may be inferred is that the property has been received from a notorious thief or one from whom stolen property has, on previous occasions, been received".—Morgan and Macpherson, 373 ; AWN 1883 17. Before a conviction can be had under this section the possibility of the accused having obtained the goods of which he is found in possession by legitimate means must be excluded. 62 Ind Cas 867.

Where the only fact is proved are, that certain stolen property was given to the accused by a third person to raise a loan on the accused and that the accused had similar dealings with such third person. Held, that the last matter was irrelevant and that the evidence was sufficient to prove dishonest intention. AWN 1885 27. Where a person is charged with receiving or being in possession of property alleged to have been stolen, an important factor is the value of the property and as to this the Court should insist on having direct evidence as the accused is entitled to have some sworn testimony of value which he can cross-examine. 56 Ind Cas 856 : 21 Cr LJ 552. The finding of the Appellate Court, viz., "the evidence to implicate the accused is that they were all in a house one day discussing as to what was to be done with the booty and a dozen people were seen discussing as to how the booty was to be divided" is sufficient to sustain a conviction under Section 411 and 414 I.P. Code. 7 Pat LT 567 : 27 Cr LJ 657 : 94 Ind Cas 705. It is for the prosecution to prove that the accused received the property dishonestly 29 Cr LJ 594.

11. Possession satisfactorily accounted for.—In a case under Sections 411 and 414, I.P. 17. Conviction.—Where accused was found in possession of stolen articles—Conviction was under Section 412. Prosecution must prove that accused had knowledge that articles were stolen in dacoity there was no material to prove that accused had such knowledge—It can be merely presumed that accused knew that articles were stolen thus accused was convicted under Section 411 and not under Section 412. Achyut Das v. State of Assam. 1994 SCC (Cri) 326 ; (1994) 1 SCC 387 : (1994) 1 East Cr C 449 (SC) : AIR 1994 SC 968 : 1994 JIC 489 : 1994 Cr LJ 1119.

The accused was charged of receiving stolen property i.e. question paper of State Service Commission Examination. After getting it Zeroxed it was sold for huge amount. 19. Recovery of stolen articles later on—Presumption.—When the prosecution successfully proves that the offences of robbery and murder were committed in one and the same transaction and soon thereafter the stolen properties were recovered from some person the Court may legitimately draw a presumption not only of the fact that the person in whose possession the stolen articles were found committed the robbery but also that he committed the murder. Merely because the recovery has been made after four months it cannot be concluded that the recovery has not been made soon after the incident of robbery and murder and therefore at the most the accused can be convicted under Sec. 411 for having been found in possession of stolen articles in view of the nature and quantity of stolen articles (Jewellery) recovered especially when the presence of the accused at the place of occurrence is substantiated by evidence of finger print expert. *Shashi Shekhar alias Neeraj alias Raju v. The mere knowledge of place of concealment does not necessarily lead to the conclusion that the person having such knowledge actually received the articles stolen or participated in the act of concealment. 1 PR 1917 Cr. In a case of identification of ornaments of small value, the opinion of the assessors is of considerable value. They are well acquainted with the ways and habits of men of ordinary standing. 25 Cr LJ 1291 : AIR 1925 Oudh 452.

Where in a case of dacoity the Judge charges the jury saying that if the articles were stolen properties and were found in possession of the accused it is sufficiently proved that they were thieves or dacoits and the rebuttable presumption that arises in law is that the accused are either thieves or dacoits and they succeed by adducing sufficient proof in establishing their innocence. 42 Cr LJ 212 : 90 Ind Cas 542. Mere possession of property taken away by dacoits at the time of commission of dacoity will not be sufficient to bring home the charge under Section 412. In a prosecution of the accused for an offence of receiving the stolen property knowing the same to have been stolen, upon the prosecution establishing that the accused is in possession of goods recently stolen, the jury may in the absence of any explanation by the accused of the way in which the goods came into their possession which might reasonably be true, find them guilty, but if an explanation were given which the jury think might reasonably be true, and which is consistent with innocence, although they were not convinced of its truth, the prisoners are entitled to be acquitted inasmuch as the prosecution would have failed to discharge the duty cast upon it of satisfying the jury beyond reasonable doubt of the guilt of the accused. In order to justify his conviction on the more serious charge under this section, there must be evidence to show that he knew or had reason to believe that a dacoity, had been committed and the property had been taken in it or that the person from whom he obtained it belonging to a gang of dacoits and the property was stolen property. 1946 Nag Rul 206 : 47 Cr LJ 822 : 226 1C 78 ; 47 Cr LJ 511 ; ILR (1946) 2 Cal 619 ; AIR 1949 All 245 : 50 Cr LJ 379 ; AIR 1950 All 398.

The mere circumstances that certain persons were co-owners of premises from which stolen property is recovered is not, by itself, wholly sufficient to establish any criminal liability to sustain a conviction under Section 412, I.P. Code, unless there are other circumstances showing that they (or any of them) were well aware of the existence of such property and were in control thereof. 6 DLR (Pat) 1 : 52 Cr LJ 104 : 5 AI Cr D 44 : AIR 1951 Pat 296.

The recovery from the possession of the accused of certain ornaments identified to be forming part of the proceeds of the dacoity within 3 weeks, was sufficient to establish a case against him under Section 412. ILR 1956 Punj 140 : 1957 Cr LJ 678 ; 1958 Raj LW 527.

Where recovery of the ornaments from the possession of the accused persons has not been proved by reliable evidence and similarly evidence regarding identification of the ornaments in the test identification is not trustworthy and convincing since only members were called upon to identify the ornaments, the conviction of the accused under Section 412, IPC cannot be sustained. Baij Nath v. State, (2004) 3 Crimes 160 (All).

Where the recovery of the stolen ornaments from the possession of the accused persons has not been proved by reliable evidence and the evidence regarding identification of the ornaments is not trustworthy and convincing, the conviction of the accused persons under Section 412, IPC cannot be sustained. Baij Nath v. State, 2004 Cr LJ 3526 : 2004 All LJ 1971 : 2004(49) All Cri C 303 : 2004(3) Crimes 160.

In the case there was no evidence to show that the accused persons had full knowledge that the ornaments purchased by them were the subject of dacoity. The ornaments were received from them and one of the accused persons had claimed the property as purchased from some person under receipt but that person was not examined as a defence witness. It was held that all the accused could at best be charged under Section 411, IPC and not under Section 412, IPC. Narayan Prasad v. State of MP, 2006 Cr LJ 123 (SC).

The wife being a passive partner in life has merely to acquiesce in the property being kept in the house even if he knows that the property was obtained in the course of a dacoity and for this he cannot be convicted under Section 412. 1963 (1) Cr LJ 344.

It is necessary for the prosecution in a conviction under Section 412 to prove that the property transferred was stolen property and that possession of such property was by commission of a dacoity and that the accused received or retained such property. 1977 Raj Cr C 289 ; 1982 Cr LJ 610. None of the fool-proof procedures attaching to the seizure was followed in order to lend authenticity to the alleged siezure. The recovery should have been made in presence of two independent and respectable persons of the locality and, moreover, after seizure the money should have been kept in a seal of the raiding party and it should have been produced in Court under the sealed cover. The manner in which the concerned amount of money was brought the Court and the manner in which it was kept would clearly reveal that no reliance can be placed in order to substantiate that of course, there was no any recovery from the house of the accused. The non-examination of the head of the raiding party also took away much of the authenticity of the alleged recovery from the house of the accused. Munna Mahto v. State of Bihar, CriLJ 3526 (SC).

In Munna Mahto's case (Supra) the prosecution failed to establish that the recovered money was the same which was looted from possession of complainant. The court on this point observed as under:

"Now even if it is assumed for a moment of course, there was any recovery of any money from the house of the accused, it is to be established that the recovered money was the same that was looted from the possession of the informant. In this connection, the evidence of the Manager of the Bank who had handed over the money to the informant should have been adduced and the entry register should have been produced in Court in order to prove that particular numbers of currency notes were made over to the informant and recovered money tallied in their numbers with the some of the currency notes made over to the informant. This was not done by the prosecution. So, on the record there was no sufficient, unimpeachable and reliable evidence to establish that from the house of the accused part of the looted money was recovered. The accused was acquitted for the charge under Section 120 (B) of the Indian Penal Code. Upon the aforesaid evidence on record, it was also not established that the accused was, of course, found in possession of the looted money and that he was connected in any manner with the alleged occurrence of looting from the alleged place and alleged time."

3. Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

4. Charge.—I (name and office of Sessions Judge, etc.) hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows :—

That on or about the.............day of.............at.............you dishonestly received (or retained) stolen property, to wit belonging to one A, B knowing (or having reason to believe) the same to have been transferred by the commission of dacoity (or dishonestly received from one C, D., a person whom you knew (or had reason to believe to belong or to have belonged) to a gang of dacoits) property which you knew (or had reason to believe to have been stolen, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 412 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

5. Acquittal.—There was no sufficient, light available on the spot. Hence it is difficult to convict accused appellants who have committed the offence under Section 395, I.P.C. Even the theory of recovery and arrest on the spot soon after dacoity is not proved beyond doubt. Hence, acquittal ordered. Gopal v. State of U.P., 1955 (32) ACC 359 (All).

In a charge of dacoity certain articles were recovered from the possession of accused but there was nothing on record to show that accused had made a statement before the police as regards the gold chain which was recovered from the shop of goldsmith. Neither it was established that recovery of gold chain was at the instance of the accused. It was held that conviction of accused under Section 412 was not proper. Raghunath Day v. The State, 2003 Cr LJ 4592 (Cal).

6. Sentence.—Where accused was held to be charged of possession of articles stolen during dacoity—Revision petition was filed against conviction and sentence, the recovery of stolen articles were proved. The prosecution-witnesses established their ownership. The accused persons aged within 17 to 30 years. The accused have undergone custody for more than 6 years. Hence, conviction is maintained and the sentence is reduced to period already undergone. Rabindra Singh v. State of Bihar, (1994) 2 East Cr C 372 (Pat).

7. Exclusive possession.—Exclusive possession of a gun in premises occupied jointly must be proved by prosecution for a conviction in a dacoity case. 1986 Cr LJ 484 (Pat).

9. Dacoity and receiving stolen property—Simultaneous conviction for both offences not possible.—In Section 114 Illustration (a) of the Evidence Act the words "either the thief or has received goods" and more particularly, the word "or" postulates that both the presumptions cannot be drawn simultaneously. This appears to be a pointer to the proposition that one cannot be convicted with both theft and for receiving or retaining stolen property. Section 411 nor Section 414 of the IPC can be applied to the original theft of the property concerned. No person can receive for himself nor does a person assist himself in concealing. Thus, it appears that simultaneous conviction for dacoity and receiving or retaining stolen property by commission of dacoity is not permissible. Moreover, the act of dishonest removal constitutes dishonest reception and so the thief does not commit the offence of retaining stolen property merely by continuing to keep possession of the property he stole. The theft and taking and retention of stolen goods form one and the same offence and cannot be punished separately. Rafikul Alam and Ors. v. The State of W. B., 2008 CriLJ 2005 (Cal).

10. Conviction.—Appeal against conviction. Person who snatched bag from dacoits and allegedly handed over to accused, even though material witness, has not been examined by the prosecution for the reasons best known to it. It seems, prosecution has not come with a clean hand and has tried to suppress the material facts. It is onus on the prosecution to prove that the properties were stolen properties and were misappropriated by the present appellants. In absence of such proof, the conviction of the appellants is not proper. Mere possession is not sufficient to convict the accused under Section 412, IPC. Non-production of the material object and non-mentioning the serial number of the currency notes are also fatal to the prosecution. Therefore, conviction of accused is liable to be set aside. Bhaskar Chandra Nayak and Another v. State of Orissa, 2009 CriLJ 3875 (Ori).

1. Amendment.—The words in italics were substituted for the words "Transportation for Life" by Act 26 of 1955, Section 117 and Sch (with effect from 1.1.1956).

2. Scope.—"The common receiver or professional dealer in stolen property, is hereby made punishable".—Morgan and Macpherson, 374. The essence of the offence under this section is the habitual, that is to say, constant receipt or dealing in goods which the prisoner knew or had reason to believe, were stolen. A man cannot be said to be habitually receiving stolen goods who may receive the proceeds of a number of different robberies from a number of different persons, there must be a receipt on different occasions and on different days. 19 Cal 190 ; 13 PR 1914 Cr ; ILR 1955 TC 772 : 1955 Ker LT 830. Where the charge of an offence under Section 401, I.P. Code, had been instituted but that prosecution would be based entirely on the evidence as to the discovery of the stolen property in the accused's house, which, it was held in the former trial, did not prove his membership of the gang. Held, that the two trials were not based on the same facts and Section 403 did not apply. 26 PLR 470 : 88 Ind Cas 185 : 26 Cr LJ 1077.

3. Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoun-dable—Triable by Court of Session.

4. Charge.—I (name and office of the Sessions Judge, etc.) hereby charge you name of the accused as follows :

That on or about the........day of........at........you were a habitual receiver of (or dealer in) property which you knew (or had reason to believe) to be stolen property and that you hereby committed an offence punishable under Section 413 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

5. Conviction.—Accused charged for dealing in stolen property under Section 413 and not under Section 124 of Bombay Police Act, but convicted under Section 124, Bombay Police Act. As ingredients of both provisions are practically common, Conviction under Section 124 not illegal. Ramesh Singh v. State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cr LJ 2743 (Bom).

It is not sufficient to show that the accused was careless or that he had reason to suspect that the property was stolen, or that he did not make sufficient enquiry to ascertain whether it had been honestly acquired. 6 Bom 402 : 6 Ind Jour 538 ; see also 139 Ind Cas 442 :

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

4. Scope of the offence of cheating.—"The provisions for the proper punishment of some of the aggravated forms of cheating are contained in other Chapters of the Code than the present one (of offence against property) wherein cheating is defined, viz., in the Chapter of offence relating to the coin, to weights and measures, to documents and to trade or property marks. The practice of intentional deceit for purposes of gain or to induce a person to acting such a way as to cause damage or harm to himself is an offence made punishable by the Code under this head. It is important that the law should, in no case, encourage deceit or falsehood, and that it should impose restraints on those who practise deception. But the Legislature cannot go so far as to establish the rule of morality as a part of the rule of law. Many false presences and many representations calculated and intended to mislead are morally wrong and deserving of punishment ; but a Penal Code cannot adopt so severe a standard as the moral law whereby to measure the conduct of men. It is by public opinion, the opinion of the general body of the people, that restraints and punishments must to such cases be imposed. It would be highly inexpedient to punish as a criminal every dependent who obtains pecuniary favour by false profession of attachment to a patron, every legacy-holder who obtains a request by cajoling a rich testator, every debtor who moves the compassion of his creditors by overcharged pictures of his misery, every petitioner who, in his appeals to the charitable represents his distresses as wholly unmerited, when he knows that he has brought them on himself be intemperance and profusion.

"In dealing between buyers and sellers, frequently even in tolerably honest transactions, there happens an exaggeration on the one side and a depreciation on the other of the value of the thing sold which may be morally reprehensible, but with which the penal law cannot deal. If all the misrepresentations and exaggerations, in which men indulge for the purpose of gaining at the expense of others, were made crimes, not one day would pass in which many thousands of buyers and sellers would not incur the penalties of law—A very large part of the ordinary business is conducted all over the world, and no where more than in India, by means of conflict of skill, in the course of which deception to a certain extent perpetually takes place. The moralist may regret this but the Legislature sees that the result of the attempt of the buyer and seller to gain an unfair advantage over each other is that in the vast majority of cases, articles are sold for the prices which it is desirable that they should fetch ; and therefore he does not think it necessary to interfere. It is enough for him to know that all this great was of falsehood practically produces the same effect which would be produced by truth; and that any law direct against such falsehood would, in all probability, be a dead letter, and would, if carried into rigorous execution, do more mischief in a month than all the lies which are told in the making of bargains throughout all the bazars of India produced in a century".—Morgan and Macpherson.

5. Necessary ingredients.—Section 414 is intended to penalise the person, who deal with stolen property in such a way that it becomes difficult to identify it or use it as evidence. It is not necessary to establish that the property was the subject matter of any particular theft. It would suffice if the prosecution can establish that the accused had knowledge or "had reason to believe" that the property is stolen one. It is not necessary to establish, from whom the theft was committed, when it was committed, how it was committed and who committed it. It is further not necessary to establish to whom accused assisted while disposing of the properties. All that the prosecution is required to establish is that the accused rendered help in either concealment or disposal of the property, which he had reason to believe to be stolen property or had knowledge to believe that it was such. So far as the five accused in the instant case are concerned, there is satisfactory evidence on record to show that they had reason to believe that the autorickshaws in question were stolen properties. They alienated the autorickshaws by making misrepresentation that necessary documents would be made available afterwards because the vehicles were purchased in auction sales held by the Banks. Obviously, the necessary ingredients of S. 414 of the Indian Penal Code are duly established against them. Sayyed Issaq and Ors. v. State of Maharashtra. 2008 CriLJ 2950 (Bom).

OF CHEATING

Sec. 415. Cheating.—Whoever, by deceiving any person, fraudulently or dishonestly induces the person so deceived to deliver any property to any person, or to consent that any person shall retain any property, or intentionally induces the person so deceived to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit if he were not so deceived, and which act of omission causes or is likely to cause damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property, is said to "cheat".

Explanation.—A dishonest concealment of facts is a deception within the meaning of this section.

1. Suggested amendment.—The definition of cheating in this section requires modification in order to cover cases where one person deceives and another person suffers, or is likely to suffer damage or harm in body, mind, reputation or property. AIR 1941 Lah 460 : ILR 1941 Lah 718 : 43 Cr LJ 254.

2. Object of the section.—In order to bring a case within the 1st part of the section, it is essential in the first place, that the person who delivers the property should have been deceived before he makes the delivery and in the second place, that he should have been induced to do fraudulently or dishonestly. The object of this section is to make it, cheating to obtain property by deception in all cases where the property is fraudulently or dishonestly obtained. However, immoral a deception may be, it does not constitute the offence of cheating, its object is only to cause a distribution of property which the law recognises as rightful ; there must be an intention to acquire or retain wrongful possession of that to which some other person has a better claim, and that other person is entitled to recover by law ; in all such cases, the object is wrongful gain attended with wrongful loss. 2 CLJ 524. The damage or harm referred to in this section must be the necessary consequence of the act done by reason of the deceit practised, or must necessarily be likely to follow from them. Ibid. ; 17 Cal 606. Mere silence on the part of the accused would not amount to deception. UBR (1892-1896) Vol I, 255. In order to find whether a person is guilty of cheating, the Court has to take into consideration the cumulative force and effect all the surrounding circumstances. 1 Weir 476 ; see also 23 Cr LJ 443 ; 31 Ind Cas 353 ; 34 PR Cr 1919.

Each part of the section is independent of the other. The common factor is that there must be deceit practised by the accused upon the complainant. There must be dishonesty or fraud in obtaining delivery of property and an intentional inducement of the complainant to do or omit to do some act or omission which must cause or be likely to cause damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property. 1978 All Cr C 147 : 1979 Cr LJ (NOC) 122. A false pretence, unlike English law, must not as a matter of a fact that has existed or exists but may be of a future conduct, will amount to cheating. AIR 1966 All 594 : 1966 Cr LJ 1367 (from a reading of illustration (f) and (g) of the section).

3. Ingredient of offence.—In the offence of cheating under this section there are two elements—Deception and dishonest intention to do or omit to do something. Neither mere deception nor mere dishonesty is a criminal offence. To establish the offence of cheating, the complainant must show not only that he was induced to do or not to do something, but that this induced act or omission or his part caused or was likely to cause him some harm or damage in body, mind, reputation or property—Which are presumed to be the four cardinal assets of humanity. A complaint in respect of such act under Section 415, IP. Code, more than three months afterwards, on the ground that the complaint was induced not to file a suit against the accused immediately on dishonour, is not sustainable, when there is no assertion in the complaint that any harm or damage was caused or likely to be caused. 1937 MWN 999 : 46 LW 629 : (1937)

2 MLJ 878 : AIR 1938 Mad 129 ; AIR 1949 All 15 : 50 Cr LJ 31 ; AIR 1949 Cal 586. The definition of cheating in the section consists of two parts both of which the words "by deceiving any person" apply. The first part is applicable if there is deception and the accused has attempted fraudulently or dishonestly to induce the complainant to deliver the property to him. But the second part does not require the inducement to be fraudulent or dishonest. ILR 1950 Nag 908 : 5 AI Cr D 149 : AIR 1951 Nag 315 : 6 DLR (Nag) 32. The words "which act or omission causes is likely to cause damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property" occuring in the second part of Section 415 have no application to the first part of that section. They have reference only to the offence of cheating committed by inducing the deceived person to do or to omit to do something which he would not do or omit to do if he were not so deceived, 39 Mys LJ 1070 : 1962 (2) Cr LJ 559 ; 1962 (2) Cr LJ 595 : 1963 MLJ (Cr) 146. As far as the offence of cheating is concerned, the most essential ingredient that has to be proved by the prosecution is that one was cheated and thereby he was dishonestly induced to deliver the money to the accused. Merely parting with money will not amount to cheating. 1961 MLJ (Cr) 350 : 1960 (2) Ker LR 287 : 1962 (1) Cr LJ 654.

Where there is fraudulent misrepresentation by the accused to select him by mentioning false details in his application to the Public Service Commission, the ingredients of Section 415 as contained in the latter part of the section must be held to exist. AIR 1960 Andh Pra 441 : 1960 Cr LJ 1181 ; see also 1965 All Cr R 71 : 1965 All LJ 272.

Cheating can be committed in either of the two ways described in Section 415. Deceiving a person is common in both the ways of cheating. A person deceived may be fraudulently or dishonestly induced to deliver any property or to consent to the retention of any property by any person. The person deceived may also be intentionally induced to do or to omit to do anything which he would not have done if not deceived and when act of his caused or was likely to cause damage as harm in body, mind, reputation or property. (1965) 1 SCWR 16 : 1965 (1) Cr LJ 355 : AIR 1965 SC 333.

Whatever legal effect it might have on the civil rights of the parties under the document (interpolation in document made in January, 1944 but contract made on 2.3.1944 to come into effect on 11.11.1943), it was impossible to invoke the said date to impute a criminal liability to the accused for an act done by them before the contract was executed. AIR 1960 SC 391 : 1960 Cr LJ 532 ; 1976 MLJ (Cr) 548. 1977 LW (Cr) 114 ; 1977 LW (Cr) 26 (when even any one of their results follows on account of the deception practised by a person the offence of cheating would be completed). 1977 Kant LJ 111 ; 1977 Cr LJ 2050 ; 1980 All LJ 1067 (the main ingredient is offence under Section 415 is that there should be fraudulent or intentional ingredient to the person so deceived to do or omit to do anything which would not do or omit if he were not so deceived); 1977 Cr LJ 899 ; 1977 Cr LJ 2048 ; 1975 Cr LJ 879 ; AIR 1960 All 103.

It must be proved that representation was false to the knowledge of accused and was made to deceive complainant. Moni Gogoi v. Sarumani Hazarika, (1992) 2 Gau LR 113.

To constitute such offence dishonest intention of accused is inducing person deceived to deliver property must be proved. Smt. Uma Dutta v. G. Mahadevan, 1993 Cri LJ 3231 (Ori).

In absence of ingredients of criminal offence especially mens rea there can be no criminal prosecution. Dhruvdeo Mishra v. State of Bihar, 1991 (1) PLJR 121.

Mere acts of cheating is not sufficient—It must have caused damage or harm the person deceived. (M/s.) Sonbhadra Coke Products v. State of U.P., 1994 Cr LJ 657 : 1994 LJ 302 (All).

Before the offence of cheating can be made out it has to be shown that damage or harm has been caused to the person so deceived. (M/s.) Sonbhadra Coke Products v. State of U.P., 1994 Cr LJ 657 : 1994 LJ 302 (All).

Where the accused company did not keep its investors in dark about the tridium system and gave them all necessary information in respect of various aspects of the system thereby not only forwarding them about the risk factors invited in the project and advising them to consider them before investing, if despite the caution the investors ignore them and invest their money in the project it cannot be said that they were misled, misrepresented or deceived nor it can be said that there was intention inducement by the accused-company. Motorola Incorporated v. Union of India, 2004 Cr LJ 1576 (Bom) : 2003 All MR (Cri) 1903 : 2004(1) Bom Cri (Cri) 26.

It was contended by the accused that at the time of auction in mandi samiti, the accused was not present and taking advantage of his absence the deceased dishonestly persuaded the commission Agent to deliver him the money and then he quickly disappeared. It was pointed out that the deceased did not return to his own house and went to another village which act was itself sufficient to suggest that it was the accused who was deceived and cheated. The record of mandi samiti showed that the name of accused was entered as owner and at the municipal outpost the deceased himself had gone to the offence and returned with the tax receipt which was in the name of accused. The accused continued to sit in the tractor. The Court held that it was more than clear that no case of cheating was made out. Shiv Dan Ram v. State of Rajasthan, 2005 Cr LJ 36 (Raj).

4. Delivery of property.—A man can give delivery through another of property within the meaning of Section 415, I.P. Code, which is not in his possession but which is at his order. If, for instance, A had an agreement with B will give delivery of certain goods in his possession on account of A on the receipt of delivery note from A and C by deception obtains a delivery note from A on B and thereby gets possession of goods from B, it cannot be said that he has not got delivery of the property from or through A directly as a result of his deception of A. AIR 1937 Sind 293.

The words "to deliver any property", in Sections 415 and 420 imply that the word "property" means movable property. 6 Sau LR 466 ; AIR 1961 SC 1698 : 1961 (2) Cr LJ 822 (an admission card to sit for an university examination is a property) ; AIR 1977 SC 1174 (passport is a property).

5. Fraudulently or dishonestly.—The word "fraudulently" used in this section together with the word "dishonestly" means something different from "dishonestly". The word is not confined to transactions in which there is wrongful gain on the one hand, or wrongful loss on the other, either actual or intended. The word "defraud" may or may not imply deprivation, either actual or intended. ILR 32 Cal 75 : 9 CWN 897 : 1 Cr LJ 469 ; see also 61 ; Ind Cas 33. The words "fraudulently" and "dishonestly" do not govern the whole of the definition. They do not apply to the second part of the definition.

20 PR 1889. Illustrations (f) and (g) leave no doubt that an intention as to future, expresses falsely or dishonestly for the purpose of deceiving a person, could amount to deception as a constituent element. AWN 1886, 262. Where the charge does not contain any allegation that the accused acted dishonestly or that he deceived the complaint the charge should be set aside and the proceeding quashed. AIR 1933 Sind 169 : 34 Cr LJ 1049 : 145 Ind Cas 617. It is not necessary to constitute cheating that wrongful gain should accrue from the party deceived. 16 Cr LJ 753 : 31 Ind Cas 353. "Fraudulently" and "dishonestly" imply some idea of wrongful gain. 49 Cr LJ 419 : AIR 1948 Mad 268 : ILR 1948 Mad 578 ; 49 Cr LJ 443 : AIR 1948 All 433 ; 1961 Ker LT 318 : 1962 (1) Cr LJ 649 ; see also 1959 MPC 40 : 1959 Jab LJ 212 (dishonest inducement by accused as to his title to land sold) ; AIR 1980 SC 366.

6. Deception.—This section does not, in any manner, limit the mode in which the deception may take place, nor is it necessary that the deception should be by express words, but it may be by conduct or implied in the nature of the transaction itself. 32 Cal 941 : 9 CWN 1006 ; 18 ALJ 408. Where the person who granted the permits as well as the persons who obtained the permits are alleged to be in the conspiracy there is the question of one deceiving the other. 1933 Cr LJ 1289 : AIR 1933 Pat 225.

There can be dishonest concealment even in absence of statutory duty to speak. The explanation to Section 415 makes it clear that the dishonest concealment of fact is a deception within the meaning of the section. AIR 1956 All 334 : 1956 Cr LJ 664.

7. Sale.—To constitute the offence of cheating by taking delivery of property, there should be deceit at the time when delivery is taken and the seller should be fraudulently and dishonestly induced to deliver the property in consequence of such deceit. 9 Ind Cas 458 ; Rat Un Cr C 546.

8. What constitutes offence.—The essence of the charge of cheating is that the complainant should have been deceived. AIR 1941 Sind 398 : 1941 Ker 345 : 43 Cr LJ 73. Deception is only one element of the offence of cheating and not the only element. There can be no cheating unless by reason of the deception, the person deceived is induced to part with any property or omit to do anything that he would not do or omit to do but for the deception. AIR 1940 Lah 93 : 41 Cr LJ 394 ; see also AIR 1938 Sind 153 : 40 Cr LJ 61 ; AIR 1938 Lah 828 : 40 Cr LJ 371 ; AIR 1938 Mad 129 : 39 Cr LJ 261. Where in a proceeding for issue of a certificate of marriageable age of a certain girl, the applicant by producing another girl misrepresents to the Magistrate that the girl produced is the girl whose age is required to be certified, the offence committed is not cheating, since the Magistrate, would not suffer any harm in mind, body or reputation. AIR 1951 Sau 8. Under Section 415 unless and until damage or harm is proved the offence of cheating is not completed. 148 Ind Cas 690 : 35 Cr LJ 872 : AIR 1934 Pesh 5. The burden is on the prosecution to prove fraud or dishonestly on the part of the accused. Every ingredient which is included in the definition of the offence must be established by the prosecution. AIR 1933 Pat 598 ; 1933 Cr C 1360 : 146 Ind Cas 580. There must be active deception by which a person is fraudulently induced to deliver property or there must be dishonest concealment of facts causing damage. 60 Cal 262 : 1933 Cr C 502 : AIR 1933 Cal 366 ; see also 51 Cal 250 : 28 CWN 160 : 26 Cr LJ 330 : 84 Ind Cas 554 ; 2 PLT 211 : 50 Ind Cas 921. Valuable security does not include a decree. 39 Cr LJ 1288 : 28 CWN 414. To constitute the offence of cheating, it is enough to allege that the property obtained was in the possession of the person defrauded and it is not necessary to allege that such property belonged to him. 1 Weir 471 : 1 MHC 31. It must be proved that the person who was made to deliver property, etc., or to do or omit to do anything, which causes or is likely to cause him danger in body, mind, reputation or property, and which he could not have otherwise done. The offence is not committed if a third party on whom no deception has been practised, sustains pecuniary loss in consequence of the accused's act. 25 PR 1904 Cr : 10 PLR 1905. Certain retail-dealer induced their creditors to give time and soon after vacation intervened and they removed the goods. Held, that they are guilty of cheating. 23 ALJ 433 : 87 Ind Cas 426. Negotiations between the cheat and the persons cheated does not create a new contract between the parties and such negotiations make no difference to his criminal liability for an offence which is not compoundable. 26 Cr LJ 1602. To convict a person for cheating, it is necessary to show that there is a proximate connection between deception practised on the complainant and his being induced to part with some property. If the connection is too remote or very indirect the offence of cheating would not be complete. 26 Cr LJ 213 : 83 Ind Cas 997 : AIR 1924, 209. Sending an insured letter containing. Khilafat notes does not amount to cheating. 26 Cr LJ 209 : 83 Ind Cas 993 : AIR 1924 All 205. Under this section, proximate and natural result and not a vague and contingent one is to be taken into account. 52 Cal 188 : 85 Ind Cas 641. The delivery contemplated by this section is "delivery to any person" a phrase which will include even an agent for that purpose. 1927 MWN 221 : 101 Ind Cas 484 : 28 Cr LJ 452 : AIR 1927 Mad 544 : 52 MLJ 511. In the absence of dishonest intention, a Judgment debtor is not guilty by mere dishonour of a cheque. AIR 1928 Oudh 292. The essence of an offence under this section is, (1) that there must be deception practised upon- a person, (2) that by that deception the person must be induced to do or omit to do something which he would not have done or omitted to do if he had not been so deceived. (3) that such act or omission must cause or be likely to cause, the person deceived damage or harm in body, mind, reputation or property. To constitute the offence of cheating under Section 415 of the Penal Code the damage or harm caused or likely to be caused to one person deceived in mind, body, reputation or property must be the necessary consequence of the act done by the person of the deceit practised, or must be necessarily likely to follow therefrom. The mere possibility of harm or damage however remote is sufficient, 34 PR Cr 1919 : 48 Ind Cas 877 : 20 Cr LJ 77 ; 18 NLR 52 : 67 Ind Cas 619 : 23 Cr LJ 443 ; 26 Bom LR 211 : 81 Ind Cas 926. In the absence of dishonest inducement the charge could not be entertained. 21 ALJ 321 : 1923 All 431. No offence under Section 415 is committed by untrue praise of goods offered for sale. AIR 1925 Cal 605 : 26 Cr LJ 921 : 29 CWN 362 : 86 Ind Cas 985.

To constitute cheating within clause (ii) of this section, it is necessary (1) that the person deceived must have acted under the influence of the deceipt, (2) that the facts must establish damage, or (3) that the damage must not be too remote. 51 Cal 250. The act or omission under Section 415 must be such as to cause or is likely to cause damage or harm to the person deceived. AIR 1954 Mys 9 : ILR 1953 Mys 382 : 1954 Cr LJ 136 ; 1954 BLJR 77. In addition to the element that there, should be a direct connection between the false representation and the delivery of the property for the doing of something of the person deceived, the act omission should cause or is likely to cause danger to the person. 1956 Andh LJ 678. Loss or damage must be the proximate result of the act complained of. 1952 ALJ 232. No offence of cheating can be said to have been committed if one person is induced by deception to do or omit to do something and the act or omission caused or is likely to cause damage or harm to another person. ILR 1953 Mys 382 : 1954 Cr LJ 136 : AIR 1954 Mys 9 ; see also AIR 1961 All 639 : 1962 All Cr C 25 : 1961 (2) Cr LJ 759 ; 1961 (2) Cr LJ 98. In order to bring a case within the second part of Section 415, I.P. Code, damage or harm caused or likely to be caused, must be the necessary consequence of the act done by reason of the deceipt practised or must be necessarily likely to follow therefrom, and the law does not take into account remote possibilities that may follow the act. 35 PLR 666 : AIR 1934 Lah 833 ; AIR 1933 Cal 366 : 60 Cal 262 ; AIR 1936 Rang 471 : 38 Cr LJ 48 ; AIR 1934 Cal 457 : 35 Cr LJ 446 ; 1955 All LJ 308. Mere criminal breach of trust does not constitute an offence under this section. AIR 1930 Pat 404. In case of payment by cheque, an offence of cheating is made out if the accused knew that the cheque would not be met. 32 LR 562 : AIR 1930 Bom 179.

If the person making the representation honestly believed the representation to be true, there can be no question of cheating. AIR 1951 Assam 82. When the complainant knew the truth, the accused cannot be convicted of cheating him, but will be guilty only of an attempt to cheat. AIR 1960 SC 979 : 1960 Cr LJ 1283.

The act of omission should be one which causes or likely to cause damage harm to the person induced in body mind, reputation or property. 1978 Cr LJ 2048 ; 1977 All Cr C 23 : 1971 Cr LJ 1797 ; AIR 1974 SC 1511. No loss or damage is caused to the person misled and hence, no offence is committed. AIR 1963 SC 1572 : 1963 (2) Cr LJ 43.

An offence of issuing cheque without sufficient funds need not necessarily take within is wings offence of cheating under Section 415, I.P.C. C.S. Nair v. G.M. State Bank of Travancore, 1996 Cri LJ 4289 (Ker).

9. Intentionally.—The word "intentionally" in the second breach of the definition, only applies to the act of omission which the person deceived is induced to do, or omit to do, and it is not necessary in order to sustain a charge under that branch of the definition, that the accused person should also have intended to cause harm or damage, as the result of such act or omission. 36 PR 1888 Cr. There being in the instant case no direct relation of cause and effect between the representation alleged to be made and the harm or damage to the complainant as a result of the breach of contract offence under Section 415 had not been committed in consequence of the accused persuading the complainant to enter into a shipping contract. AIR 1960 Bom 268 : ILR 1960 Bom 64 : 1960 Cr LJ 812 ; see also 78 Mad LW 164 : 1965 (2) Cr LJ 514 : AIR 1965 Mad 452 (when it was held that because the conduct of a debtor has been highly unethical, the criminal process can not be used against him in order to compel him to discharge a civil liability). The person so declared should be intentionally induced to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit if he were not deceived. AIR 1974 SC 1811 : 1974 Cr LJ 1261 ; see also AIR 1965 SC 333 : 1966 (1) Cr LJ 355 ; AIR 1956 SC 575 : 1956 Cr LJ 1116 (mens rea on the part of the accused).

10. Sale—False representation.—It is true that there is no duty on a seller to disclose defects in title in immovable property which the buyer with ordinary care could discover and the mere concealment of defect in title in such case is no fraud. But where the advance of money is made upon certain property burdened with a charge on the representation that the property was free of any charge and the questions regarding property was falsely answered, and further that the charge was not registered, it cannot be said that the person making advance could have discovered the charge by reference to registers. The representation therefore, is not mere concealment or non-disclosure of facts, but is false representation amounting to the offence of cheating. 167 Ind Cas 873 : 38 Cr LJ 510 : AIR 1937 Sind 56 ; AIR 1934 Nag 149 : 35 Cr LJ 1063 ; AIR 1960 All 103 : 1960 All Cr R 84 : 1960 Cr LJ 188 (Bogus schemes-persons induced on false representation and suppression of martial facts to deposit money) ; 6 Sau LR 466 (woman fraudulently induced to believe that she was executing the conveyance deed for Rs 13,000/- which in fact was for Rs. 7,500).

11. Prosecution against company for cheating and criminal conspiracy.—Word "whoever" occurring at the beginning of Sections 415 and 120B of IPC cannot include in its sweep juridical person like 'company' and since a 'company' is incapable of having mens rea, it cannot be prosecuted for offences under Sections 420 read with 120B of IPC. Motorola Incorporated v. Union of India, 2004 Cr LJ 1576 (Bom) : 2003 All MR (Cri) 1903 : 2004(1) Bom CR (Cri) 26.

12. Scope of this section whether excluded by Section 32 of the Sea Customs Act—The fact that the Sea Customs Act refers to delivery of goods detained by the Collector does not exclude the application of Section 415. I.P. Code, in appropriate cases, when it is clear that the acts necessary to constitute an offence under the section and to attract its application in fact exists. AIR 1937 Sind 293.

Civil proceedings are no bar to criminal proceedings and both are co-extensive. Smt. Godavaribai Saigal v. I.D. Chandani, 1995 (2) Bom CR 470.

13. Cases.—A person employed as a clerk in charge of the renewal of licence for hand carts received Rs. 2 for each such renewal, whereas he ought to have taken Rs. 1-1400. He was charged with cheating and evidence was produced showing that he had taken two annas in excess from persons other than those named in the charge, held, that such evidence was inadmissible either under Section 24 or under Section 15 of the Evidence Act. 8 ALJ 1269 : 12 Ind Cas 987 : 12 Cr LJ 611. An attempt to deceive by a false representation of facts, involves that the person charged should have taken some steps towards the communication of the representation to the person whom it was intended to deceive. 8 CWN 278 : 1 Cr LJ 124. Where the accused hired certain property from the complainant for use at a wedding, and advanced a portion of the hire, promising in writing to pay the balance and to restore the goods when the wedding was over, being fully aware that there was to be no wedding, and intending, when he got the property, to apply for its attachment before judgment as belonging to another person against whom he had brought a suit, held, that the accused was guilty of cheating. 3 NWP 16 ; see also 3 MWP 17. Inducing a Karkun to deliver a warrant of attachment by false representation is an offence under this section. 6 Bom LR 375. But to induce a son to pay his father's debt, by acting on his fear of consequences to his father, does not seem to come within the definition of the crime of cheating. 1864 WR Cr 25. The mere taking of money one day and dishonestly running away without paying it the next day is not necessarily cheating. 5 WR Cr 5. Where reward was taken from father of abducted girl for making search for girl and restoring her to her father, but person taking the reward does not keep his promise, conviction of the person under Section 415 is not justified in the absence of proof that he had practised any deception on the father of the girl, AIR 1932 Lah 516. Where the accused sent a letter to his creditor and insured it for a sum of money but when the addressee opened it he found blank sheet of paper within the envelope, held, that the accused was liable to be convicted under Section 415. 145 Ind Cas 671 : 34 Cr LJ 1020 : 14 PLT 48 : AIR 1933 Cal 514 : AIR 1933 Pat 183. 20. Complainant not required to produce verbatim all ingredients of offence.—It is not necessary that a complainant should produce verbatim in the body of his complaint all the ingredients of the offence he is alleging. Nor is it necessary that the complainant should state in so many words that the intention of the accused was dishonest or fraudulent. Splitting up of the definition into different components of the offence to make a meticulous scrutiny, whether all the ingredients have been precisely spelled out in the complaint, is not the need at this stage. If factual foundation for the offence has been laid in the complaint, the Court should not hasten to quash criminal proceedings during investigation stages merely on the premise that one or two ingredients have not been stated with details. For quashing an FIR (a step which is permitted only in extremely rare cases) the information in the complaint must be so bereft of even the basic facts which are absolutely necessary for making out the offence. In State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 AIR SCW 237 : AIR 1992 (SC) 604 : 1990 Supp(3) SCR 259 : 1990(4) JT 650 : 1992 Cr LJ 527, the apex Court laid down the premise on which the FIR can be quashed in rare cases. The following observations made in the aforesaid decision are a sound reminder (Para 109 of AIR) :

"We also a give a note of caution to the effect that the power of quashing a criminal proceeding should be exercised very sparingly and with circumspection and that too in the rarest of rare cases; that the Court will not be justified in embarking upon an enquiry as to the reliability or genuineness or otherwise of the allegations made in the FIR or the complaint and that the extraordinary or inherent powers do not confer an arbitrary jurisdiction on the court to act according to its whim or caprice. Rajesh Bajaj v. State of NCT of Delhi, 1999 Cr LJ 1833 (SC) : AIR 1999 (SC) 1216 : 1999(3) SCC 259 : 1999(2) JT 112 : 1999(1) Scale 697 : 1999(2) Supreme 442.

21. Ingredients of offence.—Criminal breach of trust is defined in Section 405 of IPC. The ingredients of an offence of the criminal breach of trust are :

"1. Entrusting any person with property or with any dominion over property.

2. That person entrusted (a) dishonestly misappropriating or converting to his own use that property; or (b) dishonestly using or disposing of that property or willfully suffering any other person so to do in violation—

    (i) of any direction of law prescribing the mode in which such trust is to be discharged, or

    (ii) of any legal contract made touching the discharge of such trust.

An offence of cheating cannot be said to have been made out unless the following ingredients are satisfied :

"(i) deception of a person either by making a false or misleading representation or by other action or omission;

(ii) fraudulently or dishonestly inducing any person to deliver any property; or

(iii) To consent that any person shall retain any property and finally intentionally inducing that person to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit."

For the purpose of constituting an offence of cheating, the complainant is required to show that the accused had fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making promise or representation. Even in a case where allegations are made in regard to failure on the part of the accused to keep his promise, in absence of a culpable intention at the time of making initial promise being absent, no offence under Section 420 of the Indian Penal Code can be said to have been made out.

We may reiterate that one of the ingredients of cheating as defined in Section 415 of the Indian Penal Code is existence of an intention of making initial promise or existence thereof from the very beginning of formation of contract. S.V.L. Murthy vs. State, AIR 2009 SC 2717 : 2009 (6) SCC 77 : 2009 CrLJ 3930 : 2009 (7) JT 385 : 2009 (7) SCR 784 : 2009 (6) Scale 758 : 2009 (4) Supreme 399.

22. Sections 415 and 420—Ingredients of offence of.—An offence of cheating cannot be said to have been made out unless the following ingredients are satisfied : (i) deception of a person either by making a false or misleading representation or by other action or omission; (ii) fraudulently or dishonestly inducing any person to deliver any property; or (iii) To consent that any person shall retain any property and finally intentionally inducing that person to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit."

For the purpose of constituting an offence of cheating, the complainant is required to show that the accused had fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making promise or representation. Even in a case where allegations are made in regard to failure on the part of the accused to keep his promise, in absence of a culpable intention at the time of making initial promise being absent, no offence under Section 420 of the Indian Penal Code can be said to have been made out. Harmanpreet Singh Ahluwalia vs. State of Punjab, 2009 (7) SCC 712 : 2009 CrLJ 3462 : 2009 (7) SCR 563 : 2009 (6) JT 375 : 2009 (7) Scale 85 : 2009 (4) SLT 341.

23. Cheques—Post dated.—The cheques were post dated ones. Admittedly they were issued in the year 1996. They were presented before the bank on a much later date. They were in fact presented only on 10.01.2001. When the cheques were issued, the accounts were operative. Even assuming that the account was closed subsequently the same would not mean that the appellant had an intention to cheat when the post-dated cheques were issued. Even otherwise the allegations made in the complaint petition, even if given face value and taken to be correct in its entirety do not disclose commission of an offence under Sec. 420 of the Indian Penal Code. They do not satisfy the ingredients of the suit provision. It is, therefore, in the fact situation obtaining in the instant case, difficult to hold that the provisions of Sec. 420 of the Indian Penal Code were attracted. Subodh S. Salaskar v. Jayprakash M. Shah & Anr., AIR 2008 SC 3086 : 2008 (8) JT 637 (SC) : 2008 (11) Scale 42 (SC) : 2008 (7) SLT 127 : 2008 (8) SRJ 292 (SC) : 2008 CrLJ 3953 (SC) : 2008 (3) JCC 330 (NI) : 2008 (3) RecentCR 875 (SC).

24. Civil dispute—Quashing of complaint.—Indisputably, the parties entered into a contract in terms whereof the firm was to manufacture a machine to purify and desalt the dyes of a particular quality and quantity. The specifications for the machine were changed.

We may reiterate that one of the ingredients of cheating as defined in Section 415 of the Indian Penal Code is existence of an intention of making initial promise or existence thereof from the very beginning of formation of contract.

An offence of cheating may consist of two classes of cases :

(1) Where the complainant has been induced fraudulently or dishonestly. Such is not the case here;

(2) When by reason of such deception, the complainant has not done or omitted to do anything which he would not do or omit to do if he was not deceived or induced by the accused.

It is in that sense, a distinction between a mere breach of contract and the offence of cheating should be borne in mind. We, having regard to the facts and circumstances of the case, are of the opinion that no case has been made out and against the appellant so as to hold that he should face the criminal trial.

No exception can be taken to the aforementioned principles of law, as therein also it has categorically been held that exercise of inherent power under Section 482 is permissible where allegations set out in the complaint do not constitute the offence for which cognizance has been taken by the Magistrate. It is evidently a case of that nature.

For the reasons aforementioned, the judgment of the High Court cannot be sustained. It is set aside accordingly. Criminal proceedings against the appellants are quashed. The appeal is allowed. V.Y. Jose vs. State of Gujarat, 2009 (3) SCC 78 : 2008 (16) Scale 167 : 2008 (17) SCR 588 : 2009 (1) SLT 535.

Where in pursuance of the deception, no property passes, the offence is one of cheating punishable under Section 417, but where in pursuance of deception, property is delivered, the offence is punishable under Section 420. Anitesh v. State, AIR 1951 Assam 122 : 52 Cr LJ 1222.

A mere breach of contract cannot give rise to criminal prosecution. The distinction between a case of mere breach of contract and one of cheating depends upon the intention of the accused at the time of the alleged inducement. Where there is no clear and conclusive evidence of criminal intention of the accused at the time the offence is said to be committed and the aggrieved has an alternative remedy in a civil Court the matter should not be allowed to be fought in a Criminal Court. AIR 1959 Trip 40 : 1959 Cr LJ 1216.

An offence under Section 417 can be said to be committed both where the accused delivered some one and induced him to deliver a certain property to him by fraudulent or dishonest representation as also where the person deceived is proved to have done something which he was not bound to do, on a fraudulent or dishonest inducement by the accused as such an act caused or was likely to cause damage or harm in body, mind reputation or property of the person on whom the deception was practised. ILR (1963) 13 Raj 928 : 1963 Raj LW 416.

Where the accused made an offer to mortgage his property in order to pay off his creditors and thus averted institution of a suit against him, but subsequently would not complete the transaction unless a certain amount not originally stipulated were paid, held, that as the accused had no intention, under the circumstances of the case, to cheat at the time when the promise was made he was not guilty of the offence of cheating. 9 BHC 448. If the creditor by a trick induces his debtor to pay him money less than what is actually due to him in full settlement of the account, and then refuses to abide by the agreement, it is doubtful whether his act would amount to cheating. 25 PWR 1913 Cr : 14 Cr LJ 524 : 20 Ind Cas 1004 : 327 PLR 1913. Mere sending bogus insured letter is not cheating. AIR 1938 Sind 193. In the above case Davis, J.C., observed "Indeed, even if reliance be placed upon cases decided by the Patna High Court, which is the only Court, which it can be said, takes the view that a conviction such as this can be sustained, reference to the latest judgment of that Court. But it appears to me, with all respect to the learned Judge's of the Patna High Court, who decided the case in AIR 1933 Pat 183 : 14 PLT 48 : 145 Ind Cas 671 that the view taken by the Allahabad High Court in AIR 1924 All 205 : 83 Ind Cas 993 : 21 ALJ 865 : 26 Cr LJ 209, by Calcutta High Court in 50 Cal 849 : 73 Ind Cas 780 : 24 Cr LJ 684 : 28 CWN 252 and by the Madras High Court in 28 Cr LJ 70 : AIR 1927 Mad 199 : 99 Ind Cas 102 : 59 MLJ 800 is the better view and that whatever offence may be committed when a bogus insured cover is sent through the post, the offence of cheating the addresses within the provisions of Section 417, I.P. Code, is not committed and I think this is clear from the words of Section 415, I.P. Code, itself.

It is clear from the words of Section 415 that mere deceit of a person is not sufficient. The mere doing something fraudulently or dishonestly is not sufficient. The deceit of the fraudulent or dishonest person must induce the person deceived to deliver some property, or to consent that some property shall be retained, or intentionall induce the person deceived to do or omit to do something which he would not otherwis do or omit to do, and these words are important, and which act or omission causes o likely to cause damages or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property But when the section says which act or omission causes or likely to cause damage o harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property' it appears to me, it clearl means—Which act or omission in itself cause or is likely to cause damage or harm t that person in body mind, reputation or property and that if that damage or harm i dependent upon the future act of some other person, then such damage or harm is to remote to be within the provisions of the section, which contemplates that the act don is in itself likely to cause damage or harm and which is not dependent for damage o harm upon the entirely problematical action of some other person. To use a trite phras the act done or omitted to be done must be the causa causaus of the harm caused o likely to be cause. This interpretation of the section is strongly supported and clearl put in the Calcutta and Madras cases and also in the Allahabad case to which I sha refer".

In a suit for pre-emption, a consent decree was passed on plaintiffs agreeing to pa a certain sum in cash and to discharge a prior incumbrance. The plaintiff subsequentl discovered that the defendant, the vendor, had, after the purchase but before the suit mortgaged the property. But there was no evidence to show that the plaintiff would no have consented to pay the consideration, he had been aware of the charge created b the vendee. Held, that there was no obligation on the vendee to disclose the existence o the mortgages, and that consequently, his omission to do so would not constitute th offence of cheating. 27 All 302 : AWN 1904, 205 :1 CLJ 1044. The undertaking which the latter offered to file not having been proved by the opposite party was not filed, whereupon the opposite party started proceedings against the pleader under Section 417 of the Penal Code. Held, that the proceedings should be quashed as no prima facie case of cheating had been made out. 20 CWN 1112. Giving a post-dated cheque by a person having no funds in bank does not amount to an offence of cheating when there is no evidence to show that the person to whom the cheque was given parted with any property or that he did or omitted to do anything which he would not have done or omitted to do if he had known that the cheque would be dishonoured. The dispute in such a case is of a civil nature. AIR 1940 Lah 93 : 41 Cr LJ 594. 2. Illegal Contract.—When a person enters into an illegal contract, he cannot complain of cheating against the other party for not fulfilling the obligation. The penal provision is not meant for such person. In the instant case, the offence alleged against the petitioners, were cheating and entering into conspiracy to cheat. The basic allegation was that the accused promised to pay or deposit a some of Rs. 40,000/- to the complainant for his withdrawal of candidature from the election and thereafter resiled from the same by not paying it in spite of the complainant fulfilling his part of agreement, viz, withdrawal from the contest. The Hon'ble Court observed that "As such, on the very allegation found in the complaint and speaking to the same in the sworn statement and as the complainant has admitted in clear terms that he withdrew his candidature from contest only after he entered into an agreement with the petitioner who had promised him to pay a certain amount for such withdrawal. This agreement, in my view, is not only an illegal agreement or contract, but also opposed to public policy, such agreement is illegal and unenforceable under the law. Even if the part of the agreement is realised by the other side, the complainant cannot allege the offence of cheating by the other side" – 2000 Cri LJ 4216 (Kant).

6. False promise to marry.—Where the prosecution can establish the essential ingredients of cheating u/S. 415, IPC and where the accused dishonestly inducing woman to have sexual intercourse with him on the basis of false promise to marry her, case of simple cheating under S. 417 of Penal Code could be said to be made out.

Per I.A. Ansari, J. The ingredients of the offence of cheating require (i) deception of a person, (ii) whereby, fraudulently or dishonestly, inducing the person, so deceived, to deliver any property to any person or to consent that any person shall retain any property, or (iii) intentionally inducing that person to do or omit to do anything, which he would not do or omit if he were not so deceived, and which act or omission causes or is likely to cause damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property. Deception of a person is common to the second and third requirements of the provisions of S. 415. The ingredients, as pointed out under (i) and (ii) herein before, are alternative to each other and this is made significantly clear by use of disjunctive conjunction 'or'. The definition of the offence of cheating embraces cases in which no transfer of property is occasioned by the deception and also cases in which such a transfer occurs. Deception is the quintessence of the offence. When an accused makes a false promise to marry, which he never intends to carry out, and induces thereby the victim, so deceived, to have with him sexual act, which the victim would not have indulged in or permitted, had she not been induced by such deception and, when such act of having sexual intercourse by her with the accused causes, or is likely to cause, damage or harm to her body, mind or reputation, the act of the accused would amount to cheating. Thus, when a woman is induced to part with her chastity or virginity, which is the most valued possession of hers, the person, who so induces the woman by making false representation, would be liable for punishment under S. 417, IPC if the victim's having sexual intercourse, with such a person, causes or is likely to cause harm to her body, mind or reputation, for, in such a case, unless so deceived, the victim would not have permitted sexual act by the accused. Bipul Medhi and etc. v. State of Assam, 2008 CriLJ 1099 (Gau).

In the instant case, although petitioner No. 1 to 3 filed a civil suit regarding some property against their father petitioner No. 4 and father's sister Smt. Phoola but that suit was withdrawn and no decree was passed in favour of petitioner Nos. 1 to 3 as is evident from Annexure P-4, Petitioner Nos. 1 to 3 are nephews and petitioner No. 4 is the brother of respondent No. 2. They have amicably settled the dispute regarding the property and Phoola does not want to pursue the case against the petitioners. Although the offence with which the petitioners have been charged are not compoundable yet considering the fact that the parties had buried the hatchet by settling all disputes amicably, the continuation of proceedings in the courts specially when Smt. 1. Criminal Intent.—In order to make out an offence under this section, it is necessary to establish criminal intent at the time of the alleged bargain. The fact that the accused denies in Court the transaction altogether and refuses to return the money does not necessarily show that he had a criminal intent from the very beginning. 39 PLR 300 : 169 Ind Cas 1007 : 38 Cr LJ 845. The mere breach of contract cannot give rise to a criminal prosecution. The distinction between a case of mere breach of contract and one of cheating depends upon the intention of the accused at the time of the alleged inducement which may be judged by his subsequent act, but of which the subsequent act is not the sole criterion. In the absence of clear and conclusive evidence of the criminal intention of the accused at the time of the alleged commission of the offence, and when the aggrieved party has an alternative or remedy in the trial Court, the matter should not be allowed to be brought in a Criminal Court. 159 Ind Cas 167 : 16 PLT 553. Where a complaint of an offence of cheating is made on the ground that the accused has entered into a contract with the complainant to work for the latter and that he had not commenced work in spite of complainant making two payments as agreed, the complainant has to establish a pre-conceived intention on the part of the accused of not carrying out the terms of the agreement. 1953 Cr LJ 1359 : AIR 1953 J & K 22. In order to bring the case within the offence of cheating, it is necessary to prove that at the time the accused made the representation, he knew that it was false and it was made in order to deceive the person paying the money. 1962 Raj LW 229 ; see also ILR (1957) 2 Cal 443 (payment in cheque of goods purchased). AIR 1956 SC 541 : 1956 Cr LJ 948 (cheque not supported by credit in bank deposited by way of security) ; AIR 1956 Pat 256 : 1956 Cr LJ 916 : 1956 BLJR 86 (crossword competition—Condition that Editor's decision will be final, silence over competition correspondence no mens rea and no offence) ; AIR 1954 SC 724 : 1954 Cr LJ 1806 (non-payment of price of goods on delivery) ; 30 Cut LT 253 : ILR 1964 Cut 248 : (1964) 6 Ori JD 264 (process server recovering excess amounts under false representation).

In order to constitute an offence of cheating, the intention to deceive should be in existence at the time when the inducement was made. It is necessary to show that a person had a fraudulent intention at the time of making the promise to say that he committed an act of cheating. A mere failure to keep up promise cannot be presumed as an act leading to cheating. S.N. Palanitkar v. State of Bihar, 2001 Cri LJ 4765(SC).

Criminal intention at the time of offence is to be established and mere breach of contract can not give rise to criminal intention. 1977 Cr LJ 463 : see also 1973 Cr LJ 1481 ; 1983 Cr LJ 1661. To hold a man guilty of offence of cheating it must be held that he had a dishonest intention at the time of making the promise. AIR 1973 SC 330 : 1983 (2) Crimes 904 ; 1979 Cr LJ 446 ; 1967 Cut LT 396.

Where there was dishonest intention of cheating essential to constitute offence—Petition was filed by complainant against refusal to frame charge against accused under Section 420, I.P.C.—Complaint was against Bank Manager who advised Complainant to pay due amount under gold loan account and at same time declined to deliver ornaments as he has to refer matter to controlling office—Complaint against the same was made—There being no dishonest intention in refusing to deliver ornaments and in asking him to pay due amount—Charge not framed against Manager—This order was not challenged and subsequent prayer to frame charge was refused. There being no serious prejudice caused to complainant, no interference warranted specially in absence of dishonest intention. Uma Dutta v. G. Mahadevan, (1994) 1 East Cr C 15 (Ori).

For making false document, intention must be dishonest or fraudulent as in case of cheating. C.H. Logani v. State of Rajasthan, 1992 RCC 335.

In the instant case where the accused agreed to sell a plot to the complainant but failed to execute sale deed on the stipulated date there was nothing in the complaint to show that the intention of the accused from the very beginning was fraudulent or dishonest. It was held that the complainants' allegations made out a case of breach of contract for which remedy was in the lure court and that criminal complaint was not maintainable. Shashi Pratap Singh v. State of U.P. 2001 Cri LJ 3900 (All) : 2001(2) A Cr R 1339 (1341, 1342) : 2001(1) UP Cr R 653 : 2001(42) Acc 172(2).

2. Cheating, ingredients of.—The offence is made up of two ingredients. Deception of any person and fraudulently or dishonestly inducing that person to deliver any property to any person or to consent that any person shall retain any property. 1951 MWN 285 : 6 DLR 281 (Mad) : 5 Al Cr D 844 : (1951) 1 MLJ 554. It cannot be laid down as a proposition of law that in every case where cheating is based upon a void and illegal agreement, there can be no criminal prosecution for cheating. 5 Al Cr D 420 : 6 DLR (All) 195 : 1951 AWR (HC) 640. A wilful misrepresentation of a definite fact with intent to defraud would be cheating. 1952 Cr LJ 123 : AIR 1952 J & K 26. Under Section 420, the presentation may not be sole cause of the damage or loss. ILR 1953 Hyd 193. Mere parting with money is not sufficient to constitute cheating. (1960) 2 Ker LR 287 : 1961 Mad LJ (Cr) 350 : 1962 (1) Cr LJ 654. The ingredients of the offence under Section 420 are that the person deceived delivered to some one a valuable security or property, that the person so deceived was induced to do so, that such person acted on such inducement in consequence of his having been deceived by the accused and that the accused acted fraudulently or dishonestly when so inducing that person. AIR 1961 Pat 451 : 1960 (2) Cr LJ 677 ; (1960) 2 Ori JD 261 ; 1957 All WR (HC) 293 : 1957 All LJ 141 (breach of contract and cheating) ; 1964 Ker LJ 909 : 1964 Ker LT 724 : 1964 MLJ (Cr) 609 (accused collecting money by sale of lottery tickets, lots not drawn it amounts to cheating) ; 1963 (1) Cr LJ 716.

Accused cheated by executing false sale deeds. Complaint filed by real owner of property. Accused bona fide believed that suit property belongs to him. Purchaser also believed that suit property belongs to accused.

When a sale-deed is executed conveying a property claiming ownership thereto, it may be possible for the purchaser under such sale-deed, to allege that the vendor has cheated him by making a false representation of ownership and fraudulently induced him to part with the sale consideration. But in this case the complaint is not by the purchaser. On the other hand, the purchaser is made a co-accused. It is not the case of the complainant that any of the accused tried to deceive him either by making a false or misleading representation or by any other action or omission, nor is it his case that they offered him any fraudulent or dishonest inducement to deliver any property or to consent to the retention thereof by any person or to intentionally induce him to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit if he were not so deceived. Nor did the complainant allege that the first appellant pretended to be the complainant while executing the sale deeds. Therefore, it cannot be said that the first accused by the act of executing sale deeds in favour of the second accused or the second accused by reason of being the purchaser, or the third, fourth and fifth accused, by reason of being the witness, scribe and stamp vendor in regard to the sale deeds, deceived the complainant in any manner. As the ingredients of cheating as stated in Section 415 are not found, it cannot be said that there was an offence punishable under Section 417, 418, 419 or 420 of the Code.

A clarification

When we say that execution of a sale deed by a person, purporting to convey a property which is not his, as his property, is not making a false document and, therefore, not forgery, we should not be understood as holding that such an act can never be a criminal offence. If a person sells a property knowing that it does not belong to him, and thereby defrauds the person who purchased the property, the person defrauded, that is the purchaser, may complain that the vendor committed the fraudulent act of cheating. But a third party who is not the purchaser under the deed may not be able to make such complaint. The term 'fraud' is not defined in the Code. The dictionary definition of 'fraud' is "deliberate deception, treachery or cheating intended to gain advantage". Section 17 of the Contract Act, 1872 defines 'fraud' with reference to a party to a contract. In Dr. Vimla vs. Delhi Administration, AIR 1963 SC 1572, this Court explained the meaning of the expression 'defraud' thus :

> "The expression "defraud" involves two elements, namely, deceit and injury to the person deceived. Injury is something other than economic loss that is, deprivation of property, whether movable or immovable, or of money, and it will include any harm whatever caused to any person in body, mind, reputation or such others. In short, it is a non-economic or non-pecuniary loss. A benefit or advantage to the deceiver will almost always cause loss or detriment to the deceived. Even in those rare cases where there is a benefit or advantage to the deceiver, but no corresponding loss to the deceived, the second condition is satisfied".

The above definition was in essence reiterated in State of U.P. vs. Ranjit Singh, 1999 (2) SCC 617 = AIR 1999 SCW 863.

The Penal Code however defines 'fraudulently', an adjective form of the word 'fraud', in Section 25, as follows : "A person is said to do a thing fraudulently if he does that thing with intent to defraud but not otherwise". The term "fraudulently" is mostly used with the term "dishonestly" which is defined in Section 24 as follows :

> "Whoever does anything with the intention of causing wrongful gain to one person or wrongful loss to another person is said to do that thing "dishonestly". To 'defraud' or do something fraudulently is not by itself made an offence under the Penal Code, but various acts when done fraudulently (or fraudulently and dishonestly) are made offences. These include :

(i) Fraudulent removal or concealment of property (Sections 206, 421, 424)

(ii) Fraudulent claim to property to prevent seizure (Section 207)

(iii) Fraudulent suffering or obtaining a decree (Sections 208 and 210)

(iv) Fraudulent possession/delivery of counterfeit coin (Sections 239, 240, 242 an 243)

(v) Fraudulent alteration/diminishing weight of coin (Sections 246 to 253)

(vi) Fraudulent acts relating to stamps (Sections 261-261)

(vii) Fraudulent use of false instruments/weight/measure (Sections 264 to 266)

(viii) Cheating (Sections 415 to 420)

(ix) Fraudulent prevention of debt being available to creditors (Section 422)

(x) Fraudulent execution of deed of transfer containing false statement consideration (Section 423)

(xi) Forgery making or executing a false document (Sections 463 to 471 and 474)

(xii) Fraudulent cancellation/destruction of valuable security etc. (Section 477)

(xiii) Fraudulently going through marriage ceremony (Section 496).

It follows, therefore, that by merely alleging or showing that a person acte fraudulently, it cannot be assumed that he committed an offence punishable under th Code or any other law, unless that fraudulent act is specified to be an offence under th Code or other law.

Section 504 of Penal Code

The allegations in the complaint do not also made out the ingredients of an offenc under Section 504 of the Penal Code. Section 504 refers to intentional insult with inter to provoke breach of peace. The allegation in the complainant is that when he enquire with accused about the sale deeds, they asserted that they will obtain possession land under the sale deeds and he can do whatever he wants. The statement attribute to appellants, it cannot be said to amount to an "insult with intent to provoke breach peace". The statement attributed to accused, even if it was true, was merely a statemen referring to the consequence of execution of the sale deeds by first appellants in favou of the second appellant.

Conclusion

The averments in the complaint if assumed to be true, do not make out any offenc under Sections 420, 467, 471 and 504 of the Code, but may technically show th ingredients of offences of wrongful restraint under Section 341 and causing hurt unde Section 323 of IPC. Md. Ibrahim & Ors. vs. State of Bihar & Anr., 2010 (2) CrLJ 222 (SC).

For a person to be convicted under Section 420, it has to be established not on that he has cheated some one but also that by doing so he has dishonestly induced th person who cheated to deliver any property etc. A person can be said to have done thing dishonestly if he does so with the intention of causing wrongful gain to one perso or wrongful loss to another person. Wrongful loss is the loss by unlawful means of property to which a person is entitled while wrongful gain to a person means a gain to him by unlawful means of property to which the person gaining is not legally entitled. (1963) 2 SCJ 274 : 1963 (1) Cr LJ 623 : AIR 1963 SC 666.

Where the case of cheating is concerned with the first portion of Section 415 in the definition of cheating, the question of inducing the person deceived to do or omit to do anything and the question whether the act or omission caused or was likely to cause damage or harm to that person in mind, body, reputation do not enter into the picture at all. 1963 (1) Cr LJ 716.

A false representation must relate to some fact that is either past or present. A statement purely affecting the future will not suffice. 1965 (2) Cr LJ 499 (1) : AIR 1965 Guj 269. In order to constitute an offence of cheating, it is to be proved that the accused dishonestly induced the complainant to part with his property. 1965 ALJ 272 : 1983 Cr LJ 2266 ; AIR 1983 SC 1149 : AIR 1970 Pat 20.

3. Scope.—"An increased punishment may be awarded where the cheating causes any property to be delivered 'dishonest' that is where it is of the kind which the first clause of the definition in Section 415 describes ; where it causes a valuable security as a title-deed, bond, bill of exchange, receipt, etc., to be made, altered, or destroyed or where it causes such a document as a deed, bond, bill of exchange, receipt, etc. which has been prepared, but which still continues in the hands of the person who will be bound thereby and has not yet taken effect or come into operation to be made that is completed and brought into force by delivery, etc., altered, or destroyed".—Morgan and Macpherson, 387. The question, that arises for consideration, is as to why the receipts and the summaries were forged by the accused. As stated above, the persons, who purportedly signed these receipts, denied their handwriting and signatures thereon as also the deposit of the amount and refund thereof. Since it was proved, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the receipts and the summaries, referred to above, were in the handwriting and under the signatures of the accused and as such, he forged these documents, it was he, who was to be benefitted by preparation of the same. Under these circumstances, it could be said that by forging the receipts and summaries, the only motive of the accused, was to withdraw the money. Such a withdrawal/refund of the money, depicted in the receipts, which was never deposited, was nothing but illegal. The amount of the receipts was neither deposited by the consignees, nor refunded to them. The only inference that could be drawn was that the accused by forging the receipts and obtaining the refund on the basis thereof of the amount, which was never deposited.

4. Juristic Persons.—Section 420 provides that accused shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years. The word "shall be punished" makes it compulsory on the Court to impose punishment with imprisonment if accused is found guilty. Admittedly, Essar Constructions Ltd. is a juristic person, punishment of imprisonment cannot be awarded. Hence, prosection of Esar Constructions Ltd under Section 420, I.P.C., does not appear to be legal, permissible and justified. Essar Constructions Ltd. v. Central Bereau of Investigation, 1999 Cri LJ 1861 (Bom).

It is crystal clear from the allegations made in the complaint itself that GFFL was not a company on paper. The company had substantial assets in the form of 250-300 acres of land and it has in fact planted more than one lac Eucalyptus trees on the said land. Therefore, the mere fact that later on the accused turned dishonest and misappropriated the whole amount will not lead to an inference that their intention from the very beginning was fraudulent. Therefore, the contention on behalf of the petitioners is correct that the liability of the accused, if any, is of a civil nature and it is a case of breach of contract.

The transaction between the parties was of a civil nature and it is a case of mere breach of agreement for which the remedy was to file a civil suit. No criminal offence is made out from the allegations made in the complaint. There does not appear to be any conspiracy in floating the Company. Necessary facts to establish inducement of allurement are wanting in the complaint. It is not the accused who approached the complainant. It is stated in paragraph 4 of the complaint that the complainant came into contact with the accused through his cousin at Bombay. Merely giving an exaggerated account of the scheme cannot be said to be cheating. Company is not a paper Company. It has substantial assets in the shape of 250-300 acres of land. The company had actually planted more than one Lac Eucalyptus trees. The mere fact that the accused retained the sale proceeds of trees will not render their action as of criminal nature. Kamal Krishna Chopra v. State of U.P., 1999 Cri LJ 2345 (All).

When conspiracy and forgery of master, rolls by several persons are established, finding of trial court about conspiracy upheld. State of T.N. v. T. Thulasingam, 1994 SCC (Cri) 1504.

Accused cheated by executing false sale deeds. Complaint filed by real owner of property. Accused bona fide believed that suit property belongs to him. Purchaser also believed that suit property belongs to accused.

When a sale-deed is executed conveying a property claiming ownership thereto, it may be possible for the purchaser under such sale-deed, to allege that the vendor has cheated him by making a false representation of ownership and fraudulently induced him to part with the sale consideration. But in this case the complaint is not by the purchaser. On the other hand, the purchaser is made a co-accused. It is not the case of the complainant that any of the accused tried to deceive him either by making a false or misleading representation or by any other action or omission, nor is it his case that they offered him any fraudulent or dishonest inducement to deliver any property or to consent to the retention thereof by any person or to intentionally induce him to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit if he were not so deceived. Nor did the complainant allege that the first appellant pretended to be the complainant while executing the sale deeds. Therefore, it cannot be said that the first accused by the act of executing sale deeds in favour of the second accused or the second accused by reason of being the purchaser, or the third, fourth and fifth accused, by reason of being the witness, scribe and stamp vendor in regard to the sale deeds, deceived the complainant in any manner. As the ingredients of cheating as stated in Section 415 are not found, it cannot be said that there was an offence punishable under Section 417, 418, 419 or 420 of the Code.

When we say that execution of a sale deed by a person, purporting to convey a property which is not his, as his property, is not making a false document and, therefore, not forgery, we should not be understood as holding that such an act can never be a criminal offence. If a person sells a property knowing that it does not belong to him, and thereby defrauds the person who purchased the property, the person defrauded, that is the purchaser, may complain that the vendor committed the fraudulent act of cheating. But a third party who is not the purchaser under the deed may not be able to make such complaint. The term 'fraud' is not defined in the Code. The dictionary definition of 'fraud' is "deliberate deception, treachery or cheating intended to gain advantage". Section 17 of the Contract Act, 1872 defines 'fraud' with reference to a party to a contract. In Dr. Vimla vs. Delhi Administration, AIR 1963 SC 1572, this Court explained the meaning of the expression 'defraud' thus :

> "The expression "defraud" involves two elements, namely, deceit and injury to the person deceived. Injury is something other than economic loss that is, deprivation of property, whether movable or immovable, or of money, and it will include any harm whatever caused to any person in body, mind, reputation or such others. In short, it is a non-economic or non-pecuniary loss. A benefit or advantage to the deceiver will almost always cause loss or detriment to the deceived. Even in those rare cases where there is a benefit or advantage to the deceiver, but no corresponding loss to the deceived, the second condition is satisfied".

The Penal Code however defines 'fraudulently', an adjective form of the word 'fraud', in Section 25, as follows : "A person is said to do a thing fraudulently if he does that thing with intent to defraud but not otherwise". The term "fraudulently" is mostly used with the term "dishonestly" which is defined in Section 24 as follows :

> "Whoever does anything with the intention of causing wrongful gain to one person or wrongful loss to another person is said to do that thing "dishonestly". To 'defraud' or do something fraudulently is not by itself made an offence under the Penal Code, but various acts when done fraudulently (or fraudulently and dishonestly) are made offences. These include :

(i) Fraudulent removal or concealment of property (Sections 206, 421, 424)

(ii) Fraudulent claim to property to prevent seizure (Section 207)

(iii) Fraudulent suffering or obtaining a decree (Sections 208 and 210)

(iv) Fraudulent possession/delivery of counterfeit coin (Sections 239, 240, 242 and 243)

(v) Fraudulent alteration/diminishing weight of coin (Sections 246 to 253)

(vi) Fraudulent acts relating to stamps (Sections 261-261)

(vii) Fraudulent use of false instruments/weight/measure (Sections 264 to 266)

(viii) Cheating (Sections 415 to 420)

(ix) Fraudulent prevention of debt being available to creditors (Section 422)

(x) Fraudulent execution of deed of transfer containing false statement of consideration (Section 423)

(xi) Forgery making or executing a false document (Sections 463 to 471 and 474)

(xii) Fraudulent cancellation/destruction of valuable security etc. (Section 477)

It follows, therefore, that by merely alleging or showing that a person acted fraudulently, it cannot be assumed that he committed an offence punishable under the Code or any other law, unless that fraudulent act is specified to be an offence under the Code or other law.

Section 504 of Penal Code

The allegations in the complaint do not also made out the ingredients of an offence under Section 504 of the Penal Code. Section 504 refers to intentional insult with intent to provoke breach of peace. The allegation in the complainant is that when he enquired with accused about the sale deeds, they asserted that they will obtain possession of land under the sale deeds and he can do whatever he wants. The statement attributed to appellants, it cannot be said to amount to an "insult with intent to provoke breach of peace". The statement attributed to accused, even if it was true, was merely a statement referring to the consequence of execution of the sale deeds by first appellants in favour of the second appellant.

Conclusion

The averments in the complaint if assumed to be true, do not make out any offence under Sections 420, 467, 471 and 504 of the Code, but may technically show the ingredients of offences of wrongful restraint under Section 341 and causing hurt under Section 323 of I.P.C. *Md. That on or about the...........day of..........you cheated A,B, by dishonestly inducing him to deliver.........(mention the property) to you which was the property of the said A, B [or to make, alter or destroy the whole or any part of a valuable security (or anything which is signed or sealed, which is capable of being converted into a valuable security) and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 420 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

In framing a charge under Section 420, it is necessary to set out not merely the fact that the accused has obtained goods by dishonest means, but also the deception which has been practised. The nature of the representation by which the complainant was induced to make over the goods should be mentioned in the charge. The need of framing a precise charge is all the stronger when the charge is based on obtaining goods by tendering post-dated cheque in which the representation is implied rather than directly expressed. 10. Punishment.—This section requires that on a conviction being recorded, a substantive term of imprisonment should be awarded. 1946 AMLJ 8 ; see also AIR 1950 All 639. Where there is strong indication, on the evidence on record, that there were other and perhaps bigger persons involved in the fraud for which the accused was tried and they are not brought to book, the circumstance though it does not excuse or exonerate the accused from his guilty which has established beyond reasonable doubt has, nevertheless, a bearing on the question of sentence. 1953 Ker LT 295 : 1953 Cr LJ 1928 : AIR 1953 SC 462 ; AIR 1960 SC 734 ; 1969 Cr LJ 1148 ; AIR 1974 SC 898 : 1974 Cr LJ 751 ; 1981 (Supp) SCC 82 : 1982 SCC (Cr) 470.

13. Proof and evidence.—In a case of cheating, it is for the prosecution to show that at the time the accused entered into the transaction with the complainant, the accused had no intention to pay the money that he was actuated by a dishonest intention to cheat the complainant. AIR 1960 AP 311 : 1960 CrLJ 787. In prosecution under Sec. 420, it is the prosecution to prove affirmatively that the accused knew that the representations made by him are false. In the absence of circumstances from which it can be gathered that any such knowledge can be imputed to the accused, it is a case in which the benefit of reasonable doubt should be given to the accused. The burden of proof is never shifted to the accused. And if a reasonable explanation is given by the accused, the Court will have to take that into consideration and that if it thinks that the explanation may reasonably be true, though it is not convinced about the truth, it should acquit the accused. AIR 1957 SC 466 : 1957 CrLJ 583.

The question, that arises for consideration, is as to why the receipts and the summaries were forged by the accused. As stated above, the persons, who purportedly signed these receipts, denied their handwriting and signatures thereon as also the deposit of the amount and refund thereof. Since it was proved, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the receipts and the summaries, referred to above, were in the handwriting and under the signatures of the accused and as such, he forged these documents, it was he, who was to be benefitted by preparation of the same. Under these circumstances, it could be said that by forging the receipts and summaries, the only motive of the accused, was to withdraw the money. Such a withdrawal/refund of the money, depicted in the receipts, which was never deposited, was nothing but illegal. The amount of the receipts was neither deposited by the consignees, nor refunded to them. The only inference that could be drawn was that the accused by forging the receipts and obtaining the refund on the basis thereof of the amount, which was never deposited, cheated the Northern Railways. The trial Court was, thus, right in holding that the accused by his such act and conduct, committed the offence, punishable under Section 420 of the Indian Penal Code. This Court, on re-appraisal and re-appreciation of the evidence of the prosecution, also comes to the same conclusion. The findings of the trial Court, in this regard, being based, on the correct appreciation of evidence, are upheld. Lall Chand vs. State of Punjab & Anr., 2010 (1) Cri LJ 699 (P&H).

The fact that the Hundi was not actually paid when it was presented for payment would not by itself make the accused guilty of cheating. The accused can be held guilty of cheating only if on the circumstances proved by the prosecution the Court could draw a clear inference and the only inference that the intention of the accused at the time when he passed the Hundi to a certain firm was to cheat the firm, not otherwise. 16. Sanction.—In AIR 1950 Raj 51 at p. 53, the Court observed : "As far as the offence under Section 420 or Section 120-B, read with Section 420 is concerned, I feel no difficulty in holding without hesitation, that the sanction of the Government is necessary for prosecuting a public servant for these offences. In the present case, the committing Magistrate has not written anything in his judgment as to how the offence under Section 420 is made out against the applicants. A public servant can cheat the Government only by an official act done in official capacity. I cannot conceive of any case where a Government can be cheated by the private act of public servant. As far as the offence under Section 120-B, read with Section 420, is concerned, the learned Government Advocate has not pressed the point before me at all. It is obvious from H.B. Gills v. King, AIR 1948 PC 128 : 49 Cr LJ 503, that sanction to prosecute a public servant under Section 120-B read with Section 420 was obtained. Accused agreed to supply dal to firm and used railway and dal was stolen by him. Bank in response to Hundi and R.R. collected amount from drawee firm and remitting it for payment to accused. Evidence shown that accused cheated firms by forging letters, Hundies, RRs and making use of such forged documents. Hence, offence of cheating and forgery proved. Hence conviction proper. Satrangi Lal alias Kishan Lal v. State of Haryana, 1995 Cr LJ 969 (P&H).

Where there was charge against five accused persons including appellant (A-2) for offences under Section 420, read with Sections 34 and 5(1)(d) and 5(2) of P.C. Act—A-3 and A-5 acquitted and conviction of A-1 and A-4 not challenged—Conviction of appellant was confirmed by High Court which was challenged in appeal. The penal provisions of Section 5(l)(d) or 5(2) of P.C. Act or Section 420, I.P.C., are not attracted and mere suspicion that appellant may have some connection with A-4 will not be sufficient to convict appellant. R.M. Vellaiyam v. State of Tamil Nadu, (1995) 2 LW (Cr) 426 (SC)..

18. Sentence.—When accused was rightly convicted for fraud committed by him, his sentence can be reduced to period already undergone in view of protracted trial. Deep Chand v. State of Haryana, 1993 (2) Recent Cr R 369 (P&H).

Reduction—Appellant as a public servant.—Northern Railways, by forging the receipts and the summaries and by misusing his official position withdrew the money, by way of refund, on the basis of the said documents, though no such amount was deposited with the Railways. If a public servant, acts in this manner, then he brings disrepute to the Institution, as a whole. The trial Court, as is evident, from the record, in my opinion, took a lenient view and awarded sentence of rigorous imprisonment for a period of one year on each count. The sentence awarded by the trial Court, being already on the lower side, no ground, whatsoever, is made out, for reduction of the same. However, the mere fact that the appellant has been facing the criminal proceedings, for the last more than 20 years, in itself, is not sufficient to reduce the sentence, awarded to him by the trial Court. Further reduction of sentence, would amount to mockery and travesty of justice. Lall Chand vs. State of Punjab & Anr., 2010 (1) CrLJ 699 (P&H)

In Y.K. Gupta v. State of U.P., 2001 Cri LJ 339 (All.) : 2001(1) UP Cr R 20 (All). Assistant Manager in Financial Corporation provided loan to a small enterpreneur. The plant and machinery purchased by the loanee was old but it was shown to be new one. The Covenant made by the loanee was that the plant and other assets to be mortgaged were absolute property of the loanee free from any prior charge and having exclusive power to mortgage the plant and other assets. No part of the mortgage deed suggested that the loanee was required to purchase mortgage new plant and machinery. The loanee was thus not obliged to purchase new plant and machinery from out of the amount of loan sanctioned to him by the U.P. Financial Corporation. No doubt, the loanee said that he purchased the new plant and machinery. But that ins itself did not absolve the prosecution from the liability to establish that the plant and machinery to be acquired from out of the loan were required to be new. Thus, on the one hand, there was nothing on behalf of the prosecution that the loanee was required to purchase new machinery or the loan was sanctioned for the purchase of new plant and machinery and in the other hand, there was nothing on record to show that the loan could not have been disbursed on the basis of old plant and machinery. The Court, after examining the documents and considering the evidence, observed as under:

> "In the circumstances, there is nothing on record to establish that Mohammad Hanif has purchased old machinery and had thereby tried to cheat the U.P. Financial Corporation. He had purchased machines documents of which could not be retired by the U.P. Financial Corporation. He then applied for change of supplier and then again purchased the plant and machinery. A small scale entrepreneur living in a village cannot be presumed to have technical knowledge and in such circumstances, it is difficult to say that he was cheating. Moreover, seeing the nature and value of security having been offered by Mohd. Hanif, cheating seems to be a far fetched perception.
> "Much emphasis has been laid by the prosecution on fact that the supplier when contacted could not be found at the address given in the cash memo No buyer can be held guilty of a crime if the supplier from whom he purchased the machinery had at a subsequent time chose to close down the business or to shift from the given address. The mere fact that the supplier was not found at the given address will not make the purchase of machinery by a buyer illegal or unauthorised, nor any criminal liability can be fastened on account of shifting of premises or closure of the business by the seller of the machinery".
> "Even if the machinery was old but of the value thereof was sufficient to meet the liability, it is not possible to say that the question of cheating is involved as the machinery was of much larger amount likely to fetch much more than the loan disbursed".

The Court ultimately came to the conclusion that there was no intention to defraud on the part of the Assistant Manager (accused) and, therefore no offence of cheating or forgery was made out.

It was alleged that the cheating was committed by not disclosing original religion at time of marriage and a complaint was filed against respondent for taking the cognizance of offence. On investigation having been made by the police it was found that no material to frame the charge of cheating was available and magistrate dismissed the complaint. Dismissal of complaint by magistrate was held proper. Mohd. Gyasuddin v. Jahangeer Karanjrab, 2003 Cr LJ 966 (AP) : 2002(2) ALD (CRL) 654 : 2003(1) Andh LT (Cri) AP 1.

20. Quashing of proceeding.—When petitioner issued cheque of Rs. 10,000/- in lieu of past rent due, cheque was dishonoured—Complaint was that, cheque was issued knowingly that there was no money in bank account. There was no occasion for fraudulent or dishonest inducement of complainant by petitioner—It was only breach of promise and not a criminal liability under Section 420—Complaint was quashed. Susemma Bijoy v. Mohinder Kumar Guleria, (1994) 3 Crimes 164 (HP).

Complaint against petitioner was filed when complainant filed suit to declare will null and void, no allegation of forgery was made. It was only alleged that will was obtained by practising fraud and undue influence—Will bore signatures of complainant and petitioner as attesting witnesses—Civil Court has declared will null and void—Present proceedings initiated against petitioner being abuse of process of Court liable to be quashed. Amrik Singh v. State of Haryana, 1994 (1) Crimes 789 (P&H).

In a complaint case, pursuant to an application certain machinery was seized from the accused. It was handed over to the complainant by way of supurdgi. The accused moved an application under Section 482, Cr. P.C. for quashing the order of the Magistrate for supurdgi. On examination of record, it was found that the applicant accused had purchased it i.e., his liability was thus of a civil nature and as such his claim for supurdgi is superior. Complaint under Section 156, Cr. P.C., before Addl. C.J.M., New Delhi, Magistrate ordering investigation by police at pre-cognizance stage—Writ petition for quashing of the order. It was held that when a Magistrate receives a complaint, he is not bound to take cognizance if facts alleged in the complaint disclose the commission of an offence. The Magistrate has discretion in the matter. If he finds the allegations therein disclose a cognizable offence and forwarding of the complaint to the police for investigation will be conducive to justice and save valuable time of Magistrate, he will be justified in adopting that course. There is no ground for quashing the investigation. Daulat Radhu Bhatjia v. State. (1994) 2 CC Cases 433 (Del).

Where case under Section 420/376, I.P.C., was registered against K and petitioners who are his sisters—Petition under Section 482, Cr. P.C., was filed for quashing of F.I.R. and other proceedings. It is evident from application submitted by K that she has effected compromise with petitioners and she does not want to pursue the case. Although the offences mentioned in the F.I.R. are not compoundable yet since parties have amicably settled that the trial will not end in conviction of the petitioner and no useful purpose will be served by continuation of the proceedings, hence, F.I.R. and proceedings quashed. Harbans Kaur v. *U.T. When accused, a public servant, not subjected to disciplinary action and no inquiry caused to him merely on account of registration of F.I.R. against him and moreover no sanction for his prosecution so far granted F.I.R. can not be quashed at this stage. Trilok Chand v. State of Rajasthan, 1992 (1) WLC 628 (Raj).

When F.I.R./complaint prima facie, disclosing offence of cheating proceedings can not be quashed. Rajinder Chand Abrol v. State of H.P, 1995 Cri LJ 800 (HP).

If purchaser makes default in making payment of certain instalments, then remedies of civil nature are available to him and no criminal liability can be fastened on guarantor. In the absence of evidence that accused had guaranteed or purchased the vehicle under said agreement with a dishonest intention no prima facie case of cheating is made out. Basantheswar Prasad v. The State, 2003 Cr LJ 3809 (Jhar.) : AIR 2003 Jhar HCR 1007 : 2003(2) Crimes 163 : 2003(1) East Cri C 641.

Where the offence was of dishonour of post-dated cheque—Complaint lodged before Central Crime Branch and case registered under Section 420, read with Section 34, I.P.C.—Petition under Section 482, Cr. P.C., to quash the proceedings was filed—There is nothing in the complaint to show that the petitioner had either dishonest or fraudulent intention at the time the complainant parted with the money. So this is a fit case where proceedings are to be quashed by invoking the inherent powers of High Court under Section 482, Cr. P.C. Ganesan v. State rep. by Sub-Inspector of Police, Central Crimes Branch. Egmore, Madras, (1995) 1 LW (Cr) 97 (Mad).

Magistrate can drop proceedings when due is satisfied on consideration of complaint that there was no offence for which accused could be tried. Kamaludin @ Kamal v. Mangal Das, (1994) 2 Recent Cr R 82 (P&H).

There was contract for supply of fine metal extract between two respondent companies and the petitioners were acting as their agents. Documents exchanged between parties and their contract did not disclose any inducement involving mens rea on part of petitioners. By suggesting one of Companies to lift goods on the basis of promise of reimbursement of demurrage and detention charges by them petitioner had merely conveyed correspondence between two respondent companies. Glucose India Private Ltd. v. Metalman Industries Ltd., 2003 Cr LJ 3368 (MP) : 2003(9) All Ind Cas 197 : 2003(3) MPLJ 161.

When offence of cheating was made out—Applicant's son's marriage settled with respondent's daughter—Goad ceremony performed and presents given—Marriage date was fixed—Meanwhile applicant performed marriage of his son at some other family—Complaint was filed—Summons was issued. It was held, that it being breach of contract no offence of cheating made out. Complaint quashed and present application allowed. K.L. Ramaiya v. Ram Charan, (1995) 1 CCR 219 (Alld).

Where there was withdrawer of money from bank by forged signature—Charged under Section 420, I.P.C.—Final report was submitted by police—Magistrate issued summons to applicant on protest—Complaint challenged under Section 482, Cr. P.C., for quashing of the same was filed—No offence under Section 420, for cheating is made out as offence of forging signature comes under Section 467, I.P.C. Hence, complaint is quashed. Ramjiyavan Jaiswal v. State of U.P, (1995) 2 CCR 162 (Alld).

When prima facie case appeared and process issued by Magistrate it was wrongly set aside by serious judge in revision on erroneous discrepancy. Harakchand Bhagchand Oswal v. Santinggappa Bhagwanappa, Hapse, 1991 (1) Crimes 531 (Bom).

21. Offence—What constitutes ?—Issuance of cheque towards services already rendered—Offence under Section 420 held not made out. V. M. Shanmugga Sundaram v. Margabandhu, 1994 Mad LJ (Cr) 104 : (1994) 1 LW (Cr) 210 (Mad).

Where respondent's allegations was that appellant accused has induced complainant to pay certain amount for purchasing company's shares—Version of complainant himself that said amount was paid to a broker of Stock Exchange and not directly to company and it was held that ingredients of cheating not coming out for framing any charges against accused and discharge of accused by Magistrate was proper. Prabhat Kumar Bose v. Tarun Kanti Bagchi, 1994 Cri LJ 1211 (SC) : AIR 1994 SC 960.

Petition was filed to quash criminal prosecution—Petitioner invited applications for admission to yoga course making false representation that course recognised by Government of India—Students applying for admission deposited caution-money of Rs. 1,000/- each—Offence of cheating was fully established—Charge-sheet was submitted by police and trial was started—Petition to quash proceedings was liable to be rejected. A fraudulent representation can be made directly or indirectly. The case of the prosecution before court was that the petitioner by knowingly making a false assertion that the course was recognised by the Government of India. Ministry of Education and Social Welfare (Department of Education) induced unwary students to apply and obtain admission and to pay Rs. 1.000/- each as caution-money, and thereby cheated the students. This is a case which is clearly borne out from the First Information Report as well as from the evidence collected during investigation and since there is evidence to the effect that the course had never been recognised and that students had actually parted with Rs. 1,000/- each on the basis of the fraudulent misrepresentation and since the deceit was preceded by the payment of Rs. 1,000/- by each student, it cannot be said that the ingredients required to constitute the offence of "Cheating" under Section 415 was missing. Swami Dhirendra Brahmachari v. Shailendar Bhushan, (1994) 1 Crimes 981 at p. 986 : (1995) 53 DLT 696 : (1994) 2 Recent Cr R 473 : (1994) 2 CC Cases 135 (Del).

When Rs. 300 were illegally taken for the connection of LPG Gas—and the accused was not licensee to issue legal connection, offence was not made out. Karpal Singh v. State of Haryana, (1994) 2 Recent Cr R 536 (P&H).

When driver authorised by owner for putting his own signature for the purpose of renewal, it is not that the petitioner contemplated to the vehicle registered or transferred in his own name or in name of any person other than the true owner. It could not be proved that petitioner deceived the complainant to deliver any property or valuable. Hence, no offence is made out. Harinder Kumar Gulati v. State of Haryana, 1994 Cr LT 309 (P&H).

A bank officer was charged with negligence of duty and cheating. He had passed a cheque by comparing the signature with the specimen signature which was not authenticated by any bank officer. That resulted in loss to the bank. Held, that bank officer could not be charged with cheating because offence of cheating presupposes the act or omission of the accused having been done dishonestly and fraudulently. Charge of cheating not sustained. 1987 Cri LJ 222 (P&H).

Absence of initial inducement—Extension of the subsequent inducement does not constitutes the offence. M.S. Natarajan v. Ramasis Shaw, (1995) 2 Cal HN 78 (Cal).

In absence of allegation that accused himself had written manuscript and represented it to be that of other person, no offence of forgery is made out. Guru Bipin Singh v. Chougtham Manihar Singh, 1997 Cri LJ 724 (SC) : 1996(11) SCC 622 : 1996(9) JT 516 : 1996(7) Scale 694 : 1996(7) Supreme 678 : 1996(4) Crimes 135 (SC) : AIR 1997 (SC) 1448.

22. Jurisdiction.—When sale agreement to sell the plot was not executed—Complaint under Sections 406 and 420, I.P.C., lodged at Ambala Court—The petitioner is resident of Panchkula and plot is situated at Panchkula. It is evident that although agreement was executed at Chandigarh various acts were done in pursuance of that agreement at Panchkula and Kalka and the Court at Ambala has jurisdiction to try the case. The F.I.R. is not liable to be quashed simply on the ground that Court at Ambala has no jurisdiction. Narinder Singh v. Yash Pal Singh, (1994) 2 Recent Cr R 714 : (1994) 3 CC Cases 123 (P&H).

Complaint against quality of material used for fabrication of plant and also its failure to work upto mark, concerns breach of warranty, conditions and remedy lies in civil Court. P.K. Gupta v. Amrit Papers, 1992 Cr LT 17 (P&H).

23. Offence compoundable.—After an inquiry by the police, the accused was charge sheeted. The accused moved a petition under Section 482, Cr. P.C., Since the offence was compoundable a petition for compounding it was also moved but it was dismissed for want of prosecution. On examination of the record, it was found, the action by the Magistrate was an abuse of the process of law since favourable orders could be passed in his absence. (1986) 2 Crimes 393 (Ker).

24. Protection.—A dealing assistant employed in the office of the Regional Settlement Commissioner who was to have received a letter from an Assistant Settlement Commissioner. It was not properly checked pursuant to the discharge of his official duties but instead it was received by another person who took advantage of the claim having been sanctioned to the applicant. The dealing assistant did not derive any benefit from the reimbursement of the amount to the person who presented the claim other than the right claimant. The dealing assistant was tried since 1969. Held, he can be released on probation. (1986) 2 Crimes 536 (P&H).

A postman removed R.R. and bills from a registered cover. His brother took delivery of the goods without payment to the addressee. Bank was required to collect payment from the party. The postman was charged for abetment under Section 109. He sought probation of Sec. 197, CrPC. Held, he was not entitled to it. (1986) 2 Crimes 575 (Cal).

25. Probation.—When accused was released under Probation Act with surety for period of two years and appeal coming up for hearing after long gap there is no need for directing appellant to furnish further bonds after such a long period. Lakhpat Rai v. State of U.P., 1992 (29) ACC 361.

When a finance company floated loan and got deposited margin money, but subsequently no loan was given nor margin money refunded, and accused is Assistant Branch Manager of company, bail may be granted to him. Shambhu Singh v. State of Rajasthan., 1994 RCC 484.

Public employee involved in such offence does not deserve to be released on bail. Anand Mohan Srivastava v. State of U.P, 1994 JIC 750 (All).

27. Criminal matter—Stay of.—In ends of justice progress of criminal matter should be stayed during pendency of civil suit. Jaipal v. Narain Singh, 1997 (1) Crimes 525 (P&H).

28. Arbitration clause in agreement.—Merely because there is an arbitration clause in the agreement, that cannot prevent criminal prosecution against the accused if an act constituting a criminal offence on made out even prima faice. S.N. Palanitkar v. State of Bihar, 2001 Cri LJ 4768(SC).

29. Sale of misbranded ghee.—During the course of hearing, the court was informed by the learned Govt. Advocate appearing for the State that the case has been registered against the petitioner on the basis of the FSL report dated 14.9.2001 under the PFA Act and the proceedings are pending for adjudication before the competent Court. On the strength of this argument, it has been sought to be contended that since the case has already been registered against the petitioner under the Act and the proceedings are in progress, no purpose would be served by keeping the investigation pending further. The FIR for offence under Section 420 IPC is not sustainable inasmuch as the cognizance of the matter having been taken by the Court for the offenses punishable under PFA Act, the present proceedings under the impugned FIR are not sustainable. Kailash Chand Gupta v. State of Rajasthan and another, 2002 Cri LJ 2439 (Raj.) : 2002(1) FAC 388 : 2002(2) Raj LW 1004 : 2002(2) WLC 740.

30. Bank Account—Cheque.—Accused who had borrowed money from complainant issued post dated cheque for discharge of debt. Bank Manager categorically stated that accused had closed account much prior to issuance of cheque. Thus, his intention to deceive complainant from inception was clear. D. Atchyutha Reddy vs. State of A.P.,& Anr. 2010 (2) CrLJ 1265 (AP)

The cheques were post dated ones. Admittedly they were issued in the year 1996. They were presented before the bank on a much later date. They were in fact presented only on 10.01.2001. When the cheques were issued, the accounts were operative. Even assuming that the account was closed subsequently the same would not mean that the appellant had an intention to cheat when the post-dated cheques were issued. Even otherwise the allegations made in the complaint petition, even if given face value and taken to be correct in its entirety do not disclose commission of an offence under Sec. 420 of the Indian Penal Code. They do not satisfy the ingredients of the suit provision. It is, therefore, in the fact situation obtaining in the instant case, difficult to hold that the provisions of Sec. 420 of the Indian Penal Code were attracted. Subodh S. Salaskar v. Jayprakash M. Shah and Anr., AIR 2008 SC 3086 : 2008 (8) JT 637 (SC) : 2008 (11) Scale 42 (SC) : 2008 (7) SLT 127 (SC) : 2008 (8) SRJ 292 (SC) : 2008 CrLJ 3953 (SC) : 2008 (3) JCC 330 (NI) : 2008 (3) RecentCR 875 (SC).

31. Cheating and forgery.—It is true that the disclosure of material information is necessary for processing an Application seeking grant of Arms Licence to an applicant and the record shows that the petitioners have disclosed almost the entire details of pending criminal cases and have submitted application form for issuance of Arms Licence for protection of their persons and property as well as their family members and, therefore, it could not be believed that there was any deliberate concealment of information about the solitary criminal case. Since, the petitioners have honestly made disclosure of pending criminal cases against them in the application form, and adequate information about its correctness was available with the District Magistrate in the form of recommendation of the Superintendent of Police, therefore, it could not be said that either the petitioners have made concealment of the material information or the Investigating Authority was unaware of the fact of pending cases against the petitioners.

Therefore, in the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case, it appears that there was no criminal intention of the petitioners in not disclosing about the remaining criminal case, pending against them while submitting the application form and as such, no case of concealment of material information is even prima facie made out. Since the record fails to demonstrate that there exist a criminal intention even in the mind of the alleged wrong doer, therefore, it could not be said that they have committed either of the offences. The elements of cheating require that one has to deceive or induce any person, fraudulently or dishonestly to deliver any property to any person, or to consent that any person shall retain any property, or intentionally induce the person so deceived to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit if he were not so deceived, and that act or omission causes or likely to cause damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property and since, all these mandatory elements are missing, it cannot be said that even a prima facie case exist against the petitioners for being tried in relation to the alleged commission of offence in terms of Ss. 420, 467, 468 and 471 of IPC. Ummed Singh & Ors. vs. State of M.P., 2010 (2) CriLJ 1257 (M.P).

32. Forgery or permit.—Accused working in office of civil supplies Inspector. Allegation that they prepared and signed permit for issuance of Palmolein Oil. While Permit was found to be issued in favour of an other accused a shop owner. Counterfoil retained in office was for other shop. Witnesses produced by prosecution for proof of handwriting and signature of accused on Permit, not stating that interpolation was in hand of accused.

Witness stated in his examination-in-chief that he knew the accused persons, viz., accused was working in Civil Supplies Inspector's Office in the rank of UDC and that he had earlier worked with him in the Finance Department. Witness has however, nowhere stated in the examination-in-chief that the present instance of interpolation or forgery was in the hand of accused. In the cross-examination, witness stated that although he had worked along with accused in the Finance Department, but he was working in a different section of the Department. He has clearly stated that he was working in the Budget Section called F1 whereas accused was working in the Motor Conveyance Section called F2 Section. It has also been brought to notice that in the cross-examination, it was said that the files dealt by A2 and F2 Section in the Finance Department never came to the F1 Section where witness was working. Therefore, the interpolation as also the initials appended thereto have not been proved and established to be in the hand of accused.

In that view of the matter, the prosecution has miserably failed to prove and establish that the alleged interpolation and forgery was done by either accused. Ravichandran vs. State by Dy. Superintendent of Police, Madras, 2010 (3) CrLJ 2879 (SC).

33. Framing of charge.—The reliance of the High Court on the ruling was totally uncalled for as the factual situation in that case was entirely different than the one prevalent here in this case.

We were also taken through the report of the Central Vigilance Commission. Para 7.21 of the said report reads as under:

> "The allegations against Shri V.K. Bhutiani are held proved only to the extent of making a faulty judgment in recommending the proposal for the PC limit as pointed out in para 6.61 and the article of charge is held proved only to the extent as various allegations have been substantiated or otherwise as mentioned in the assessment portion of the report."

Thus, it cannot be held that the Central Vigilance Commission had given a clean chit to the respondent-accused.

In our opinion, though the report of the Central Vigilance Commission may be a relevant factor, it cannot be held to be "be all or end all" of the matter for prosecuting the accused persons of such serious offences.

We do not find any such reasoning having been given in the present case by the High Court. On the other hand, a perusal of the impugned order suggests that the High Court did not examine the material available by way of charge-sheet and has proceeded to follow the ruling of P.S. Rajya We are, therefore, satisfied that this appeal has to be allowed by setting-aside the impugned order passed by the High Court. Accordingly, the appeal succeeds. The impugned order is set-aside and the matter is remanded. Now the trial Court shall proceed with the trial since the charges have already been framed. All the contentions in law and fact shall be available to the respondent as well as the prosecution. This judgment shall not be treated to be an expression of opinion on our part. C.B.I. vs. V.K. Bhutiani, 2009 (10) SCC 674 : 2009(13) Scale 64.

34. Criminal breach of trust and cheating.—As essential ingredients of Sec. 405 and Sec. 420 were missing, no offence is made out against appellants.

Appellants, partners of firm in which Complainant was also a partner, allegedly conspired and cheated him to deprive him of share in profit by dissolving firm behind his back. Partnership firm in question was constituted on premises that four persons of a Company would represent firm. Partnership stood dissolved at very inception as it was never acted upon. In view thereof, question of any wrongful act on part of accused does not arise

We, however, in this case are satisfied that the appellants by no stretch of imagination can be said to have committed an offence particularly when admittedly the new firm has been cancelled from its very inception. If the new firm has not derived any income, the question of depriving the claimant therefrom does not arise. Whether the constitution of the said firm was illegal, or mala fide, thus, need not be gone into as by reason thereof the respondent cannot be said to have suffered any loss.

We may notice that as regards commission of an offence in terms of Sec. 405 of Indian Penal Code, this Court in Indian Oil Corpn. v. NEPC India Ltd. and others, (2006) 6 SCC 736 : 2006 AIR SCW 3830] held that where the first ingradient of criminal breach of trust, that is, entrustment is missing, the same would not constitute a criminal breach of trust.

As regards essential ingredients of the offence of cheating, it was stated :

> "(i) deception of a person either by making a false or misleading representation or by other action or omission, (ii) fraudulent or dishonest inducement of that person to either deliver any property or to consent to the retention thereof by any person or to intentionally induce that person to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit if he were not so deceived and which act or omission causes or is likely to cause damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property."

The aforementioned ingredients of Sec. 420 of Indian Penal Code are also absent in the instant case. [See also Suryalakshmi Cotton Mills Ltd. v. Rajvir Industries Ltd. and Ors., 2008 (1) SCALE 331 : 2008 AIR SCW 1956]. V.R. Dalai and Ors. v. Yogendra Naranji Thakkar and Anr., AIR 2008 SC 2793 : 2008 (9) SCR 107 (SC) : 2008 (6) JT 564 (SC) : 2008 (8) Scale 156 (SC) : 2008 (4) Supreme 374 (SC) : 2008 (5) SLT 289 (SC) : 2008 (2) JCC 1418 (SC).

35. Sections 415 and 420—Ingredients of offence of.—An offence of cheating cannot be said to have been made out unless the following ingredients are satisfied : (i) deception of a person either by making a false or misleading representation or by other action or omission; (ii) fraudulently or dishonestly inducing any person to deliver any property; or (iii) To consent that any person shall retain any property and finally intentionally inducing that person to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit."

For the purpose of constituting an offence of cheating, the complainant is required to show that the accused had fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making promise or representation. Even in a case where allegations are made in regard to failure on the part of the accused to keep his promise, in absence of a culpable intention at the time of making initial promise being absent, no offence under Section 420 of the Indian Penal Code can be said to have been made out. Harmanpreet Singh Ahluwalia vs. State of Punjab, 2009 (7) SCC 712 : 2009 CrLJ 3462 : 2009 (7) SCR 563 : 2009 (6) JT 375 : 2009 (7) Scale 85 : 2009 (4) SLT 341.

36. Civil dispute—Quashing of complaint.—Indisputably, the parties entered into a contract in terms whereof the firm was to manufacture a machine to purify and desalt the dyes of a particular quality and quantity. The specifications for the machine were changed.

We may reiterate that one of the ingredients of cheating as defined in Section 415 of the Indian Penal Code is existence of an intention of making initial promise or existence thereof from the very beginning of formation of contract.

An offence of cheating may consist of two classes of cases :

(1) Where the complainant has been induced fraudulently or dishonestly. Such is not the case here;

(2) When by reason of such deception, the complainant has not done or omitted to do anything which he would not do or omit to do if he was not deceived or induced by the accused.

It is in that sense, a distinction between a mere breach of contract and the offence of cheating should be borne in mind. We, having regard to the facts and circumstances of the case, are of the opinion that no case has been made out and against the appellant so as to hold that he should face the criminal trial.

No exception can be taken to the aforementioned principles of law, as therein also it has categorically been held that exercise of inherent power under Section 482 is permissible where allegations set out in the complaint do not constitute the offence for which cognizance has been taken by the Magistrate. It is evidently a case of that nature.

For the reasons aforementioned, the judgment of the High Court cannot be sustained. It is set aside accordingly. Criminal proceedings against the appellants are quashed. The appeal is allowed. V.Y. Jose vs. State of Gujarat, 2009 (3) SCC 78 : 2008 (16) Scale 167 : 2008 (17) SCR 588 : 2009 (1) SLT 535.

Quashing of criminal complaint—Power of Attorney.—The submissions made on behalf of the respective parties and the complaint filed by the father of the Respondent, we are inclined to agree with the views expressed by the High Court that a prima facie case had been made out to go to trial. There is a positive assertion in the complaint that an assurance had been given by the Petitioner to the complainant that the property in question was free from all encumbrances and that the Accused was the sole owner of the property. It has been mentioned in the complaint that had not such a representation been made relating to the status of ownership of the property in question, the complainant may not have entered into the transaction at all. Whether or not the Petitioner was truly mistaken with regard to the information given by him is a question of utmost importance in answering a charge of the nature indicated in the complaint. Merely because the Petitioner had received part payment of the consideration amount and had made over the same to the Accused and merely because possession of the land had been handed over by him to the complainant, cannot form the basis of a presumption that he had no knowledge that there was a dispute regarding the ownership of the property, as to whether the same belongs to a HUF or not. Section 415 IPC, which defines the offence of cheating, provides in Illustration (g) as follows :

> "(g). A intentionally deceives Z into a belief that A means to deliver to Z a certain quantity of indigo plant which he does not intend to deliver, and thereby dishonestly induces Z to advance money upon the faith of such delivery. A cheats; but if A, at the time of obtaining the money, intends to deliver the indigo plant, and afterwards breaks his contract and does not deliver it, he does not cheat, but is liable only to a civil action for breach of contract."

The provision of Section 415, IPC which define cheating, clearly indicates that if at the very initiation of the negotiations it was evident that there was no intention to cheat, the dispute would be of a civil nature. But such a conclusion would depend on the evidence to be led at the time of trial. In the instant case, the complaint does make out a prima facie case to go to trial. The Petitioner may have discharged his functions as a constituted attorney for the Accused by acting as a liaison between the Accused and the father of the Respondent, but that does not in itself indicate that he did not have any knowledge of the status of ownership of the land forming the subject matter of the transaction. S.P. Gupta vs. Ashutosh Gupta, 2010 (3) CriLJ 3428 (SC).

37. Cheque discounting facility.—Grant such facility to customer by Bank. Cheques of accused were discounted after purchasing. Circumstances are not sufficient to hold accused persons guilty for commission of offence u/Sec. 420. All actions of Bank Officers were in consonance with long standing banking practice. The upshot of our discussions is :—

(a) The prosecution did not lay down any foundational facts to arrive at a finding of dishonest intention on the part of the appellants, nor any such finding has been arrived at by the trial Court or the High Court.

(b) The circumstances which were considered sufficient to bring home the charges against the appellant were : the cheques of accused Nos. 1, 2 and 3 were discounted after purchasing cheques; cheques were deposited after a gap of 1 to 4 days; only later the amounts were deposited in the account which circumstances, in our opinion, are not sufficient to hold the appellants guilty for commission of offence under Sec. 420 of the IPC as all the actions on the part of the bank officers were in consonance with the long standing banking practice.

(c) Accused No. 4 had taken care of having adequate security to ensure that the bank does not suffer any loss, the gain if any was caused to the Bank.

(d) Appellants acted on instructions by the higher authority.

(e) The prosecution evidence does not establish any conspiracy on their part.

S.V.L. Murthy v. State. Rep. by C.B.I., Hyderabad., AIR 2009 SC 2717 : 2009 (7) SCR 784 (SC) : 2009 (6) SCC 77 : 2009 (7) JT 385 (SC) : 2009 CrLJ 3930 (SC) : 2009 (6) Scale 758 (SC) : 2009 (4) Supreme 399 (SC).

38. Transfer of criminal case—Apprehension of miscarriage of justice.—The analysis of all the materials, the transfer of the case as sought for, at this stage, is not only against the interest of prosecution but also against the interest of other accused persons, the prosecution witnesses and the convenience of all concerned in the matter. For the sake of repetition, it is relevant to mention that when the complainant was examined as PW. 56, he disowned his complaint and asserted that it (complaint) was not filed by him though he admitted his signature found therein. Further, all important witnesses particularly government officials informed that what they said before the Court alone is absolute truth and they were forced to make false statement at the time of registering the complaint. As stated earlier, similar transfer petition which was filed before the High Court ended in dismissal and it became final. We are satisfied that the presiding officer of the Special Court is conscious of his power and how to conduct fair trial at the same place. We are also of the opinion that the public prosecutor cannot act on the dictates of the State Government, he has to act objectively as he is also an Officer of the Court. The Special Court is free to assess whether prosecution has established its case. We have already pointed out that a mere allegation that there is apprehension that justice will not be done in a given case alone does not suffice. Considering the totality of all circumstances, we are of the opinion that in a secular, democratic Government, governed by the rule of law, the State of Punjab is responsible for ensuring free, fair and impartial trial to the accused, notwithstanding, the nature of the accusations made against them. In the case on hand, the apprehension entertained by the petitioners cannot be construed as reasonable one and the case cannot be transferred on a mere allegation that there is apprehension that justice will not be done.

Taking into consideration the entire facts and circumstances of the case and the materials on record, we are of the view that the petitioners have not made out a case that they have reasonable apprehension of not availing justice in the State of Punjab. We would like to clarify that we have not expressed anything on the merits neither of the prosecution case nor the defence of the accused and whatever said in the earlier paragraphs are applicable only for disposal of transfer petitions and ultimately it is for the Special Court to decide the issues in the light of the material placed and in accordance with the law. The inevitable conclusion is that both the transfer petitions filed by the petitioners deserve to be dismissed. Amarinder Singh vs. Prakash Singh Badal, 2009 (6) SCC 260 : 2009 (3) Crimes 174 (SC) : 2009 (7) JT 187 : 2009 (7) Scale 382 : 2009 (9) SCR 194 : 2009 (5) Supreme 95 : 2009 (4) SLT 415.

Moveable property in a Foreign State belonging to the insolvent would ordinarily vest in the receiver in insolvency and the latter can take steps to recover it through the insolvent or otherwise so as to make it available and distributable among the creditors. It may be that in some cases he may not succeed in doing so, but the liability of the property being distributed among creditors does remain accordingly to the law of British India, and if a dishonest or fraudulent transfer, removal of concealment or delivery of such property, is made by the insolvent without adequate consideration so as to prevent its distribution among his creditors according to that law, the offence under Section 421, I.P. Code, would be established even if the property is in a Foreign State. 1. Scope.—"The object of the provisions under this head appears to be the punishment of dishonest and fraudulent debtors. The civil law fixes the relative rights of debtors and creditors, and assigns the latter remedies for the recovery of their just demands. It also provides for the distribution of a debtor's property among his creditors if he becomes insolvent and is unable to satisfy their claims in full. But if he endeavours to evade his just liabilities by a fraudulent disposal of his property, he is treated as a criminal. OF MISCHIEF

Sec. 425. Mischief.—Whoever, with intent to cause, of knowing that he is likely to cause, wrongful loss or damage to the public or to any person, causes the destruction of any property or in the situation thereof as destroys or diminishes its value or utility, or affects it injuriously, commits “mischief.

Explanation 1.—It is not essential to the offence of mischief that the offender should intend to cause loss or damage to the owner of the property injured or destroyed. It is sufficient if he intends to cause, or knows that he is likely to cause, wrongful loss or damage to any person by injuring any property, whether it belongs to that person or not.

Explanation 2.—Mischief may be committed by an act affecting property belonging to the person who commits the act, or to that person and others jointly.

1. Scope.—"In the offences against property which have hitherto been considered, the purpose of the offender ordinarily is to cause a wrongful gain of property : there is a transfer of property which is the subject of the offence from the rightful possessor to the offender or to some other person, or there is an appropriation or conversion of it by the offender. In the offence of mischief, there is not necessarily any transfer of property or any wrongful gain to the offender. The property continues with the possessor (unless the mischief extends to his absolute destruction), but it does not continue in his possession without charge or diminution in value. Some injury has been sustained by it, and this injury, if it is intentionally caused, constitutes mischief. This offence is commonly perpetrated from vindictive motives but absence of spite will be no answer to a charge of mischief, nor is it essential that any motive for the mischievous acts should be assigned, if the intention to cause wrongful loss is shown".—Morgan and Macpherson, 397. Where the accused removed an obstruction from a property which they believed to be their own, the accused cannot be said to have caused any wrongful loss to the complainant under Section 425. 99 Ind Cas 414 : 28 Cr LJ 158 : AIR 1927 Lah 145. In order to constitute an offence under this section, something should be done to property contrary to its natural use. AIR 1929 Mad 5. Rat Un Cr C 745. Where the accused blocked a channel, the result of which was that the surplus water flowed direct on the complainant's land and damaged his crop, and the site of the channel was the common property of all the accused. Held, that the act of the accused did not constitute the offence of mischief and that complainant's remedy for any damage he had sustained lay in an action in the Civil Courts. 8 MLT 385 : 8 Ind Cas 128 : 11 Cr LJ 566 ; see also 1913 MWN 179 : 19 Ind Cas 305 : 14 Cr LJ 209. AWN 1881 158. The accused apprehending that the water in his tank would overflow, caused a breach in the bank of the complainant's field so as to let the surplus water from the tank overflow complainant's land, it was found that there were no crops in the field, and apart from the damage done to the back no other damage was caused to the complaint. Held, that the accused was guilty of the offence of mischief. 49 Ind Cas 861 : 20 Cr LJ 237. Mere carelessness or negligence on the part of the accused without establishing the intention to cause damage or knowledge that their animals were likely to cause damage would not attract the ingredients of the offence. Suyambu Nadar v. State, 1999 Cri LJ 394 (Mad).

Section 425 necessitates three things (1) an intention or knowledge of likelihood to cause wrongful loss or damage to the public or any person, (2), causing the destruction of some property or any change in it or in situation, and (3) such change must destroy or diminish its value or utility or affect it injuriously. No mischief can, therefore, be committed where the act complained of amount to invasion of civil right. AIR 1958 Cal 668 : 1958 Cr LJ 1396. In order to maintain a conviction under Section 425, it is necessary that the loss or damage must be due to any act of the accused which causes destruction of the property itself by reducing its value or utility. AIR 1957 All 465 : 1958 All Cr R 228 : 1957 Cr LJ 702.

Where in a trial of an offence under Section 425, the judgment of the trial Court does not show that the Court was satisfied as to under which the various alternative given in that section the case against the accused could come, where it had only quoted the section and held that they were guilty either under one alternative or the other, the finding is not sufficient to convict the accused, AIR 1954 Pat 309 : 1954 Cr LJ 998.

Where cattle sent for grazing under the supervision of a cow-herd strayed into the complaint's field due to negligence and carelessness of the cow-herd, the owner of the cattle cannot be held to have any intention to cause damage and knowledge that his cattle were likely to cause damage. 2. Intention.—The intention to cause one wrongful loss or damage to the property is essential. An act which harms or lessens the value of property if it is done by accident—or mistake and not willfully, does not make the doer an offender under the Penal Code, although he may be answerable in a civil suit for such damage. The wrongful loss be to any person, or to the public, or to any class of the public or any community as the inhabitants of a particular village. Where the act which causes damage is done without any criminal intention to cause bar, and in good faith for the purpose of preventing or avoiding other harm to person or property, the doer commits no offence (see Section 81)—Morgan and Macpherson, 391. But in a Bombay case (Rat Cr C 690) it was held that the terms of this section were satisfied where there was a district finding as to the prisoner's knowledge and that the question of intention was material only as regards to wrongful loss see also 2 LBR 158. 1 Weir 488. Where it is clear that the accused is acting in the exercise of a bona fide claim of right, which appears to be well founded, the ordinary presumption of dishonest intention has no place. That presumption is rebutted by the fact that the real intention was to exercise his own right. It is the duty of the Criminal Court to appreciate the difference between civil trespass and criminal trespass and between a Civil Court and the offence of mischief. It does not follow that in every case of civil trespass the offence of criminal trespass is made out. A complaint of mischief under Section 426 may be filed by a co-owner of joint property against another, if the accused has caused wilful damage, even though the latter may be joint owner and the complainant be not in actual possession of the property in dispute. AIR 1951 VP 1 ; AIR 1960 Ker 74 (wrongful loss or damage to the public and causing damage or destruction of the value or utility of the property to the owner) ; 1983 (2) Crimes 148. One of the essential ingredients of the offence of mischief is that the offender committed the offence with an intent to cause or knowing that it is likely to cause wrongful loss or damage to the public or any person. 1979 CLR 884 ; 1971 All Cr R 47 ; (1961) MLJ (Cr) 273 (existence of civil remedy makes no difference) ; 1974 MLJ (Cr) 626 ; 1967 Cr LJ 1227 (diminution of value or utility). Mischief to property attached by a Court. AIR 1961 SC 803.

Not only cases of wrongful loss but cases of damages by unlawful means are also covered under "mischief." Gopinath Nayak v. Lepa Majhi, 1996 Cri LJ 3814 (Ori).

The three point which the prosecution has to prove in a case under Section 426 are : (1) the intention or knowledge of likelihood to cause wrongful loss or damage to the public or to any persons ; (2) causing the destruction of some property or any change in it or in its situation ; and (3) such change must destroy or diminish its value or utility or affect incuriously. To constitute an offence under Section 426, it is not necessary that the animal should be destroyed or its value or utility diminished, it is sufficient if it affected injuriously. If permanent injury had been caused to the animal the offence would be under Section 429. AIR 1960 Ker 74 : ILR 1959 Ker 881 : 1960 Cr LJ 228.

Where from the evidence, the intention of necessary knowledge on the part of the accused as to the likelihood of any loss or damage does not appear to have been proved nor is there any evidence as to the exact value of the property which is alleged to have been damaged, the case cannot come either under Section 426 or under Section 427. (1959) 25 Cut. LT 80.

No nexus between Section 427 and Sections 441 and 447. (1977) 3 Cur LJ 761. On the fact of the case rejecting the plea of improper assertion of right of ploughing lands of the complainant, the accused was found guilty of the offence under the section. (1972) 28 Cut. LT 436.

2. Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable in a case of loss to private persons—Triable by any Magistrate.

3. Charge.—The charge under this and the next section should run thus:

"I (name and office of the Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows :

That on or about the...........day of.........at.......you committed mischief by causing wrongful loss or damage to the property to AB, estimated at Rs. ....and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 426 (or Section 427) of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

4. Conviction.—Where there was acquittal of charges under Sections 448 and 323, IPC, and conviction for offence under Section 426, IPC which was confirmed by Sessions Judge—Revision of the petition the challenging of the same was held. The petitioner seems to have decided to take law in his own hands and caused damage to the roof of the complainant. The acquittal of petitioner for offences under Sections 448 and 323, does not mean that he should have also been acquitted of offence under Section 426, IPC. The conviction and sentences was upheld. Eknath Pandari Tari v. State of Goa, 1994 B Cr C 329.

5. Sentence.—The accused tried to demolish the wall on which complainant started crying inviting the attention of other witnesses who saw the accused committing mischief. There is no previous enmity which may be ground for false implication. But since the evidence took place seventeen years ago, the sentence is reduced to one year R.I. with a fine of Rs. 2,000 out of which Rs. 1,500 shall be paid to the complainant. Mahabir Singh v. State of U.P., 1995 UP Cr R 9 (All).

1. Scope.—"In estimating the amount of the loss of damage caused, the actual loss only should be taken into consideration and not the damage which, in consequence of such loss, may be occasioned to the sufferer. It is not clear whether to support the charge under the section, the Court must be satisfied not only that the offender intended to cause wrongful loss but also that he intended (or knew himself to be likely) to cause wrongful loss to the amount of fifty rupees or upwards. It will be reasonable to infer such an intention in the absence of satisfactory proof on behalf of the accused person, showing that he did not contemplate or intend to cause mischief to this amount."—Morgan and Macpherson, 303. See also 16 CWN 263 : 13 Ind Cas 826 ; 21 Bom LR 247 ; 17 ALJ 343 ; 22 ALJ 820. Small deviation in evidence. Witness had stated that the bag was snatched from him and the papers there from were torn and burned. He submitted that this would show that the allegations about tearing of the papers or snatching of the bag are not reliable.

As rightly pointed out by the learned APP, a small deviation in the evidence about the incident, which had taken place about six years before the witnesses were examined, would not reduce the veracity of the testimonies of those witnesses and, therefore, the evidence ought to be believed, particularly since the witnesses are not shown to have any animosity towards the applicant to falsely implicate him in the offence. Diwakar Maniram Kohale vs. State of Maharashtra, 2010 (2) CriLJ 1411 (Bom.)

2. Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable in case of loss to private persons—Triable by any Magistrate.

3. Charge.—I (name and office of the Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows :

Sec. 428. Mischief by killing or maiming animal of the value of ten rupees.—Whoever commits mischief by killing, poisoning, maiming or rendering useless any animal or animals of the value of ten rupees or upwards, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Synopsis

1. Scope 2751
2. Maiming 2751
3. Procedure 2751
4. Charge 2751

1. Scope.—"It must be proved that the destruction or damage is that of wilful description which falls within the definition of mischief. But it must, it seems be understood that the animal destroyed is the subject of property. Wild animals which have been captured as bears, tigers, etc., kept in cages, could probably be deemed within the meaning of the section."—Morgan and Macpherson, 304 UBR 1905, Penal Code 25.

2. Maiming.—In its primitive meaning of the verb "to maim" involves the notion of mutation of some part of the body useful for fighting. The framers of the Code did not intend this restricted meaning only of this expression. The expression would fairly include the amputation of any member, or the injury, of an animal by which its speed, or endurance or use was permanently diminished. LBR (1872-1892) 404 : UBR 1905 Penal Code 28 ; 1 Weir 500 ; 1 Weir 498 ; 38 PR 1888 Cr ; AWN 1884, 87. The cutting off completely of the ears of an ass is maiming under this section. 22 MLT 68. 1. Scope.—The words "bull" or "cow" include the young of these animals, and the expression "any other animal" does not mean an animal of the kind already mentioned, but refers to an animal of a different genus altogether. The section specifies the more valuable of the domestic animals without any regard to the age, but in respect of other kinds of animals not so specified, the section would not apply, unless the particular animal in question was shown to be of the value of fifty rupees or upwards. Gouri Mondal v. Jafar, 22 Cal 467. A bull which was branded at the Sradh of the complainant's deceased father and was fed and kept at the complainant's own place even the after does not cease to be property of the complainant. As regards intention to maim animal, vide Ibid. The expression "maiming" in this section refers to injuries permanently affecting the use of a limb or other member of a body. AIR 1947 Sind 66 :

The act or omission constituting an offence under Section 118 of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1939 is separate and distinct offence under Section 429 of the Penal Code. (1967) 2 Andh 784 : AIR 1961 All 18 : (1961) 1 Cr LJ 326.

2. Maiming.—The word "maiming" in Section 429 involves the definition of the use of some limb or member involving a permanent and not a mere disfigurement. 17 Cr LJ 253 : 18 Bom LR 289 : 34 Ind Cas 973. The cutting off the ears of a horse amounts to "maiming" within the meaning of this section. 21 MLJ 843. But where a person inflicts a wound on an animal with a spear whereby it is disabled for some days, this offence falls within Section 426 and not within this section. 3 Bom LR 503. The cutting off of nearly one-half of one ear of a mare whereby the animal's sense of hearing is not impaired, is not maiming. 18 Bom LR 289. Killing of an animal by the thief does not merit double conviction for thief and mischief. 26 Cr LJ 277 : 84 Ind Cas 341 : AIR 1925 Pat 34. Where no one has any property or right in animals the killing of that animal does not come within Section 425 and there the provisions of Section 429 will not be attracted. AIR 1961 Assam 18 ; 1960 Cut LT 342 (blows did not render the animal useless or maims it).

3. Intention.—The provision of this section requires that the offence of mischief must have been committed as the result of the acts specified therein and in order to constitute that offence it is necessary that the accused should either intend to cause or know that he is likely to cause wrongful loss or damage. 3 CrLJ 107 ; see 14 CPLRCr 159; LBR (1893-1900), 633 ; 7 IndCas 415, where conviction both under this section and Sec. 379 were held to be bad. The section will not apply in those case when there is a deliberate attempt on behalf of the accused to commit a mischief. 1957 AllLJ 123.

Merely an accident has taken place on public highway would not be sufficient to prove the charge for offence under Section 429, IPC unless the evidence has been led that the accused driving the vehicle had any grudge against the complainant or had required intention or knowledge in causing the accident. State of Maharashtra v. Gajanan D. Jansbhulkar, 2002 Cri LJ 349 (Bom).

4. Mischief by killing.—So far as offence under Section 429, I.P.C. is concerned, the intention is gist of the offence, Section 429 will only apply in those cases where there is deliberate attempt on behalf of the accused to commit mischief. The commission of mischief involves animus to do something. Where the accused has no intention of either killing or poisoning, maiming or rendering useless any of the animus mentioned in that section. This section will not apply. Since it is accident case and there is nothing on record that the accused respondent had any enmity with P.W.1 Dagla Ram and if the accident has taken place then it cannot be said that any mischief was committed by the accused respondent. It may further be stated here that merely an accident has taken place on public highway would not be sufficient to prove the charge for offence under Section 429, IPC unless the evidence has been led that the accused driving the vehicle had any grudge against the complainant or had required intention or knowledge in causing the accident. Since it is a simple case of accident therefore, measure of causing the accident is absent and in these circumstances, the findings of acquittal for offense under Section 429, IPC recorded by the learned trial Magistrate are liable to be confirmed one. State of Rajasthan v. Nauratan Mal, 2002 Cri LJ 348.

5. Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by a Magistrate of the first class.

That on or about the...............day of............at............. you committed mischief by killing (or maiming or rendering useless) the elephant of A.B. (or the tame panther of A.B. valued at Rs. 50), and you thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 429 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried by the said Court on the said charge.

7. Sentence.—There was complaint under Section 429, I.P.C.—After tieing the legs of buffalo skin was removed by the petitioners—Revision against conviction was filed, he was not a previous convict—Agony of 7-1/2 years in trial entitled to get the benefit of probation, hence, sentence was reduced. Nakli v. State of Haryana. (1994) 1 CC Cases 287 (P&H).

8. Conviction.—When three were accused of offence under Section 429, I.P.C.—Sentence regarding two of them maintained and one acquitted against the appeal, conviction based on sole testimony of prosecution witness animosity between the parties was accepted which was sufficient to throw doubt on the credibility of prosecution case—Evidence cogent and credible and evidence not to be discarded unless suffers from infirmity. Conviction was held maintainable on such evidence. Jagan Saha v. State, (1995) 2 CCR 469.

1. Scope.—To constitute the offence not merely loss should be proved, but also that it was wrongful loss and that accused intended to cause or knew he was likely to cause the loss. AIR 1925 Mad 577 : 26 Cr LJ 1100 : 88 Ind Cas 188 : 1925 MWN 45. Under Section 430, the physical requisite of the act are the doing of an act which causes, or to the doer's knowledge is likely to cause, a diminution of supply. 13 PLT 162 . 33 Cr LJ 313 : 1932 Cr C 407 : AIR 1932 Pat 224. This section is applicable equally to irrigation channels, as to other sources of irrigation such as tanks and ponds. 1 Weir 510 ; see also AIR 1940 Mad 144 : 41 Cr LJ 558 ; AIR 1939 Mad 794 : 41 Cr LJ 881 ;

To bring an act under this section, it must be shown to cause or be likely to cause, a diminution of the supply of water for agricultural purpose. The offence under this section requires as an essential element of it that the accused had the intention to cause or the knowledge that their act was likely to cause wrongful loss to the complainant. 26 Cr LJ 1100. Guilty knowledge is essential to a conviction for the offence of mischief, and, in the absence of any consideration or discussion of the circumstances and the reasonableness or otherwise of the acts of the accused persons it is impossible to uphold a conviction for that offence. 52 Ind Cas 276 : 20 Cr LJ 612. To substantiate an offence under Section 430 the prosecution must prove that there has been unlawful and intentional interference on the part of the accused with admitted or proved rights of the complainant. 32 CLJ 476 : 61 Ind Cas 665 : 22 Cr LJ 415. Where the accused was charged under Section 430, I.P. Code, for having created a fence across a channel flowing through his land with the result that the supply of water to the complainant's land was reduced. Held, that in the absence of a claim of easement or contract for the supply of water by the complainant, the accused could not convicted. 69 Ind Cas 95 : 23 Cr LJ 655 : 16 LW 793 ; 44 MLJ 234. Every person has a perfect right to do a particular case upon his own land, and if a person breaks open his bund or opens his own sluice, no one can complain of it, until some injurious consequence follows from it. As soon as such a consequence follows, the injury and not the original act, becomes a cause of action. In such a case the mischief consists not in breaking the bund or in opening the sluice but in flooding or withering up the complainant's crops. 21 SLR 107 : 98 Ind Cas 49 : 27 Cr LJ 1233. Where a matter is prominently one for the Civil Court to decide, whether a bund was put up or not by one of the parties, there ought not to be a conviction for an offence under this section. 98 Ind Cas 474 : 27 Cr LJ 1354 : see also 34 CWN 86 : 50 Cr LJ 589 : AIR 1930 Cal 318. The words "diminution of the supply of water for agricultural purposes" in this section cannot be limited to those cases only where the water has been allowed either to go waste or has been diverted for a non-agricultural purpose. The section read as a whole also refers to cases where the water is intended for use may by particular person for purposes of agriculture and is diverted by an accused person for his own purposes though of a like nature. 21 SLR 107 : 98 Ind Cas 49 : 27 Cr LJ 1233. An offence under this section is particularly a grave form of the offence of committing mischief as defined in Section 425. It is necessary to prove in such cases the elements that constituted mischief under Section 425. No doubt a person who takes water from a tank causes loss but it should be shown that he has caused a diminution of the supply of water for agricultural purpose. AIR 1930 Cal 289. Accused knowingly diminishing supply of water without a bona fide claim is guilty. AIR 1924 Pat 704 : 26 Cr LJ 258 : 84 Ind Cas 322; see also 44 Ind Cas 580 : 34 MLJ 206 : 19 Cr LJ 356 : 23 MLT 248. Persons cutting bund and letting out some water is guilty under Section 430. 136 Ind Cas 592 : 13 PLT 162 : 33 Cr LJ 313 : 1931 Cr C 407 : AIR 1932 Pat 224. In order to prove an offence under Section 430, it is necessary to prove mischief as defined in Section 425 and it is also necessary to prove that the act committed is likely to cause a diminution of the supply of water for the various purposes mentioned in the section. AIR 1934 All 687 : 35 Cr LJ 1250 : 50 Ind Cas 1048 ; 1933 MWN 427. The deprivation of water by putting up a bund across the water channel and thereby causing diminution of water supply to a person would be an offence under Section 430. 1962 Ker LT 868 : (1962) 2 Ker LR 466 ; 1955 All LT 689 : 1963 MPLJ (Notes) 216.

Where the accused diverted the water, which the complainant and the accused had a right to take by putting up a mandal, he will not be guilty under Section 430. 1969 MLW Cr 202.

2. Object.—"Injuries to a river or well or any natural or artificial channel or reservoir of water, or any work for the purpose of irrigation, if such injuries cause or are likely to cause a diminution of the supply by wrongfully drawing off or diverting water are punishable under this section. In some parts of India, disputes about water for irrigation are numerous and are carried on with great violence. When two villages draw their supply from one tank and the scantiness of the supply renders it necessary that they should each be supplied for a regulated number of hours, it is not unusual for the people of one village to attempt undue appropriation during the night, an act which if discovered by the rival village, ends in an affray of a very cerious character. Such an act cusing wrongful loss to individuals or to the public or community of the injured village will, it seems, be punishable under the present section. Misclief committed by drawing water used for domestic and other like purposes and thereby causing or diminution of the supply will likewise be punishable under the section:—Morgan and Macpherson.

1. Amendment.—In this section the words quoted have been inserted by th Indian Penal Code (Amendment) Act, 1882 (8 of 1882), Section 10.

2. Scope.—“When mischief is committed by means of fire or any explosiv substance and the evidence enables the Court to conclude that the offender not on intended to cause wrongful loss, which intention is necessary to the committing “mischief but either intended or knew himself to be likely to cause wrongful loss damage to the amount of Rs. 100 there may be conviction under this section. If th evidence falls short of this, but is sufficient to show that mischief to the amount of 5 rupees has been caused, whether by fire or by any means whatsoever, the offender ma be convicted under Section 427. If the offence proved is simple mischief and there is n aggravating circumstance in the case, the offender is punishable under Section 426.”- Morgan and Macpherson, 397. But an accused cannot be convicted both under th section as well as under Section 436 because when, in the same penal statute, ther are two clauses applicable to the same act of an accused, cumulative punishment ar not to be awarded unless it is so expressly provided in the statute. The case may b different where different statutes provided separate punishments for this same act, fo the intention of the Legislature is to guard two distinct interests of different species. 1 BHC 13. Where breach of Rule 56(4) of the Defence of India Rules has been committe and such breach forms parts of acts constituting offence under this section and th accused has been convicted under this section, a separate sentence for offence und Rule 56(3) is not necessary. AIR 1943 Pat 446 : 45 Cr LJ 557.

“Damage to any property” contemplated by Section 435 if the Penal Code is of suc a nature as to destroy or diminish in value or utility or otherwise injuriously affect it. DLR 300 : 5 AI Cr D 728 : 1951 ALJ 558.

It is also noticeable that the Magistrate did not feel satisfied to issue the proces based on the allegations made in the complaint and evidence led by th respondent/complainant and, therefore, directed the concerned SHO to investigate th case of the complainant, but surprisingly the process was issued against the petitioner even after the police found the complaint to be false and motivated against the prese petitioners. The learned Magistrate also ignored the report of the fire department, wh in their report clearly observed the cause of fire to be because of 'short circuit'.

The aforesaid factual background of the case would clearly show that th allegations levelled by the complainant against the present petitioners are more base on assumptions besides being patently absurd and improbable. It appears that th respondent/complainant haunted by her action of removal of the illegal encroachme in the premises of these petitioners, perceived and presumed that the car could be on burnt by these very petitioners. No doubt these officers also must be nursing a grudg against the complainant for the upright actions of the respondent complainant, but t ttribute them with such a grave act of putting the vehicle of the complainant to fire ould be totally far-fetched and not expected of such Government officials in the bsence of any direct or corroborative evidence to this effect. R.K. Mishra vs. State, 2010 2) CriLJ 1292 (Del.)

The expression is wide enough to include the entire incidental loss suffered by the wner. AIR 1952 All 156. The main distinction between the offence contemplated by ection 435 and that by Section 436, I.P.C., that while the former envisages mischief by etting fire to any property, the latter contemplates mischief by fire to any building hich is ordinarily used as a place of worship or as a human dwelling or as a place for ustody of property. (1972) 13 Guj LJ 684 ; (1972) 7 Bom LR 341 (even if the accused laims possession).

3. Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compound-able—Triable by a agistrate of the first class.

4. Mischief by Fire.—When the case solely depends upon the oral testimony of a hild witness and when the said witness does not understand the sanctity of oath and hen other independent evidence was available and when such evidence is not brought n record, then it would not be prudent to rely upon the sole testimony of the child itness in order to reverse the acquittal and to convict the present respondent for the aid offence, particularly when there was previous enmity between the respondent and ai Panchu. Bai Panchu was also involved in certain criminal case. In that view of the atter, the approach of the learned Sessions Judge acquitting the present respondent oes not appear to be illegal or erroneous and held that the said judgment also cannot e said to be illegal. Consequently, there is no merit in the present appeal and the same eserves to be dismissed. Even otherwise, when the Appellate Court broadly agrees with he reasoning of the trial court, then, it is not necessary to go into detailed discussion of he evidence on record and to reiterate the findings of the Learned Sessions Judge as bserved in decisions of the Supreme Court in the case of State of Karnataka v. Hemareddy reported in AIR 1981 SC 1417; (1981 Cri LJ 1019) in the case of Girijanandini v. Bijendra Narain, reported in AIR 1967 SC 1124. The learned APP has ailed to dislodge the findings of fact recorded by the learned Sessions judge for acquitting the respondent and, therefore the acquittal appeal is liable to be dismissed. State of Gujarat v. Babubhai K. Salat, 2002 Cri LJ 372.

In a Rajasthan case, the accused was alleged to have taken away standing crop from field of complainant. Revenue record showed that complainant was neither in cultivatory possession nor had any right to possess land in question. It was found that the interest or title over land was relinquished by complainant through a compromise deed. It was held that the complaint was liable to be quashed. Sogat Singh v. State of Rajasthan, 2004 Cr LJ (NOC) 306 (Raj) : 2003(5) All Ind Cas 357 : 2003(2) Cur Cri R 568.

2. Scope.—"This highly penal provision is for the punishment of the offence mentioned in Section 435, when such offence is attended with the aggravating circumstance that the offender contemplated the destruction of a house, place of worship, or place used for the custody of property. The grass or mat huts of the lowest classes are placed on a level with the substantial, secure and valuable dwellings of the rich : and it is left to the descretion of the Judge to distinguish in awarding punishment between cases of great criminality and those in which the injury done is inconsiderable. It is absolutely necessary in order to convict the accused under Section 436, IPC, to prove that the building which he destroyed comes within the category of a building ordinarily used as a place of worship, as a human dwelling or as a place for the custody of property. The words "ordinarily used" in Section 436, IPC, do not mean that other buildings are from time to time used for such purposes, but they mean that the particular building which is the subject of the offence was itself used. 82 Ind Cas 54 : 25 Cr LJ 1190. Accused felt enraged and set fire to thatch of residential premises. Held, that counsel's request for reduction of sentence could not be accepted as accused acted in very high handed manner by putting fire to the house. It smelt of a false ago. 1987 Cri LJ 1196 (Raj).

The word 'hut' means a small house made of thatched roof, straw and mud and there is nothing to suggest that it cannot be considered as a building. (1972) 13 Guj LR 684 ; 1977 Cr LJ 837; 1973 Cr LJ 148 ; (1979) 81 PLR 420 (kutcha structure).

In offence of mischief by fire when FIR was lodged late wherein names of eye-witnesses not mentioned accused entitled to benefit of doubt. Aseekkattu v. State of Kerala, 1996 Cri LJ 1036 (Ker).

3. Person causing loss to his own property.—Mischief by fire was committed with intent to destroy property i.e. building which does not included Chhappar or Chhan (thatched roof). The accused in this case had put his own chhan on fire and tried to falsely indicate others. It was held that no mischief is committed if a person causes loss to his own property. However, he could be proceeded against under Section 182 for making false report to the police with the intent to cause public servant to use his lawful power to the injury of another person. Raj Singh v. State, 2003 Cr LJ 1588 (P&H) : 2003(1) All Cri LR 607 : 2003(2) Rec Cri R 697.

4. Building.—A cabin which is removable which might be made of wood will not be covered under the meaning 'building' which necessarily means the structure of any erection which is of permanent nature and is ecrected on the earth and some portion of it is embedded in earth. When the cabin burnt does not come within the definition of 'building' accused can not be convicted for offence under Section 436, IPC. Its burning might be a lesser offence i.e. 435, IPC. Bherulal v. State of Rajasthan, 1999 Cri LJ 4257 (Raj).

5. Abetment.—The appellant's instigating the offender to commit the offence under Section 436, does not amount to his abetment of the offence under Section 436. AIR 1967 SC 553.

When the case solely depends upon the oral testimony of a child witness and when the said witness does not understand the sanctity of oath and when other independent evidence was available and when such evidence is not brought on record, then it would not be prudent to rely upon the sole testimony of the child witness in order to reverse the acquittal and to convict the present respondent for the aforesaid offence, particularly when there was previous enmity between the accused the action. State of Gujarat v. Babuhai K. Salat 2002 Cri LJ 375 (Guj).

6. Sentence.—Setting fire to a residential hut belonging to another is always a serious offence because it is potentially capable of endangering lives of person and destroying property. AIR 1956 Bom 180 : 1956 Cr LJ 386 ; 1933 Crimes 409 (no reliable evidence to suffer the convict).

When Courts accepted evidence of eye-witnesses that it was accused who set fire to the house—There was no allegation of error of record or perversity of order and evidence cannot be reassessed. Conviction was held proper. However, considering age of accused being 75 years and damage caused not excessive, sentence reduced to the period already undergone with fine of Rs. 500. Bibhishan Kanhar v. State of Orissa, (1994) 3 Crimes 388 (Ori).

7. Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session. AIR 1937 Nag 50 : 38 Cr LJ 340 : ILR 1937 Nag 277.

8. Charge.—"I (name and office of the Sessions Judge, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows :—

That on or about the......day of....at......you committed mischief by fire or an explosive substance, to wit.... (describe it) intending to cause (or knowing it to be likely, that you would thereby cause) the destruction of a building (of AB) which was ordinarily used as a place of worship (or as a human dwelling or as a place for the custody of property) and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 436 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

9. Conviction.—The complainant was closely related to accused and though their relations are strained he had no animus or motive to falsely implicate accused. Evidence of independent witness in corroborating complainant was also found to be reliable witness and on his solitary statement, accused can be convicted under Section 436, IPC. Hence, conviction confirmed but sentence reduced in view of old age of accused. Udai Singh son of Mukhan Singh v. State of U.P., 1995 All LJ 564 (All).

In the case of assassination of Mrs. Indira Gandhi—Several innocent persons were killed. Conviction was based on solitary evidence of prosecution witness—Witness identifying the culprits for the first time in the court—Prosecution witness giving a vague description of the culprits in his testimony and appellants could not be identified as culprits with confidence. It was held that such conviction based on the identification of appellants in the court for the first time unsustainable in the eye of law. Sri Ram Sharma v. State, (1995) 3 Crimes 331 (Del).

The FIR was self-contained containing full description and participation of accused proved. Minor contradiction in FIR and statement under Section 161, Cr PC, ignored. Hence, appeal dismissed and conviction and sentence upheld. Udai Singh v. State of U.P. 1995 JIC 316 (All).

Five persons died in a hut that was set a fire. In the instant case the confession of the accused was corroborated with the prosecution evidence of eye-witness Nos. 4, 5 and 6, but later on he retracted it. presence of the P.Ws. was found doubtful and reasonable doubt was entertained in respect of their complicity in the case. Held, it would not be safe to convict the accused in the absence of independent corroboration. 1986 (1) Crimes 599 (SC) : 1986 SCJ 259.

10. Acquittal.—Where there was contradiction in the testimonies of the complainant and another eye-witness as to the number of accused who had actually committed arson and the complainant himself was unable to say about the length and the breadth of the burnt thatched house and due to non-examination of I.O. any objective evidence showing the occurrence of collected from the place of occurrence could not be proved in Court, the accused persons are liable to be acquitted of the charge under Sections 436/34, IPC. Dinesh Chaudhary v. State, 2004 Cr LJ 4360 (Pat) : 2004(3) BLJ 488.

The informant-complainant himself has not supported the prosecution case in any manner, his son stated in cross-examination that the accused seen fleeing away at a distance of 500/600 yards regard being had to the fact that there was no source of light, it being dark night; none of the independent witnesses identified any of the accused persons and there were contradictory statements of the other witnesses. Thus, the whole prosecution case became very suspicious and as such none could be convicted under assumption or under vague allegation and, therefore, the prosecution had failed miserably to prove the prosecution case. Sudhir Singh v. State, 2004 Cr LJ 1073 (Jhar) : 2003 AIR Jhar HCR 448 : 2003(4) Cur Cri R 350.

Where the evidence of the informant coupled with the topography of the room negates her to be an ocular evidence and evidence of other witnesses is full of self-inconsistencies and material contradictions and the story of chasing of the informant by two accused introduced for in the course of evidence by the informant for the first time and there is no legal evidence to establish that the accused persons have set fire to the room in the cluster of the rooms of the main house of the informant as well as of removing of her articles from her room by the accused, the conviction of the accused cannot be sustained. Police Hembram v. State, 2004 Cr LJ 4408 at pp. 4412, 4413 (Jhar) : 2004 AIR Jhar HCR 273 : 2004(2) JC JR 176.

Where the evidence of R. Chowkidar that he informed the Judicial Officer that he heard three accused process-servers abusing Judicial Officers and uttering that they had set fire to the files in the Court room and that he saw the files were burning is fully corroborated by other witnesses who saw three accused persons sitting on the benches under the tree, it can be safely said that the three accused persons had set fire to the judicial records and there is evidence that these three accused persons were present on the Court premises even after duty hours and there was no reason for the process-serves to remain on the premises and therefore the conviction of the three accused persons is proper. Om Prakash v. State, 2004 Cr LJ 1932 (P&H).

The accused destroyed the house by fire and evidence of wife and sister of owner of house that they saw accused throwing lighted bundle of straw on their roof was found consistent. The conviction of accused and fine imposed as well as compensation awarded to the victim were held proper but sentence of imprisonment was reduced to the period already undergone. Rabindranath Gounda v. State, 2003 Cr LJ 2752 (Orissa).

11. Bail.—The application for bail was moved on ground of delay in' committal. It is thus apparent that Sessions Judge passed the order exercising his jurisdiction on a new ground after a lapse of substantially wrong period of rejection of bail by High Court. Hence, no ground for cancellation of bail is made out. Application rejected. Mohan Lal v. State of U.P, 1995 (32) ACC 159 (All).

12. Proof of arson.—Sole eye-witness filing FIR after unexplained long delay and also after deliberating with other witnesses and hence his evidence tainted with motive and not reliable. Public Prosecutor, High Court of A. P. v. Chandaram Srinivasa Rao Sreenu, 1996 Cr LJ 4412 (AP); See also Suresh Marar Tripathi v. State of U.P., 2005 Cr LJ 3479 : 2005 All LJ 2427 : 2005(52) All Cri C 384 : 2005(3) Crimes 81.

13. Mischief by fire.—The claim of Mustt. Saleha Khatun, who is the main accused, is not supported by the evidence of any other witness. She did not take any step to adduce any other person as her defence witness to support her aforesaid claim. The accused might have rightful claim over the aforesaid plot of land and the dwelling house but it must be established before the appropriate Court and before doing so, she cannot take any action against the other party by setting fire on the dwelling house. The evidence of accused herself amounts to admission of the fact that it was none else but she herself who set fire on the dwelling house of the informant. The corroborated evidence of witnesses who are eye-witnesses to the incident, could not be destroyed/ impeached by the defence while cross-examining them and the same are found to be cogent, reliable and trustworthy. The conviction and sentence can be inflicted on the accused appellants on such evidence on record and in my considered view, the learned trial Court has rightly convicted and sentenced the accused appellants which needs no interference by this Court. Mustt. Saleha Khatun & Ors. vs. State of Assam, 2010 (3) CriLJ 3329 (Gauhati).

Voluntarily causing hurt and mischief by fire. Appellants rebuked and assaulted informant's wife with slaps and fists and also have threatening that they will cause fire to his house. Witnesses supported case of informant so far as assault is concerned.

From the evidences available, it appears that although the prosecution has proved the case under Section 323 of the IPC, i.e. the assault caused to the informant's wife on the date of occurrence and as such, the appellants, conviction under Section 323, IPC is confirmed.

However, there is no evidence beyond reasonable doubt to prove that three accused persons had gone to the house of the informant in the night to cause mischief by putting 'gaushala chappar' on fire, since no seizure list has been proved nor any villager who came on hulla, Satan Mahara and Arjun Mahara, named in the FIR were brought by the prosecution in the Court to prove that any fire was put on the roof of the informant's 'gaushala'. In that view of the matter, prosecution has failed to prove the charge u/S. 436 of the I.P.C. beyond reasonable doubt. Accordingly, they are acquitted from the charge u/S. 436 of the I.P.C and their conviction on that count is set aside. Kalru Rai & Ors. vs. State of Jharkhand, 2010 (3) CriLJ 3509 (Jhar).

Mischief of fire and causing injury—Accused was one of terrorists, who put fire in informant house and caused injuries. Witnesses have turned hostile and they have not supported the prosecution case. The doctor has only proved the injury on the shoulder of the informant. No doubt that the terrorists fired upon him when crossing the river and he could not identify any of the terrorists, in that view of the matter, there is no evidence to hold the appellant for any of the offence charged. Since, Hiralal Uraon, in whose house, the informant was taking shelter and who was present there, has stated that he was not among the terrorists rather he stated that he was his neighbour, residing in the house just beside his house and he was drunk due to Jitiya festival and he was himself assaulted. Held; There is no evidence to hold appellant guilty of any of offences charged. Charges against appellant have not been proved beyond reasonable doubts. Lalsahay Uraon vs. State of Jharkhand, 2010 (3) CriLJ 3351 (Jhar).

3. Charge 2769

1. Scope.—"The sense in which the word `Vessel' is here used is explained by Section 48. In the great navigable rivers of Bengal and probably elsewhere, the crews of river craft acting in league with persons on shore, sometimes run their vessels aground or shore, and thus enable their confederates to plunder the cargo".—Morgan and Macpherson, 329.

The bail application of petitioner was rejected on two occasions by Sessions Judge and once by High Court. Hence, this is fourth application. The cause of death is very clear from statement of deceased which is rendered admissible as dying declaration. Even with the report of Chemical Examiner there was prima facie case. Hence accused is not entitled to bail. Suresh Kumar v. State of Haryana, (1994) 2 Recent Cr R 663 (P&H).

2. Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class.

3. Charge.—The charge should run thus :

"I, (name and designation of the Court of Sessions Judge, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows :—

That on or about..........(date)...........(time)...............(place) intentionally ran a vessel, namely.......aground (or ashore) intending to commit theft of the property contained therein (or to dishonestly misappropriate the property contained therein or with intent that such theft or misappropriation of property contained therein may be committed) and thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 439, Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

2. Charge.—The charge should run thus :

"I, (name and designation of the Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows :—

That you on or about....(date).....(time)....(place).....committed mischief having made preparation for causing death of (or hurt or wrongful restraint or fear of death or of hurt of wrongful restraint to) Sri...... (give the name of the victim) and thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 440, Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

3. Criminal Trespass.—The sections which follow Section 441, in Chapter XVII are designed to protect possession as distinguished from title in the sense that the question in whom title to the land or property vests is foreign to the offence. The mere fact that the accused put forward a bona fide claim to the property would not save him from the consequences to the entry into the house in possession of the complainant if his intention was to take the property out of the complainant's possession without her consent and to cause wrongful gain to himself and wrongful loss to her. AIR 1950 All 653. But in AIR 1950 Pat 564, the Court observed : "It cannot be disputed that a person who enters upon land in the possession of another in the exercise of a bona fide claim of right cannot be convicted of criminal trespass because the entry was not made with any such intent as to continue an offence. But mere assertion of claim of right cannot in itself be a sufficient answer to a charge of criminal trespass. It is the duty of Criminal Court to determine upon the material of each case what was the intention of the alleged offender and if it arrives at the conclusion that he was not acting in the exercise of a bona fide claim of right, then it cannot refuse to convict the offender". The offence under this section is, as compared to the offence under Section 440, no minor. 1961 RLW 191.

OF CRIMINAL TRESPASS

Sec. 441. Criminal trespass.—Whoever enters into or upon property in the possession of another with intent to commit an offence or to intimidate, insult or annoy any person in possession of such property, or, having lawfully entered into or upon such property, unlawfully remains there with intent thereby to intimidate, insult or annoy any such person, or with intent to commit an offence, is said to commit "criminal trespass".

STATE AMENDMENT

Orissa.—For section 441, the following section shall be substituted namely:—

"441. Criminal Trespass.—Whoever enters into or upon property in possession of another with intent to commit an offence or to intimidate, insult or annoy any person in possession of such property, or having lawfully entered into or upon such property, unlawfully remains there with intent thereby to intimidate, insult or annoy any such person or with intent to commit an offence,

1. U.P. Amendment Act.—Section 441 was amended under the Criminal Laws

> "Section 441. Criminal Trespass.—Whoever enters into or upon property in possession of another with intent to commit an offence or to intimidate, insult or annoy any person in possession of such property or having lawfully entered into or upon such property, unlawfully remains there with intent thereby to intimidate, insult or annoy any such person, or with intent to commit an offence or having entered into or upon such property, whether before or after the coming into force of the Criminal Laws (U.P. Amendment) Act, 1961, with the intention of taking unauthorized possession or making unauthorized use of such property fails to withdraw from such property, or its possession or use when called upon to do so by that another person by notice in writing, duly served upon him, by the date specified in the notice is said to commit criminal trespass".

House trespass is an offence against possession and occupation. (1988) 15 Reports 296 (Mad).

2. Of Criminal Trespass.—"The substantive offences which the Code makes punishable under this head of the Chapter of offences against property, considered by themselves, are such as might be visited with a light punishment ; but when they are attended with aggravating circumstances and above all when they are viewed in relation to some other offence, as murder, theft etc, the commission of which is the main object of the offender, they become grave offences. The criminal trespass, in whatever form and whether aggravated or not, if it is preparatory to the commission of an offence, against person or property, deserves severe punishment. 'Criminal trespass' the offence which is first defined and punished, enters into almost all the subsequent offences which are contained under this division. Those penal provisions in fact punish this offence with various degrees of punishment when it is attended with certain aggravating circumstances. The trespass may be aggravated by the way in which it is committed or by the end for which it is committed."—Morgan and Macpherson, 400.

The act of sealing the premises involved the power to control and intent to control. The moment the premises were sealed by the officers of DMC, in exercise of their lawful duty, they assumed possession and actual control of the premises. Sub-section (3) of Section 345-A of DMC Act clearly provided that no person is entitled to remove seals except by an order of the Commissioner or by the Appellate Tribunal or by the Administrator. Admittedly, no such order was passed by any of these authorities. That being so, the offence of criminal tresspass as defined under Section 441 punishment under Section 448 is made out. Ratio of the judgment relied upon by the learned counsel for the petitioner, are not applicable to the facts of this case. Kishore Jain v. The State, 2002 Cri LJ 1154 (Del.) : 2002(3) all Cri LR 229 : 2001(4) Cur Cri R 409 : 2001(4) Cur Cri R 409.

3. Division of the chapter.—The division begins by defining the offences of (1) criminal trespass, (2) house-trespass, (3) lurking house-trespass, (4) lurking house trespass by night, (5) house-breaking, (6) house-breaking by night. The definition of the lower of these offences includes all cases which are within the definitions of the higher offences. The four last named offences are house-trespasses, with different circumstances of aggravation ; and house-trespass is by its definition a species of criminal trespass. When any of these offences, for instance house trespass, is committed in order to the committing of another offence, theft for example, this purpose is treated, as will be seen, not as a distinct offence, but as an aggravation of the trespass. Ibid, 401.

4. Distinguishing nature of the crime.—But the offence itself is to be distinguished from those previously noticed, inasmuch as it does not necessarily imply dishonesty fraud or deceit. The criminal trespasser whose object is "to intimidate, insult or annoy", for instance, has not necessarily any design against the property of the sufferer ; perhaps his object is only a frolic. Ibid. 400. The difference between a civil and criminal trespass is that in latter one, the criminal intention mentioned in Section 411, should be present. 1952 Cr. LJ 542 : AIR 1952 HP & B 27.

5. Scope.—Section 441, IPC, would show that it is only when a person unlawfully remains in a property of another person "with intent thereby to intimidate, or annoy any such person, or with intent to commit an offence" that an offence of criminal trespass is committed. While there may be evidence in the instant case that the accused/opposite party has unlawfully remained in the property belonging to the petitioner or that of the Mosque Committee to whom the petitioner is said to have donated the property, there is no evidence whatsoever that the accused/opposite party remained there with intent to intimidate, insult or annoy the petitioner or the Mosque Committee or with intent to commit an offence. In the absence of any evidence of any criminal intent on the party of the opposite party/accused, no offence of criminal trespass can be held to have been made out against the opposite party, and in the absence of evidence of criminal trespass no offence of house trespass can be held to have been established against the accused/opposite party as the very language of Section 442, IPC would show that house-trespass is criminal trespass in respect of a building, tent or vessel used as a human dwelling or any building used as a place for worship, or as a place for the custody of property. Shabuddin v. Manowar Hussain, 1999 Cri LJ. 349.

The accused had assaulted the deceased and had caused annoyance to him even after they were asked to go out of the house. Thus, the accused were remaining in the property unlawfully to the annoyance of the deceased and with the intention of committing criminal intimidation and insult and they had even assaulted the deceased within the meaning of Sec. 351 I.P.C. Merely because there is no medical evidence to show that the deceased had external injuries on his person it does not follow that the offence punishable under Sec. 451 has not been committed. A close reading of Sec. 451, I.P.C. does not indicate that a person who commits house trespass can be convicted under the section only if he is found guilty of committing any offence punishable with imprisonment. If criminal trespass into a dwelling house is committed with the intention of committing any offence punishable with imprisonment then the offence punishable under Sec. 451, I.P.C. is complete even if the offender does not succeed in committing the offences which he intended to commit. The last part of Section 451, I.P.C. clearly indicates that if the intended offence is theft then it is considered to be a still more aggravated form of house trespass. If a person commits criminal trespass into a dwelling house with the intention of committing an offence punishable with imprisonment and if he succeeds in accomplishing his intention by committing those offences, then he will not only be committing an offence punishable under Sec. 451, I.P.C. but also the other offence which he has committed. Hence, Sec. 451, I.P.C will be attracted even if the trespasser does not accomplish the committing of the other offences punishable with imprisonment which he intended to commit. I need not consider the correctness or otherwise of the decision reported in Appukuttan vs Prakasan, 2006 (4) KLT SN 27 since the evidence already discussed above shows that the accused persons remained in the house even after they were asked to get out and this conduct of the accused had evidently caused insult or annoyance to the deceased who was also intimidated and assaulted. Hence, I do not find any error in the conviction recorded by the Court below for the offence punishable under Sec. 451, I.P.C.

The result of the foregoing discussion is that the conviction entered under Section 323, I.P.C is unsustainable and is accordingly set aside. The appellants are found not guilty of the offence punishable under Sec. 323, I.P.C. and are acquitted of the same. The conviction recorded by the Court below under Sec. 451, I.P.C. is however, confirmed. Appukuttan and Ors. vs. State of Kerala, 2010 (3) Cri LJ 3186 (Kerala).

In this definition, the entry and the intention with which a person enters are essential. The latter part of the definition makes unlawful continuance on property equivalent to an unlawful entry, the intention being criminal. Ibid, 401. Unlike several sections of the Code where mens rea consists in intention or knowledge this section requires that the accused should either unlawfully enter upon property of another or having lawfully entered thereon continue to remain unlawfully with intent thereby to intimidate ; insult, or annoy the person in possession of such property or with intent to commit the offence. 100 Ind Cas 829 : 28 Cr LJ 349 : AIR 1927 Sind 159 ; 27 All 298 ; 18 Cr LJ 402 ; 48 Cr LJ 522 ; 48 Cr LJ 785 ; AIR 1948 Cal 291 : 49 Cr LJ 528 ; AIR 1949 Cal 107 : 53 CWN 402 : 50 Cr LJ 946 : AIR 1949 Cal 558. The intent to annoy or intimidate must not be with respect to any and every person connected with the property but with respect to any person in actual possession of such property. A reading of Section 441 makes it clear that either entry into or continuance to stay in a property in the possession of another would constitute an offence under that section if the same is with an intention to commit an offence or intimidate, insult or annoy any such person in possession of such property. It was held in 1976 Cr LJ 1222 : 1976 All Cr C 80 that if actual physical possession of the property is made on essential ingredient for criminal trespass within the meaning of the amended portion the amendment would be almost superflous.

7. Jurisdiction of criminal Court.—The primary duty of a Court in a criminal trial is to determine whether the offence complained of is made out by the evidence produced before it. The question of civil rights is only ancillary or incidental. The criminal Court may not be competent to adjudicate on the civil rights of title to the property, but to say that the pendency of a civil, suit will automatically oust the jurisdiction of the Criminal Court is too broad a proposition of law to meet with approval. 1963 MLJ (Cr) 526 : 1964 MLJ (Cr) 97 : 1964 Mad LJ (Cr) 97 : 1963 Ker LT 210 (Criminal Courts to attach due weight to render of delivery by civil Court).

8. Property.—The word "property" in Section 441, is sufficiently wide to cover any kind of property, either movable or immovable ; it includes a ferry boat. 35 Cr LJ 948 : AIR 1934 Cal 480 : 38 CWN 665 : 1934 Cr C 688. Where movable property is attached in execution of a decree and property is removed by judgment-debtor by unlawful means resulting in a loss to court, the judgment-debtor is guilty under this section. AIR 1961 SC 803.

9. Entry into or upon property.—"Property" here, must from the nature of the provision, mean corporeal property, either land or a building, tent or vessel ; and possession would seem to mean actual occupation as contra distinguished from a constructive possession or still more a vacant possession. It would seem, a person entitled to a right of way or other incorporeal right is not a person in possession of property within this definition and that there can be no criminal trespass 'into or upon' such property"—Morgan and Macpherson, 401. In order to sustain a conviction for criminal trespass, it must be shown that the property was in possession of some person, other than the alleged trespasser. 28 PR 1878 Cr. The plain meaning of the words of Section 441, rules out the application of the second part to cases when the entry was unlawful. Neither a case of unlawful entry without the necessary intent followed by unlawful remaining with one of the intents prescribed, nor a case of unlawful entry with the necessary intent followed by unlawful remaining also with the necessary intent, is covered by the plain words of the section plainly interpreted. AIR 1951 Cal 297 : 1970 AWR 848 (Ibid). In order to establish that the entry into the property was with the intention to annoy intimidate or insult it is not sufficient to show that it was the natural consequence of the entry. (1966) 2 MLJ 99 : 1983 Cr LJ 173 ; AIR 1960 Cal 189 ; AIR 1964 Bom 82 (continuance with the intention of annoying insulting the teacher) ; AIR 1965 J & K 90. See also AIR 1964 SC 986 (for the proof, the presence of knowledge that the natural consequence of the entry would be such annoyance, intimidation or insult and including also the probability of something else than the causing of such intimidation insult or annoyance, being the dominant intention which prompted the entry).

10. Intention.—The word "intention" constitutes the entry criminal. Merely to trespass is not ordinarily such an offence ; but when the trespass is in order to the commission of an offence (see Section 40), or when it is to intimidate, to insult, or to annoy, it is punished.—Morgan and Macpherson, 401. 145 Ind Cas 625 : 10 OWN 166 : AIR 1933 Oudh 179 : 34 Cr LJ 1014 : 1933 Cr C 390 ; 1933 ALJ 1418 : 1933 Cr C 1415 : AIR 1933 All 816 ; 87 Ind Cas 106 : 26 Cr LJ 954 ; AIR 1940 Pat 14 : 40 Cr LJ 833 ; 1946 A Cr C 142. In order to establish a charge of criminal trespass under Section 441, IPC, it is essential for the prosecution to prove the intention laid down in the section i.e., intent to annoy etc. Intention must always be gathered from the circumstances of the case. 37 Bom LR 880 : AIR 1944 Mad 473 : 1944 MWN 436 : 1939 AWR 58. The ultimate question for decision being whether an act was done with a particular intention, all the circumstances including the natural consequence of the action have to be taken into consideration. It is legitimate to think also that when Section 441 speaks of entering on property with intent to commit an offence or to intimidate, insult or annoy any person in possession of the property, it speaks of the main intention in the action and not any subsidiary intention that may also be present. In order to establish that the entry on the property was with the intent to annoy, intimidate or insult, it is necessary for the Court to be satisfied that causing such annoyance, intimidation or insult was the aim of the entry ; that it is not sufficient for the purpose to show merely that the natural consequence of the entry was likely to be annoyance, intimidation or insult and that this likely consequence was known to the person entering ; that in deciding whether the aim of the entry was the causing of such annoyance, intimidation or insult, the Court has to consider all the relevant circumstances including the presence of the knowledge of the natural consequence would be such annoyance, intimidation or insult and including also the probability of something else than the causing of such intimidation, insult or annoyance being the dominant intention which prompted the entry. If the intention is found to be merely to make an entry peacefully no offence could be held to have been made out. Sec. 445. House-breaking.—A person is said to commit "house-breaking" who commits house-trespass if he effects his entrance into the house or any part of it in any of the six ways hereinafter described ; or if, being in the house or any part of it for the purpose of committing an offence, or, having committed an offence therein, he quits the house or any part of it in any of such six ways, that is to say :—

First.—If he enters or quits through any passage made by himself, or by any abettor of the house-trespass, in order to the committing of the house-trespass.

Secondly.—If he enters or quits through any passage not intended by any person, other than himself or an abettor of the offence, for human entrance ; or through any passage which he has obtained access by scaling or climbing over any wall or building.

Thirdly.—If he enters or quits through any passage which he or any abettor the house-trespass has opened, in order to the committing of the house-trespass by any means by which that passage was not intended by the occupier of the house to be opened.

Fourthly.—If he enters or quits by opening any lock in order to the committing of the house-trespass, or in order to the quitting of the house after a house-trespass.

Fifthly.—If he effects his entrance or departure by using criminal force or committing an assault, or by threating any person with assault.

Sixthly.—If he enters or quits by any passage which he knows to have been fastened against such entrance or departure, and to have been unfastened by himself or by an abettor of the house-tresspass.

Explanation.—Any out house or building occupied with a house, and between which and such house there is an immediate internal communication, is part of the house within the meaning of this section.

2. Intention.—It is necessary that intimidation, insult, or annoyance should be the primary intent with which the entry is made. It is sufficient if the intent to commit one or other is involved in the action. The presumption is against a person entering on property in possession of another without that other's consent except in strict accordance with law. UBR (1892-1896) Vol 1, 264. The words of the Section 447, Penal Code, must be closely adhered to and there must in all cases be found an intent to cause intimidation insult or annoyance. A conviction cannot follow merely because one can pronounce with certainty that the accused must have known that his act would as one of its inevitable incidents cause annoyance. Voluntarily causing grievous hurt and criminal tresspass—The proved facts of the case in the instant case clearly disclose that the act committed by the accused falls within the category's defined under Section 320(7), IPC. Weapon used in the instant case is a dao but blunt side of the dao was used and not the edging side. Considering all these aspects of the matter, I hold that the prosecution has been able to prove the case against the accused Safian Ali and that the provisions of Section 325 of the IPC would be attracted. As regards the other accused person, the prosecution could not establish the case against them by clear, cogent and unimpeachable evidence so as to take a different view from what have been arrived at by the learned trial Judge and their acquittal stands confirmed.

In view of the above discussions, the accused Safian is convicted under Section 305. IPC. It is further proved that the accused Safian Ali trespassed into the house of the informant with intent to assault P.W. 2 and/or to annoy the informant and her family members and ultimately attacked P.W. 2 and caused grievous injury and as such the accused has also committed offence punishable under Section 447, Cr.P.C. *State of Assam vs. Md. 5. Procedure.—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Compoundable—Triable by any Magistrate, summarily.

6. Charge.—The charge when necessary should run thus :—

"I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows :—

'That on or about the..... day of.... at......you committed criminal trespass by entering into (or upon) (or by illegally remaining on) the land (describe it) then in the possession of AB, and thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 447 of the IPC and within my cognizance."

"And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge."

7. Quashing of proceedings.—Under Criminal Law, making vague statement in a complaint is totally insufficient unless specific facts and details are set out and secondly having regard to the background of the case, it is more than clear to the Court that complaint was lodged with the police only as a counterblast. One of the tests which that Court will apply is as to whether the complaint lodged with the police only as a counterblast. One of the tests which the Court will apply is to whether the complaint even assuming it is sustained, could even result in a conviction. On the material before the Court even assuming the complainant is able to elaborate on what is stated in the complaint. There is no possibility of a conviction. The Court also needs to take into account the fact that the petitioners are Forest Officers acting in discharge of their duties and that it is more than clear, that the sole purpose of lodging the counter complaint was in order to dilute or get away from the offences with which the complainant was charged. H.N. Venaktesh & Ors. v. State of Karnataka, 2002 CriLJ 328.

8. Jurisdiction.—When respondent took forcible possession from helpless lady in collusion and connivance with police—Application submitted by lady not attended—High Court can restore the possession under writ jurisdiction. But in exceptional cases, High Court would direct delivery of possession in exercise of its extraordinary jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution of India. Anju Devi v. Commissioner of Police, (1994) 3 Recent Cr R 71.

9. Right of Private defence against property.—The accused admittedly did not purchase any specific portion of the property. They purchased undivided share. By reason thereof, in law, they did not acquire any right to obtain possession of the lands. Harda Ram and his family being the co-sharers did not give any consent for handing over their possession in their favour. In law, therefore, the accused persons being purchasers of an undivided share merely acquired a right to sue for partition.

It has been amply proved that the scuffle lasted for only two minutes to two and half minutes. PW8-Rajbir was not armed with any weapon, so was not Harda Ram (the deceased). It was Lal Singh alone who had in his hand a small twig (Kamari). According to him, the same is used to drive camels. Kamari was said to be used by Lal Singh in his sole defence as a result whereof Sheo Ram and Raja Ram were injured. We have noticed hereinbefore that the injuries on the persons of the said two accused were simple in nature. It is true that the fact that two of the accused person had suffered injuries had not been disclosed in the FIR or in their Statement before the Investigating Officer, but the same, in our opinion, was not necessary inasmuch as they got themselves medically examined by Dr. Goel almost at the same time when the other prosecution witnesses got themselves examined. By that time they had already been arrested. It was the police authorities who had submitted an application along with the injuries chart. They Had been brought by Constable Satbir Singh. Thus, the fact that two of them had suffered injuries in the same incident was known to the Investigating Officer.

The FIR might have been recorded at a later stage. But the information about the occurrence must have been given by P.W.8 to the officer in-charge of Ateli Police Station prior thereto. Even a copy of the FIR was received by the Magistrate concerned at about 10.30 p.m. on the same day. Furthermore, the Investigating Officers were not cross examined on that point. In any event, it is wholly unlikely that the FIR was anti-timed and anti-dated. Even assuming that the same was anti-timed or anti-dated, the fact that an incident had occurred was not disputed. At least two of the accused persons accepted their presence. The defence story is that two accused persons had sustained injuries at the hands of the prosecution witness Lal Singh. (P.W. 12).

We have noticed hereinbefore that the appellants cannot be said to have been in 'settled possession' of the land in question. Furthermore, they came wholly armed, whereas except Lal Singh was having a small twig (Kamari), deceased party were not armed with any weapon. It was not a dangerous weapon. No grievous injuries could have been caused by use thereof and in fact no grievous injuries have been suffered by the accused Sheo Ram and Raja Ram.

Appellants herein did not raise any plea of self defence. According to them, they were not present at the spot at all. Learned Senior Counsel would contend that Accused No.1 and Accused No.6 raised the plea of self defence. The learned trial Judge although accepted the said plea but the same was accepted not with particular reference to the said accused. All the accused persons did not raise the defence of exercise of right to private defence. In regard to claim of right of self defence, the matter may have to be considered from somewhat a different angle. Accused Nos. 6, 7 and 8 were attributed with assault of Lal Singh and two ladies, namely, Mamli and Dhankauri.

We have been taken through the depositions of P.W. 8 and P.W. 12. P.W. 12's presence stands admitted. P.W. 8's presence has been doubted by the learned Sessions Judge only on the ground that he got his father admitted at 2.30 p.m. The presence of P.W.8-Rajbir, in our opinion, could not have been doubted on such slender evidence. He was driving the tractor. Accused persons came prepared to assault the deceased. By the time the first informant could come and intervene, the entire incident must have occurred as it is stated that the same took place only for two to two and half minutes. No suggestion had been given to any of the prosecution witnesses by the defence that no tractor was found at the place or it was the deceased who himself was driving the tractor. P.W. 8 in his evidence categorically stated that he left the tractor. P.W.8 in his evidence categorically stated that he left the tractor at that place. Furthermore, his evidence, taking a holistic view of the matter, in our opinion, appears to be trustworthy. He vividly described the entire incident. He was cross examined on all material points. He had also explained as to why he did not suffer any injury categorically stating and that too in cross-examination that by the time he reached all the accused had started running with their weapons towards their respective houses. Ram Pat vs. State of Haryana, AIR 2009 SC 2847 : 2009 (7) SCC 614 : 2009(8) Scale 145 : 2009(7) JT 579.

10. Appeal against conviction.—Around midnight both the accused went to house of prosecutrix, called out her husband and compelled prosecutrix to follow them to the jungle. She was forcibly taken away and accused forcibly committed rape on her. Trial Court convicted accused relying on evidence of prosecutrix and her husband. In appeal, High Court upheld conviction without discussing evidence.

Reasons introduce clarity in an order. On plainest consideration of justice, the High Court ought to have set forth its reasons, howsoever brief, in its order indicative of an application of its mind. The absence of reasons has rendered the High Court's judgment not sustainable.

We are dismayed at the casual manner in which the criminal appeal has been disposed of. In the circumstances, we set aside the impugned judgment and remit the matter to the High Court for fresh consideration in accordance with law. As the matter is pending since long we request the High Court to explore the possibility of early disposal of Criminal Appeal. Prasad vs. State of Karnataka, AIR 2009 SC 1911 : 2009 CrLJ 1761 : 2009 (1) Crimes 359 : 2009 (3) SCC 174 : 2009 (2) Scale 524 : 2009 (1) Supreme 815.

1. Scope.—Where husband's property let out wife to her brother, it was held that wife has same rights in property and no offence of criminal trespass is committed. 1987 Cr LR (Guj) 84.

When there was acquittal by trial Court—Petition under Section 401, Cr PC, was filed. It was finally held that PW 1 is not an eye-witness and his evidence is only hearsay. The avertments made in the complaint belief the evidence of PW 1. Hence, it is not a fit case for retrial of the respondents. Chander Kanta v. Krishan Lal, (1994) 2 CC Cases 343 (P&H).

2. Intention.—In order to sustain a conviction under Section 448, I.P. Code, it must be found that the intention of the accused was to commit an offence : or to intimidate, insult or annoy the complainant. 14 Mys LJ 506 ; see also 37 Bom LR 880 : AIR 1935 Pat 523 : 1935 Cr C 1281 : 36 Cr LJ 1351 : 158 Ind Cas 279. AIR 1956 Cal 118 : 97 Cr LJ 32 : 1956 Cr LJ 524. When a landlord broke open the lock of the house in the possession of the tenant in his absence and took possession of the same, it must have been obvious to the landlord that his act in breaking open the lock of the property in possession of the tenant must cause annoyance to him, and as a man is presumed to intent the consequences of his act it follows that the petitioner must have intended to cause annoyance to the tenant. The landlord would be guilty of an offence under this section. 1963 Cr LJ 384 : ILR (1963) 2 Punj 893 : 1964 (1) Cr LJ 427 : AIR 1964 Punj 145 : see also 65 Bom LR 477 : ILR 1963 Bom 627 : 1964 (1) Cr LJ 395 : AIR 1964 Bom 82 (accused, an office bearer of school committee, going to school beating two boys in absence of Head master and subsequently abusing Head master on his return).

3. House-trespass.—To constitute the offence of house-trespass it is necessary that an entry should have been effected into the house or building. Mounting the roof of a house with intent to enter the house is not house-trespass nor even an attempt to commit house-trespass but merely a preparation for the offence of house-trespass. 12 Bur LT 222. Entry on a verandah does not amount to house-trespass. 26 Ind Cas 306 : see also 15 PR 1907 Cr ; see 1 Weir 524 : Rat Un Cr C 188. Entry into a varandah may not amount to house-trespass, but such entry coupled with an attempt to push open the door does amount to any attempt to commit the offence. 16 Cr LJ 2 : 26 Ind Cas 306. An entry into a shop to see whether the trades had correct measures is not an offence under this section. AIR 1944 Mad 445 : 45 Cr LJ 805. No offence is committed under this section by the re-entry of landlord in tenant's premises, when the tenant left the holding without intimidation and did not pay any rent. 49 Cr LJ 120 : AIR 1948 Cal 130. Considering the mode of life among the common people of this country, it is straining the language of Section 441, to hold that a man entering the compound of an uninhabited house merely to commit nuisance, intends to annoy the owner and that he is guilty under Section 448 of the Penal Code. AWN 1812, 324.

A judgment-creditor commits an offence under this section if he enters into other house than that mentioned in the warrant of attachment issued by a Civil Court. 2 OC 65. The accused caused the roof of his house belonging to him, which the complaint, occupied as his tenant to be removed while the complainant's wife a pardanashin woman was in it, and without giving any notice before hand. The woman had to leave the house to be out of the way of the fragments of the roof falling upon her, and was thus exposed to public view. Held. that an offence under this section has been committed. UBR (1897-1901) Vol I, 350. Where in execution of a decree of Court, certain property was attached and taken out of the house in which it was, the decree-holder would not be guilty of criminal trespass in doing the act. 15 ALJ 808.

A school was built by public subscription and put in charge of a teacher. He went away having locked the building. The accused were some of the managers of the school took possession of the building and started certain classes in it. They were convicted of criminal trespass. Held, that this conviction was improper as the building was not in the possession of the complainant and the accused had no intention of annoying him. 17 ALJ 334 : 54 Ind Cas 350 : 20 Cr LJ 463 ; see also 52 Ind Cas 274. During the temporary absence of the complainant, the accused who wanted to get possession of the house as mortgagee, put a lock on the house. Held, that he was not guilty of criminal trespass and the matter was one for the Civil Courts to deal with. 50 Ind Cas 834 : 20 Cr LJ 354.

Where the accused were proved to have gone to house with Civil Court officers and entered the same in order to execute a Civil Court decree which they had obtained against one of the inmates of the house, held, that they were not liable to be convicted for criminal trespass. 34 CWN 583 : 127 Ind Cas 551 : 31 Cr LJ 1223 : AIR 1930 Cal 720.

Where a person enters a house with intention of carrying out his amours with married woman, owner has right to arrest him or to pursue him for arrest and to use all means for effecting it. AIR 1935 Pesh 83.

For an offence under Section 448, intention is one of the most important ingredients and in order to determine the intent it is not necessary to consider the circumstances under which the act was done by the accused as also the bona fide nature or otherwise of the claim which the accused may have in respect of the property itself. AIR 1928 Cal 263.

An entry to a house in assertion of a bona fide claim of right cannot constitute criminal trespass, which requires an intent to commit an offence or to intimidate, insult or annoy any person in possession. 1925 Pat 167 : 81 Ind Cas 823 : 25 Cr LJ 1047 : 88 Ind Cas 725 : 26 Cr LJ 1205 : AIR 1925 Oudh 505. See in this connection 1963 ALJ 501 : 1963 All WR (HC) 408 : 1963 All Cr R 215 ; 1964 (1) Cr LJ 324 : AIR 1964 All 103 (where Receiver was appointed of suit property including shop in possession of the accused and wrongfully put his own lock on the shop to which he was not entitled, it was held that the accused was not guilty of an offence under Section 448).

House trespass and rape. Brother-in-law entered house of victim lady and committed rape on her. There was some dispute with appellant and prosecutrix with regard to partition of family properties. Medical evidence does not support her version that appellant raped her. Further no sign of any injury of any kind was found on her person. Prosecution tried to exaggerate and develop story from one stage to other and further delay of 11 days in lodging FIR was not explained. Held, therefore appellant is entitled to be acquitted. Elbish Guriya vs State of Jharkhand, 2010 (4) CriLJ 4014 (Jhar).

In an Orissa case, it was alleged that the accused Sarpanch had trespassed into house of complainant and abused him calling him lower caste man untouchable, SALE etc. There was a case against wife of complainant before panchayat regarding dereliction of her duties as midwife and accused sarpanch was authorized to move higher authorities against her. There was two months delay in filing of FIR. It was held that case of complainant was doubtful and acquittal of accused was proper. Chintamani Seth v. Raghunath Mohanty, 2003 Cr LJ 2866 (Orissa) : 2003 (25) OCR 700.

Where an advocate enters the house of a Magistrate in his absence, taking along with him the books wanted by the Magistrate and finding on the table the file of a case in which he has appeared, inspects it, it cannot be said that the advocate in entering the house surreptiously commits the offence of criminal trespass punishable under Section 448, Cr. 4. Sentence.—Where in the trial under Sections 448, 426 and 186, the allegations were that during the elections, the accused led a procession to the office of the Sub-divisional officer and committed acts of mischief, and the accused frankly admitted the guilt, a sentence of 15 day's simple imprisonment was adequate. See (1963) 4 Ori JD 367 ; 1979 Cr LJ 1297.

5. FIR.—Non-naming of one or few of accused persons in FIR or in dying declaration, when not fatal. Prosecution case that the accused persons committed criminal trespass into the school and tried to give lesion in the classes and some outsider accused persons being armed with iron rod, spear etc. started assaulting the clerk of the school.

Eighteen persons faced trial out of which were acquitted by the trial Court and the High Court. Names of some of the appellants were not mentioned in the FIR or the dying declarations.

The law is fairly well settled that FIR is not supposed to be an encyclopaedia of the entire events and cannot contain the minutes details of the events. When essentially material facts are disclosed in the FIR that is sufficient. FIR is not substantive evidence and cannot be used for contradicting testimony of the eye witnesses except that may be used for the purpose of contradicting maker of the report. Though the importance of naming the accused persons in the FIR cannot be ignored, but names of the accused persons have to be named at the earliest possible opportunity. The question is whether a person was impleaded by way of afterthought or not must be judged having regard to the entire factual scenario in each case. Therefore, non naming of one or few of the accused persons in the FIR is no reason to dis-believe the testimony of crucial witnesses. The evidence of witness is clear and cogent. Kirender Sarkar vs. State of Assam, AIR 2009 SC 2513 : 2009 CrLJ 3727 : 2009 (12) SCC 342 : 2009 (6) JT 114 : 2009 (6) SCR 1133 : 2009 (6) Scale 589.

6. Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable—Triable by any Magistrate and summarily.

7. Charge.—In a charge under Section 448, Penal Code, the Magistrate should state the intention with which the accused person trespassed into the house of the complainant as contemplated under Sections 441 and 442, Penal Code. AIR 1957 Orissa 190 : 1957 MLJ 988.

The charge should run thus :

"I (name and office of the Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows :—

'That on or about the....day of......at.....you committed house-trespass by entering into (or unlawfully remaining on) the house in possession of AB, with intent to commit the offence of (or to intimidate, insult or annoy the said AB) and thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 448, of, Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance."

1. Amendment.—The words in italics were substituted for the words "transportation for life" by Act 26 of 1955, Section 117, and Sch. (with effect from 1.1.1956).

2. Sections 449 and 460.—These sections deal with the offence of criminal trespass when it is aggravated by the end for which it is committed. Hence trespass may be committed for no other purpose than the purpose of playing some idle trick on the inmates of a dwelling, or it may be committed in order to the perpetration of murder or other atrocious crime. These sections regard the ulterior offence which the house-trespasser has in view and visit his crime with a proportionate punishment".—Morgan and Macpherson, 404.

3. In order to the committing.—"The intention and design is the commission of an offence. To bring the offender within these severe penal provisions, it is not necessary that he shaved do any further act than the house-trespass towards the commission of the offence punishable with death. But to justify a conviction there should be clear proof of the design to commit a murder or other like offences. In the absence of proof of some further act done, in addition to the criminal trespass, in the prosecution of the murderous intention it can rarely happen that the evidence will suffice for a conviction under this section".—Morgan and Macpherson. 405. An act can be said to be committed in order to the committing of an offence even though the offence may not be completed. Thus if a person commits a house-trespass with the purpose of the committing of theft but has failed to accomplish the purpose, it will be proper to say that he committed the house-trespass in order to the committing of theft. (1964) 1 SCWR 501 : 1964 SCD 766 : 1965 (1) Cr LJ 126 : AIR 1965 SC 132.

Common intention. In the present case, the question is whether the appellant shared any common intention and if so, with whom? Neither there is any charge nor evidence against A-4 that he committed the murder of the deceased in furtherance of common intention shared with A-4. The trial Court as well as the appellate Court found A-4 guilty for the offence punishable under Sec. 302 IPC only. There is no third person involved with whom the appellant could have shared common intention. PW 1 and 2 in their evidence did not attribute any overt or covert act as against the appellant. No circumstances were brought on record from which it could be reasonably inferred that the appellant shared common intention with A-4 and in turn, A-4 committed the murder of the deceased in furtherance of such common intention. There is no evidence that there was a prior meeting of mind developed at the spur of moment and A-4 shot the deceased in furtherance of such common intention resulting in death.

According to the evidence of PW-1 the appellant did not indulge in any overt or covert act except be present at the scene of occurrence. It is true that both of them ran away from the scene of occurrence after A-4 shot the deceased with a pistol in his hand. Even if it be accepted that he was armed with a pistol no reasonable inference could be drawn on the proven facts that he shared common intention with A-4 to commit the offence of murder.

In the present case, there is no evidence of any prior meeting of minds. We know nothing of what they said or did before the attack. It is in the evidence that on being asked by the deceased as to why they entered the house and as to what they wanted; A-4 immediately shot the deceased with the pistol in his hand. Obviously, this was an impulsive act of A-4 and both the Courts rightly found that he was guilty for the offence of committing murder of the deceased punishable under Sec. 302 IPC but the High Court committed a serious error in holding the appellant vicariously liable for the criminal act of A-4.

It is nowhere suggested that appellant indulged in any overt or covert act as such based on which any inference of common intention could be drawn. There is no dispute with the proposition that the common intention can develop and manifest itself at the spur of moment. But the question for consideration is, whether there is any evidence in the present case to indicate that in fact such a common intention was developed between appellant and A-4 and in furtherance of such shared common intention A-4 committed the murder of the deceased. The evidence of PW-1 and PW-2 does not suggest that any such common intention developed on the spur of moment leading to the murder of deceased by A-4. In the circumstances, it would be unsafe to convict the appellant for the offence punishable under Sec. 302 with the aid of Sec. 34 IPC.

In the present case, the FIR shows that at about 9.15 P.M. the appellant and A-4 entered the house and stood there; on seeing them, the deceased got up from his chair and moved towards them "asking them who are they" whereupon A-4 shot the deceased causing bleeding injury due to which deceased fell down, the appellant and A-4 ran away towards the street. The contents of the FIR and the evidence of PW-1 and PW-2 read together make it clear that the appellant was not armed as erroneously held by the High Court. In the circumstances, it would be impossible to draw any inference that A-4 committed murder in furtherance of common intention shared by the appellant. In fact, neither there is any charge nor any evidence even as against A-4 that he shared common intention along with the appellant to commit murder of the deceased. There must be more than one person to share common intention to commit criminal act for attracting the applicability of Sec. 34 IPC. It is clear from the evidence that A-4 did not act conjointly with the appellant in committing the murder. If he did not act conjointly with the appellant, the appellant could not have acted conjointly with A-4.

On consideration of the evidence and the material available on record and in the light of the legal principles referred to hereinabove, it is clear that the accusations made against the appellant making him constructively liable for the criminal act of murder committed by A-4 with the aid of Sec. 34 IPC were not established. So far as the present appellant is concerned, there is no evidence whatsoever available on record to show sharing of any common intention.

We accordingly affirm the judgment of the trial Court acquitting the appellant of the offence punishable under Sec. 302 read with Sec. 34 IPC. Consequently, the judgment of the High Court convicting the appellant under Sec. 302 read with Sec. 34 IPC is set aside. We however, affirm the conviction of the appellant under Sec. 457(1) IPC. The trial Court as well as the High Court convicted the appellant for the offence punishable under Sec. 457(1) IPC and sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for a period of 2 years and to pay a fine of Rs. 500/-, in default, to further undergo rigorous imprisonment for a period of 6 months. No effort has been made before us challenging the conviction of the appellant under Sec. 457(1) IPC. We, accordingly, confirm the conviction and sentence of the appellant under Sec. 457(1) IPC imposed by the Courts below. The appellant however, had already undergone the sentence. Since there is no appeal preferred by the State as against the judgment of the High Court acquitting the appellant of other charges the same is not interfered with. Arun vs. State, AIR 2009 SC 1256 : 2008 (15) SCC 501 : 2008 (12) JT 571 : 2008 (17) SCR 279 : 2008 (16) Scale 361 : 2009 (1) Supreme 355 : 2009 (1) SLT 492.

Sufficient evidence. Rape and murder of a girl aged 2 years. The evidence of PW-5 and PW-6 reveals that appellant had been seen around the complainant's house on the previous day and as he was not a resident of this area, he had been quickly singled out. These witnesses further stated the appellant had been seen in the vicinity again after the rape and murder and he had accordingly been apprehended and handed over to the police and two chains worn by deceased had been taken from his pockets. PW-13 also identified the chains in Court. It is true that in the cross-examination of these two witnesses, several improvements vis-a-vis their statements under Sec. 161 of Criminal Procedure Code had been pointed out by the defence Counsel, but the fact that the appellant had been present in the vicinity of the house and had been arrested, soon after the incident has been admitted even by the defence.

Another significant piece of evidence is the statement of PW-7 who testified to the fact that about 2:30 a.m. on the night of the murder he had gone out of the house to urinate and had seen the appellant outside and on being questioned, the appellant had threatened him with dire consequences with the result that he had not informed anybody till the third day after the police had come to the village to verify the facts. He too stated to the fact that two chains had been recovered from the pocket of the appellant. It is true that several improvements have been made by the three primary witnesses but there is absolutely no reason as to why they would involve the appellant in a false case as admittedly he was a stranger to the locality and they bore him no ill will.

We have also gone through the evidence of PW-12 relating to the recovery of the frock pursuant to a disclosure statement made by the appellant under Sec. 27 of the Evidence Act. Nothing could be spelt out from the cross-examination of this witness except that the recovery had not been made from a closed place, though he explained that there was very little movement of human beings in that area as no one was residing close by. This witness also identified the frock that had been recovered. It is equally significant that the strands of fibre recovered from the place of incident had been matched with the material of the frock and were found to be from the same source.

It is true that in a criminal matter the onus of proof lies almost exclusively on the prosecution. As already mentioned above, however, the appellant has not been able to give any explanation in his statement under Sec. 313 of Criminal Procedure Code as to what he had been doing in that locality. On the contrary he admitted his presence by stating that he had been caught by the neighbours on suspicion of the murder and beaten up, and had suffered several injuries in the process. The medical evidence on the contrary reveals that these injuries could also have been sustained while raping and killing the young child.

The evidence that the appellant was a paedophile with extremely violent propensities also stands proved on record in that he had been convicted and sentenced for an offence punishable under Sec. 354 in the year 1998 and later for offences punishable under Secs. 363, 376, 379, 302 and 201 of the IPC for the rape and murder of a young child and had been awarded a sentence of imprisonment for life under Sec. 302, and several other terms of imprisonment with respect to the other Secs., though, an appeal in this connection was pending as on date. It is also extremely relevant that the appellant, had, in addition, been tried for the murders of several other children but had been acquitted on the 28.07.2005 with the benefit of doubt. The present incident happened three days later. We accordingly dismiss the appeals but modify the sentence of death to one for the rest of his life in terms of the judgment in Shraddananda's case. Sebastian vs. State of Kerala, 2010 (1) SCC 58 : 2009 (4) Crimes 121 (SC) : 2009 (13) JT 136 : 2009 (13) Scale 210 : 2009 (7) Supreme 8 : 2009 (8) SLT 96.

Insufficient Circumstantial evidence. Trial Court convicted the accused on the four types of circumstantial evidences : (i) accused was examining the palm by way of palmistry of deceased and there the deceased went towards the field (ii) accused also went towards the field (iii) accused washed his hands after committing the offence and blood of the deceased was found at the field (iv) accused returned from the field smeared with mud alongwith a "Potli" in his hand, he was seen going away from the village, and upon identification of accused, jewellery of the deceased, which had been removed and taken away by amputating feet from her body, the same were seized and that identification proceedings of these jewellery-items were carried out. There could be some suspicion regarding the conduct of the accused at the time of occurrence but the same cannot in any manner conclusively prove and establish that the accused has committed the murder of the deceased. Unless and until we are satisfied that the evidence adduced clearly and pointedly establish the guilt of the accused we cannot pass an order of conviction by setting aside the order of acquittal. State of Rajasthan vs. Naresh, 2009 (9) SCC 368 : 2009 (11) Scale 699 : 2009 (11) JT 109 : 2009 (8) SLT 137 : 2009 (13) SCR 589.

Plea of Alibi—When not reliable. The theatrical explanation given by the accused/ appellant that he was going Perumbavoor and at Thottuva, nearly 35 kms away, the auto driver tried to snatch his money and he ran and stayed at a dilapidated house for the whole night has been rightly rejected by the Courts below. And if he was at Thottuva which is admittedly 35 kms away from the place of occurrence, he could not have been seen on the early hours, at the place of occurrence. M.A. Antony vs. State of Kerala, AIR 2009 SC 2549 : 2009 (6) SCC 220 : 2009 (7) JT 372 : 2009 (6) Scale 36 : 2009 (6) SCR 829.

Sufficient proof of Motive.—The appellant was in dire need of money as established. The Accused/appellant knew that his visa had come on and that a large amount of money was required. He had also tried to arrange for loan.

According to accused in the house of the deceased, a large amount of cash and jewellery was available which could have been taken away by the accused/appellant and that he, as a conscientious man, had taken so that he could repay before his departure. The contention is devoid of any merit and has been found to be incorrect by the Courts below. It would be pertinent to mention here that the trial Court has adverted to the fact that the jewellery and cash were lying in hidden condition and thus knowledge of its existence cannot be attributed to the accused/appellant.

At the stage of recording of statement under Sec. 313 of the Code, the accused had come with another explanation that the deceased Augustine had paid him amount. No evidence at all has been adduced to show that he was present in the shop of Augustine and had been given the said amount. Furthermore, even wife of the accused/appellant has not stated that she was told at any stage by her husband that he had received amount from the deceased Augustine. The trial Court and the High Court both have disbelieved it.

The analysis of the evidence shows that the accused/appellant was in dire and urgent need of more and he had a motive for getting the said amount of money. M.A. Antony vs. State of Kerala, AIR 2009 SC 2549 : 2009 (6) SCC 220 : 2009 (7) JT 372 : 2009 (6) SCR 829 : 2009 (6) Scale 36 : 2009 (8) SLT 255.

1. Scope.—If the entry in a house made with the consent of the owner and possessor of the house, no offence under this section can be deemed to have been committed. 15 Cr LJ 351. Where the accused was found in the complainant's house at night, having gone there with the intention of visiting the complaint's daughter-in-law, a woman of loose character, and probably with her connivance, held, that he was not guilty of an offence under Section 456 ; see also 19 All 74 : 20 Ind Cas 622 ; 1 Weir 534. A conviction under this section is bad where the house-trespass for an offence was committed with the connivance of the owner. 1 Weir 534 ; Colm Dig Cr 58 of 1876. Where during the absence of the complainant, the accused entered his house with his wife's consent in order to commit adultery with her, held, that the accused was guilty of the offence under Section 451, IPC. 8 PWR Cr 1921 : 22 Cr LJ 118 : 59 Ind Cas 550 ; 22 Cr LJ 266 : 60 Ind Cas 666 : 89 Ind Cas 319 : 26 Cr LJ 1343 ; 3 UPLR 18 : 60 Ind Cas 666 : 22 Cr LJ 226. To constitute an offence under Section 461, an offence under Section 448 must be proved first. The offence contemplated must be found. 20 Cr LJ 347 : 17 ALJ 800 : 50 Ind Cas 827. "Offence" means any offence punishable under the Indian Penal Code. AIR 1931 Lah 405 : 1931 Cr C 645 : 32 Cr LJ 732 : 131 Ind Cas 381.

Where the accused was proved to have stepped into an open courtyard in front of a house and it appeared that some thorny bushes were placed round the courtyard which are put down more to indicate its extent rather than to prevent entry. Held, that the place was not a building, and that consequently a conviction under Section 452, I.P. Code, was not sustainable. 26 ALJ 855 : 110 Ind Cas 798 : 29 Cr LJ 766. A man who enters the house of another at night with intent to commit adultery with his wife is guilty of an offence under Section 451, and if in such a case it is shown that the husband was at the time of the occurrence absent from the house in the legitimate pursuit of his occupation, it may safely be presumed that he neither consented to nor connived at any adultery or immorality on the part of his wife. 89 Ind Cas 319 : 26 Cr LJ 1343 : AIR 1925 Lah 635.

Accused entering house of a person with the common intention of abducting his wife and the woman was abducted by the accused. Held, that the accused was guilty under Section 451, and not under Section 454. 1954 All LJ 237 : 1954 Cr LJ 507. It is clear from the wording of Section 451 that the very entry must be with a view to commit an offence punishable with imprisonment. If, at first there is lawful and innocent entry and then an offence is committed after the entry it can not fall under Section 451. Madh BL 1954 Cr 301 : Madh LR 1954 HCR 1636.

The accused had assaulted the deceased and had caused annoyance to him even after they were asked to go out of the house. Thus, the accused were remaining in the property unlawfully to the annoyance of the deceased and with the intention of committing criminal intimidation and insult and they had even assaulted the deceased within the meaning of Sec. 351 I.P.C. Merely because there is no medical evidence to show that the deceased had external injuries on his person it does not follow that the offence punishable under Sec. 451 has not been committed. A close reading of Sec. 451, I.P.C. does not indicate that a person who commits house trespass can be convicted under the section only if he is found guilty of committing any offence punishable with imprisonment. If criminal trespass into a dwelling house is committed with the intention of committing any offence punishable with imprisonment then the offence punishable under Sec. 451, I.P.C. is complete even if the offender does not succeed in committing the offences which he intended to commit. The last part of Section 451, I.P.C. clearly indicates that if the intended offence is theft then it is considered to be a still more aggravated form of house trespass. If a person commits criminal trespass into a dwelling house with the intention of committing an offence punishable with imprisonment and if he succeeds in accomplishing his intention by committing those offences, then he will not only be committing an offence punishable under Sec. 451, I.P.C. but also the other offence which he has committed. Hence, Sec. 451, I.P.C will be attracted even if the trespasser does not accomplish the committing of the other offences punishable with imprisonment which he intended to commit. I need not consider the correctness or otherwise of the decision reported in Appukuttan vs Prakasan, 2006 (4) KLT SN 27 since the evidence already discussed above shows that the accused persons remained in the house even after they were asked to get out and this conduct of the accused had evidently caused insult or annoyance to the deceased who was also intimidated and assaulted. Hence, I do not find any error in the conviction recorded by the Court below for the offence punishable under Sec. 451, I.P.C.

The result of the foregoing discussion is that the conviction entered under Section 323, I.P.C is unsustainable and is accordingly set aside. The appellants are found not guilty of the offence punishable under Sec. 323, I.P.C. and are acquitted of the same. The conviction recorded by the Court below under Sec. 451, I.P.C. is however, confirmed. Appukuttan and Ors. vs. State of Kerala, 2010 (3) Cri LJ 3186 (Kerala).

FIR which was filed by complainant disclosing committment of some offence by petitioner to be investigated by police. It was held that FIR cannot be quashed at this stage. Shiv Ram v. State, (1995) 1 RCD 117 (Raj).

The criminal Court is not to decide the rights of parties and has to determine if the accused committed an offence. The truthfulness or falsity of allegations are to be determinated by the trial court after the appreciation of evidence. The power to quash FIR cannot be exercised when prima facie ingredients of the offence alleged may justify the framing of charge. Hence petition is dismissed. Tarlochan Singh v. State of Haryana, (1994) 3 CC Cases 268 (P&H).

Conviction under Section 451, IPC, and under Section 392, IPC, and sentences to run concurrently—Revision petition challenging of the same was filed. It was finally held that where according to MM, the appellants test identification parade was to take place on the specified date. On previous day the accused was taken at the residence of complainant and other witnesses had also seen him. The conducting of test identification parade one after was total out of force and appellant did not rightly participate in such test identification parade. His conduct was fully justified in the circumstances. Anoop Singh v. State, 1994 (3) CC Cases 141 (Delhi).

There must be clear evidence of preparation for causing hurt to sustain a conviction under Section 452 of the Penal Code. The fact that a person enters another man's house and commits an assault does not necessarily presuppose such preparation for it may be a case post ergo propter hoc. 1964 Raj LW 524 ; AIR 1960 MP 24 : 1959 Jab LJ 570 (for ingredient of the offence). 3. Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused), as follows :—

That on or about.........day of.......at..........you committed house-trespass by entering into (or unlawfully remaining in) the building of AB used as a human dwelling, having made preparation for causing hurt to the said AB (or for assaulting or wrongfully restraining the said AB or for putting the said AB in fear of hurt or assault, or wrongful restraint) and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 452 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

4. Conviction.—When complaint was lodged with police and complainant was medically examined, case investigated, challanged and tried—Accused who was respondents were convicted under Section 452, read with Section 34, and Sections 323/24, IPC, by Addl Sessions Judge—State not filed any appeal but complainant filed present revision petition against inadequate sentence awarded by trial court. It was finally held that there is no reliable evidence on record that there was any fracture underneath the head injury of the complainant. In view of the circumstances of the present case, the trial Court has rightly held that no offence under Sections 307. or 307/34, IPC. was made out against accused. Hence, conviction under Sections 452 and 323, read with Section 34, IPC, was right and no interference is warranted. Dhan Raj v. Rajesh, (1994) 2 SLJ 996 (P&H).

5. Evidence and Proof.—Evidence implicating accused is doubtful. The absence on light of the spot of occurrence and existence of bad blood between accused and one principal witness creates doubt about petitioner involvement in crime. Hence, conviction is set aside. Adikanda Muni v. State of Orissa, (1995) 8 OCR 536 (Ori).

Grievous injuries caused by sharp-edged weapon. It was held that there was no need of corroboration by independent witnesses. Bihari Lal v. U.T. Chandigarh, (1994) 2 CC Cases 331 (P&H).

Acquittal—Doubtful evidence. On the date of occurrence, according to the prosecution witnesses, it was raining and the dead body was kept under the Chappar. The prosecution failed to obtain an explanation from the Autopsy Surgeon as to how he had opined that death had taken place 3-4 days prior to his post-mortem examination although he examined the dead body within 41 hours from the time of occurrence.

It is furthermore evident that all the prosecution witnesses stated that all the accused persons had fired from the respective firearms. According to them at least 7 shots were fired; 3 shots had hit the person of the deceased. If that be so, more than one gun must have been used. Appellant, as noticed hereinbefore, is said to have been fired a shot from his licensed gun. Its use, however, has not been established by the prosecution as the report of the ballistic expert is silent in that regard. The empties which were found at the spot had not been examined by any ballistic expert. The empties which were recovered from the dead body were not matched with the gun allegedly used.

We may notice that two metallic pellets were recovered from the dead body. Empties had not been shown to the expert; even the attention of the Autopsy Surgeon was not drawn thereto. Although shots were said to have been fired from a distance of 2-3 paces, no blackening or charring was found to be present. If the shots were fired from a close range, it was expected that blackening and charring would have been noticed by the Autopsy Surgeon at the entry point.

Learned Sessions Judge and the High Court, with respect, failed to apply their mind as regards the time of lodging of the FIR. The Head Constable attached with Police Station who was examined as PW-3 before the learned trial Judge stated that the FIR was lodged at 4.45 a.m. and he had recorded the same immediately. According to him, the special reports were sent by 6.00 a.m. through a constable. However, the Investigating Officer did not say so. As we have noticed hereinbefore, he, in his evidence, categorically stated that he had recorded the FIR at 9.30 p.m. No evidence had been brought on records to show that investigation had started on 16.08.1979. A site plan was prepared but it does not bear any date. The prosecution has not explained as to why the FIR was sent to the Court of Chief Judicial Magistrate on 17.08.1979 and why the dead body was not sent for post-mortem on 16.08.1979 itself.

The High Court, in our opinion, committed a serious error insofar as it proceeded on the basis that shots fired by the appellant caused the fatal injury. The High Court did not analyze the evidence on record as to who caused the other firearm injuries. If the prosecution witnesses, who were said to be the eye-witnesses, were to be believed, 6 out of 7 accused could not have been acquitted and particularly those who had direct enmity with Mewa Ram and his sons. Although Suraj Pal (PW-2) son of Ganga Singh denied the suggestion that scribe of the FIR who was admittedly a resident of different village (said to be at a distance of 10 kilometers) from the place of occurrence, the prosecution had not explained as to why he was not examined. If he was present in the village it was expected that he also had witnessed the occurrence, as his son was said to be an eye-witness. It is difficult to believe that in case of this nature the investigation did not start immediately. Inquest report, preparation of seizure memo etc., which were to be carried routinely, and as such there was no reason as to why they were not brought on record.

While examining the original records of the case, we have noticed that some interpolations have made in the records maintained at the Police Station. The High Court, in our opinion, committed a serious error in drawing an inference that appellant had rightly been held guilty for commission of offence of murder of Ram Rakshpal as animosity between the parties was proved. It failed to notice that there is nothing on record to show that the appellant had been bearing any animosity against the deceased. On the other hand, other accused were having animosity towards the deceased. Mewa Ram and his family.

Furthermore, the High Court did not pose unto itself the correct question, namely, the time of lodging the FIR, i.e., whether it had in fact been lodged at 4.45 a.m. or 4.45 p.m. If it was lodged at 4.45 p.m. the entire edifice of the prosecution case would fall to the ground.

Delay in lodging the First Information Report has a great importance in a case of this nature. Enmity between the parties stands admitted. The prosecution case proceeded on the basis that immediately after occurrence and after shifting the dead body under a shed, the informant got the First Information Report scribed by Ganga Sahai and immediately thereafter proceeded on foot to the Police Station. If this part of the story is correct, the prosecution's case would not be subject to much doubt. But if the scribe of the First Information Report was residing in a separate village which is 10 kms. away from the place of occurrence, and it was at that place the FIR was scribed whereafter PW-1 arrived at the Police Station, it would impossible for him to reach by 4.30 in the morning. The prosecution did not examine the scribe of the First Information Report although his son has been examined as an eye-witness. If he was residing at the relevant time in the village where the incident had taken place, it was expected that either he had witnessed the occurrence or had reached the place of occurrence immediately after the accused fled away. The prosecution, therefore, should have made attempts to clarify this anomaly.

Indisputably, there exists a discrepancy as regards timing of the lodging of the First Information Report PW-3, Head Constable, testified that it was lodged at 4.45 a.m. Records, however, show otherwise. In the FIR, it is shown to have been lodged at 4.45 p.m. As noticed hereinbefore, there are some interpolations but according to the Investigating Officer, he recorded the First Information Report at 9.30 p.m. on 16.08.1979.

Moreover, if the Fist Information Report was lodged early in the morning, there was absolutely no reason as to why the investigation did not start immediately thereafter. If Head Constable is correct that the copies of the First Information Report had been sent to all concerned including the Court, there was absolutely no reason as to why the same would reach the Court on the next date. We also fail to comprehend as to why the dead body was sent for post mortem only on 17th instead of 15th itself. The seizure memo does not contain any date. The original inquest report is not on record.

Furthermore, except the appellant all other accused have been acquitted. The High Court, therefore, did not rely upon the prosecution case in its entirety. While doing so, unfortunately, the High Court did not consider these vital aspects of the matter which were crucial for determination of the issue. Om Prakash vs. State of U.P., AIR 2009 SC 944 : 2009 (1) Crimes 183 (SC) : 2008 (17) SCR 475 : 2008 (13) JT 466 : 2008 (16) Scale 158 : 2009 Cr LJ 782.

It is true that witness/PW. 6 admitted in her cross examination that she was residing in Gorakhpur in connection with the education of her minor daughter. But she also stated that she very often comes to her village to look after cultivation of lands and household affairs. It is in her evidence that she came to the village about 4-5 days prior to the occurrence. It is an admitted fact that deceased, husband of are real brothers and residing in the same house in the village, but in separate portions. Bichari Singh has interest in the lands possessed by the family in the village. There is nothing improbable in witness frequently visiting the village and staying in the house at her own convenience. It is relevant to note that the Investigating Officer stated that he visited the spot and examined witness/PW. 6 along with other witnesses. Therefore, there is no reason to disbelieve her statement that she was very much present on that fateful night at the scene of occurrence.

Learned Senior Counsel further contended that absence of injuries on the person of witness makes her presence at the scene of occurrence doubtful. This aspect of the matter has been clearly explained by PW. 6 who was subjected to very rigorous cross examination that when she came out of her room to see as to what was happening, the appellants Moti Lal and Virendra Singh after spotting her, chased her and she ran away and re-entered into her room and bolted the doors from inside. Two shots were fired aiming at her out of which one hit the door and the other went through the window hitting the inner wall of the room. She saved herself from those two shots aimed at her. We do not find any reason to disbelieve her evidence in this regard as to how she escaped from getting injured in the melee. Moti Lal vs. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 2010 SC 281 : 2010 (1) SCC 581 : 2009 (4) Crimes 276 (SC) : 2009 (14) JT 569 : 2009 (14) Scale 323 : 2009 (7) Supreme 632 : 2009 (8) SLT 668.

6. Proof of house trespass and attempt to rape.—Where the statement of the prosecutrix is self contradictory, self-destroying and non-confidence inspiring and there is delay in lodging the FIR and the finding of the semen in vaginal swab of the prosecutrix or blood traces or semen on her clothes is of no help to the prosecution because of the fact that at the relevant time she was admittedly sleeping with her husband and as the accused are married persons the finding of semen in their pants is also of no help to the prosecution, the charges against the accused are unsustainable. Shobha Ram v. State, (2004) 4 Crimes 165 (HP).

7. Delay in lodging—When not fatal.—No doubt lodging of a First Informing Report at the earliest possible opportunity is desirable. But, the Courts cannot also ignore the ground realities that the relatives of the deceased would give priority to the treatment of a severely injured person. All attempts would first be made to save his life. The action on the part of the prosecution witnesses, in our considered opinion, in giving priority to the treatment to the injured was wholly justifiable. Padmanaban vs. State, AIR 2010 (SC) 47 : 2009 (10) JT 172 : 2009 (12) SCR 252 : 2009 (10) Scale 526 : 2009 (6) SLT 751 : 2009 (5) Supreme 763.

2. Private defence.—Accused entered office room of deceased, threw chilly powder into his eyes, picked up an iron hammer as well as a brick lying there and assaulted deceased in presence of complainant, a worker engaged by deceased. Trial Court finding evidence cogent, credible, recorded conviction of appellant. The question in such a case would be a question of assessing the true effect of the prosecution evidence, and not a question of the accused discharging any burden. Where the right of private defence is pleaded, the defence must be a reasonable and probable version satisfying the Court that the harm caused by the accused was necessary for either warding off the attack or for forestalling the further reasonable apprehension from the side of the accused. The burden of establishing the plea of self-defence is on the accused and the burden stands discharged by showing preponderance of probabilities in favour of that plea on the basis of the material on record.

When the factual scenario is examined in the background of the principles set out above, the inevitable conclusion is that the appeal is without merit, deserves dismissal which we direct. Arun vs. State of Maharashtra, 2009 CrLJ 2065 : 2009(2) Crimes 6(SC) : 2009(4) SCC 615 : 2009(3) Scale 803 : 2009(4) JT 78 : 2009(3) SLT 220.

Sec. 457. Lurking house-trespass or house-breaking by night in order to commit offence punishable with imprisonment.—Whoever commits lurking house-trespass by night, or house-breaking by night, in order to the committing of any offence punishable with imprisonment, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, and shall also be liable to fine ; and if the offence intended to be committed is theft, the term of the imprisonment may be extended to fourteen years.

STATE AMENDMENT

Section 457 of the principal Act, shall be renumbered as sub-section (1) of that section and after sub-section (1) as so renumbered, the following sub-section shall be added namely, :—

> "(2) Whoever commits lurking house-trespass by night or house-breaking by night in any building used as a place of worship in order to the committing of the offence of theft of any idol of icon from such building, shall notwithstanding anything contained in sub-section (1), be punished with rigorous imprisonment which shall not be less than three years but which may extend to ten years and with fine which shall not be less than five thousand rupees :
> Provided that the court may, for adequate and special reasons to be mentioned in the judgment impose a sentence of imprisonment for a term of less than three years."

7. Appeal.—Where there was appeal to Sessions Judge dismissed for want of prosecution maintaining conviction and sentence—Revision petition was filed on sole ground that order was passed without any jurisdiction as there was no provision in Cr PC. It was held that there is absolutely no provision in the Code of Criminal Procedure, to decide the criminal appeal in the manner in which it has been disposed of by the Sessions Judge (Forest). In a case of the present nature the lower appellate court was required to dispose of the appeal on merit and not in a summary manner as has been done in the present case. The order under reference, as such, requires to be set aside as the same has been passed by not properly exercising the jurisdiction vested in the Court of appeal. In view of the foregoing reasons, the present revision petition is accepted and the order under reference passed by the Sessions Judge (Forest) is quashed. The appeal is sent back for disposal to the lower appellate Court on merit, as referred to above. Rajinder Singh v. State of H.P., (1994) 2 SLJ 1669 at p. 1670.

8. Acquittal.—Prosecution version was that petitioner arrested from the house of the informant allegedly kept for the whole night after apprehension by informant—Same was belied by informant's statement that petitioner was present in house and FIR was substituted by another one which vitiates the prosecution case as well as the conviction based thereon. It was finally held that prosecution case has not been proved beyond all reasonable doubts hence, entitled to be acquitted. Hunuman Kanhar v. State of Bihar, (1995) 1 East Cr C 676 (Pat).

The judgment of the learned Magistrate is based on correct appreciation of evidence and the reasons which have been assigned by the learned Magistrate are reasonable and plausible and cannot be entirely and effectively disloged or demolished and the Court sitting and hearing appeal against acquittal would not like to disturb the order of acquittal merely on flimsy ground. State of Rajasthan v. Vinod, 2002 Cri LJ 1308 (Raj.).

In FIR it was alleged that accused armed with axe broke open door and entered inside living room and caused injuries to the complainant on his leg. The witnesses did not corroborate FIR. It was held that there was no justification to believe that accused entered the room at midnight only to commit an offence under Section 323 and his conviction was not proper. *Mohd. In absence of any evidence on record that accused caused grievous hurt to complainant while committing lurking house trespass, accused was liable to be convicted under Section 457, IPC and under Section 459, IPC. Hasmal Ullah Khan v. State of Uttaranchal, 2005 Cr LJ 2266 (Uttar) : 2005 (53) All Cri C 920 : 2005(3) East Cri C 244.

Common intention. In the present case, the question is whether the appellant shared any common intention and if so, with whom? Neither there is any charge nor evidence against A-4 that he committed the murder of the deceased in furtherance of common intention shared with A-4. The trial Court as well as the appellate Court found A-4 guilty for the offence punishable under Sec. 302 IPC only. There is no third person involved with whom the appellant could have shared common intention. PW-1 and 2 in their evidence did not attribute any overt or covert act as against the appellant. No circumstances were brought on record from which it could be reasonably inferred that the appellant shared common intention with A-4 and in turn, A-4 committed the murder of the deceased in furtherance of such common intention. There is no evidence that there was a prior meeting of mind developed at the spur of moment and A-4 shot the deceased in furtherance of such common intention resulting in death.

According to the evidence of PW-1 the appellant did not indulge in any overt or covert act except be present at the scene of occurrence. It is true that both of them ran away from the scene of occurrence after A-4 shot the deceased with a pistol in his hand. Even if it be accepted that he was armed with a pistol no reasonable inference could be drawn on the proven facts that he shared common intention with A-4 to commit the offence of murder.

In the present case, there is no evidence of any prior meeting of minds. We know nothing of what they said or did before the attack. It is in the evidence that on being asked by the deceased as to why they entered the house and as to what they wanted: A-4 immediately shot the deceased with the pistol in his hand. Obviously, this was an impulsive act of A-4 and both the Courts rightly found that he was guilty for the offence of committing murder of the deceased punishable under Sec. 302 IPC but the High Court committed a serious error in holding the appellant vicariously liable for the criminal act of A-4.

It is nowhere suggested that appellant indulged in any overt or covert act as such based on which any inference of common intention could be drawn. There is no dispute with the proposition that the common intention can develop and manifest itself at the spur of moment. But the question for consideration is, whether there is any evidence in the present case to indicate that in fact such a common intention was developed between appellant and A-4 and in furtherance of such shared common intention A-4 committed the murder of the deceased. The evidence of PW-1 and PW-2 does not suggest that any such common intention developed on the spur of moment leading to the murder of deceased by A-4. In the circumstances, it would be unsafe to convict the appellant for the offence punishable under Sec. 302 with the aid of Sec. 34 IPC.

In the present case, the FIR shows that at about 9.15 P.M. the appellant and A-4 entered the house and stood there; on seeing them, the deceased got up from his chair and moved towards them "asking them who are they" whereupon A-4 shot the deceased causing bleeding injury due to which deceased fell down, the appellant and A-4 ran away towards the street. The contents of the FIR and the evidence of PW-1 and PW-2 read together make it clear that the appellant was not armed as erroneously held by the High Court. In the circumstances, it would be impossible to draw any inference that A-4 committed murder in furtherance of common intention shared by the appellant. In fact, neither there is any charge nor any evidence even as against A-4 that he shared common intention along with the appellant to commit murder of the deceased. There must be more than one person to share common intention to commit criminal act for attracting the applicability of Sec. 34 IPC. It is clear from the evidence that A-4 did not act conjointly with the appellant in committing the murder. If he did not act conjointly with the appellant, the appellant could not have acted conjointly with A-4.

On consideration of the evidence and the material available on record and in the light of the legal principles referred to hereinabove, it is clear that the accusations made against the appellant making him constructively liable for the criminal act of murder committed by A-4 with the aid of Sec. 34 IPC were not established. So far as the present appellant is concerned, there is no evidence whatsoever available on record to show sharing of any common intention.

We accordingly affirm the judgment of the trial Court acquitting the appellant of the offence punishable under Sec. 302 read with Sec. 34 IPC. Consequently, the judgment of the High Court convicting the appellant under Sec. 302 read with Sec. 34 IPC is set aside. We however, affirm the conviction of the appellant under Sec. 457(1) IPC. The trial Court as well as the High Court convicted the appellant for the offence punishable under Sec. 457(1) IPC and sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for a period of 2 years and to pay a fine of Rs. 500/-, in default, to further undergo rigorous imprisonment for a period of 6 months. No effort has been made before us challenging the conviction of the appellant under Sec. 457(1) IPC. We, accordingly, confirm the conviction and sentence of the appellant under Sec. 457(1) IPC imposed by the Courts below. The appellant however, had already undergone the sentence. Since there is no appeal preferred by the State as against the judgment of the High Court acquitting the appellant of other charges the same is not interfered with. Arun vs. State, AIR 2009 SC 1256 : 2008 (15) SCC 501 : 2008 (12) JT 571 : 2008 (17) SCR 279 : 2008 (16) Scale 361 : 2009 (1) Supreme 355 : 2009 (1) SLT 492.

The expression "at the time of committing house-breaking by night" must be limited to the time during which the criminal trespass continues which forms an element in the house-trespass, which is itself essential to house-breaking and cannot be extended so as to include any prior or subsequent time. 2 PR 1862 Cr ; see also 38 Ind Cas 997. The provisions of the section must be construed strictly and it is not contemplated that where the principal action done by accused persons is no more than a mere attempt to commit the offences of lurking house-trespass or house-breaking, the section should be applicable. 8 All 649 : AWN 1896, 253 ; see also AIR 1924 All 1032 : 1934 Cr C 1339 : 1934 ALJ 1160. Section 460 makes those, who join the person who voluntarily causes or attempts to cause death or grievous hurt while committing lurking house-trespass or house-breaking at night, liable to enhanced punishment for their own conduct of simply committing such lurking house-trespass by night or house-breaking by night. The person who actually acts in that manner will not be liable for that conduct of his under Section 460, IPC, but will be liable under other section making that conduct an offence. 1953 All LJ 501 : 1953 All WR (HC) 596 : 1954 Cr LJ 168 : AIR 1954 All 99. Where K and two others trespassed into the house of the deceased at night with the purpose of committing robbery and though their object could not have been initially to kill any person during the commission of the robbery, one or the other of them caused the death of the person in the house. It does not apply to the case of a single individual who alone commits lurking house-trespass and during such commission causes or attempts to cause death or grievous hurt to any person, Ibid. Section 460 can be invoked only if from the evidence it is clearly possible to conclude that before the commission of the lurking house-trespass by night or house-breaking by night, the offenders did not have common intention of committing anything other than above mentioned offences and that if during the course of the commission of such an offence one of the person causes death or grievous hurt to any person then only every person jointly concerned in committing lurking house-trespass by night or house-breaking by night shall be guilty of an offence under Section 460. AIR 1954 Mad 152 : ILR 1954 Mad 602 : (1953) 2 MLJ 526 : 1954 Cr LJ 115. Where the charge against the accused was that he with others committed house-breaking by night and that he being with others at the time of committing the offence voluntarily caused the death of the accused, a separate conviction under Section 304, Pt. OF OFFENCES RELATING TO DOCUMENTS AND TO [1][x x x] PROPERTY MARKS

Sec. 463. Forgery.—Whoever makes any false document or part of a document, with intent to cause damage or injury, to the public or to any person, or to support any claim or to cause person to part with property, or to enter into any express or implied contract, or with intent to commit fraud or that fraud may be committed, commits forgery.

1. Forgery.—The offence of forgery committed when, by a counterfeit, a document is falsely made to represent some other supposed genuine document for a purpose of deception. The relation which this offence bears to the general system of penal law may be thus stated. In most affairs of importance the intentions, assurances or directions of men are notified and authenticated by means of written instruments. Upon the authenticity of such instruments, the security of many civil rights, especially the right of property, frequently depends ; it is therefore of the highest importance to society to exclude the numerous frauds and injuries which may obviously be perpetrated by procuring a false and counterfeit written instrument to be taken and acted on as genuine. In reference to frauds of this description, it is by no means essential that punishment should be confined to cases to actually accomplished fraud. The very act of falsely making and constructing such an instrument with an intention to defraud or deceive is sufficient according to the acknowledged principles of criminal jurisprudence to constitute a crime. The false making is in itself part of endeavour to defraud, and the existence of criminal intent is clearly manifested by an act done in furtherance and in part execution of that intention.

An instrument which is false or untrue only because the facts which it states are false and untrue, differs from a forged document. Where the instrument is forged, as when a certificate purporting to be signed by a public servant was not in truth signed by him, a person to whom it is shown is deceived, because he is induced to suppose that the fact certified by the public servant whose certificate it purports to be ; and he is deceived in that respect, whether the fact certified is true or false. If on the other hand, such a certificate is in truth signed by the public servant whose-name it bears, the document is not forged, although the fact certified is falsely certified ; for here the person receiving the certificate is deceived not by being falsely induced to believe that the public servant had accredited the document by his signature, but by the officer having falsely certified the fact. The document may therefore be forged, although the fact which it authenticates is true. And the document may be genuine, although the fact stated in it is false. .Where money or other property is obtained dishonestly by a document of the latter description, that is, where it is false merely containing a false statement, or representation, the offence of cheating but not of forgery, is committed.

[1] The words "trade or" Omitted by Act 43 of 1950, Section 135 and Sch. (w.e.f. 25.11.1959).

"When a document, whether it is a forged document or a genuine document, containing false statements, is fabricated in order that it may appear in evidence in a judicial proceeding or in a proceeding taken by law before a public servant, and with the intention to mislead the Judge or public servant, the offence defined by Section 192, of fabricating false evidence is committed."—Morgan and Macpherson, 410.

In order to constitute forgery, the first essential ingredient is that the accused should have made a false document. 1980 All Cr R 22 ; AIR 1962 All 582 ; 1972 BLJR 193 ; 1983 All LJ 793 ; (1963) Supp 2 SCR 585 (where there is a benefit to the deceiver but no corresponding loss to the deceived second condition fulfilled). AIR 1965 Raj 9.

Making part of a document—The "making of a part of a document" must be the making of a part of a false document. Not only the intention but also falsity of the document should be proved. AIR 1929 All 396 : 1929 ALJ 592 : 30 Cr LJ 408 : 115 Ind Cas 135. The definition of forgery under this section includes the making of a part of a document also, and provided the requisite intention is present, a scribe of a document can be brought within its purview and be convicted of the offence. 13 Mys LJ 182 : 39 Mys HCR 1140.

The mere making of a false document with intent referred to in the section constitutes an offence under Section 463. (1978) 1 Malayam LJ 240. Certificates forged to get admission in college cannot be described as a valuable property. AIR 1981 SC 297 : 1980 Cr LJ 1345 ; AIR 1981 SC 80 : 1983 Cr LJ 1312 ; AIR 1981 SC 217 : 1980 Cr LJ 1345. (Accused can be convicted under Section 465, read with Section 471). On the proved facts the complaint would be covered by Section 464, Cl. (1) though it did not come within the offence charged. 1983 Cr LJ 691 : AIR 1983 SC 352 : 1983 (1) Crimes 989.

In absence of any evidence to prove any wrongful gain or loss as a result of such forgery is not record nor any proof of false preparation dishonestly or fraudulently, no forgery is committed by accused. Ranjit Singh v. State of U.P. 1993 (30) All Cr C 660.

Sections 465 and 468, IPC, are covered under any offence described in Section 463 and without any written complaint of court, accused could not have been prosecuted under Sections 465, 468 and 471, IPC. Narendra Patra v. State of Orissa, (1995) 8 OCR 274.

What constitutes forgery.—To constitute a forgery, the false document must be made with intent to cause damage or injury to the public or to any class of the public or to any community. Forgeries of public securities of the records of Courts of justice, of registers kept by public servants of documents certifying that a person has the requisite medical skill and fitness to act as a matter mariner, or has competent medical skill, etc. or of such documents as are mentioned in illustrations (j) and (k) of the following section seem to come within these words. A beat constable who writes in his note book the signature of headman, whose village he has not visited, does not commit thereby the offence of forgery. UBR (1897-1901) Vol I, 356. The term "forgery" is used as a general term in Section 463, Indian Penal Code, and that section is referred to in a comprehensive sense in Section 195 of the Cr PC. AIR 1926 Oudh 485 : 1 Luck 523 : 3 OWN 614 : 27 Cr LJ 969 : 96 Ind Cas 521 ; see also AIR 1925 Lah 266 : 5 Lah 550 : 26 Cr LJ 537 : 85 Ind Cas 377. It is not forgery where the act is done under the honest belief that the party doing it has a right to do although in point of fact he had no such authority. 52 Cr LJ 1480 : 5 AI Cr D 816 : AIR 1951 Cal 581 : 6 DLR (Cal) 154. There can be no forgery within the meaning of Section 463, unless there is a dishonest and fraudulent preparation of a false document or part thereof. 1965 MLJ (Cr) 463; 1983 : All LJ 393 : 1983 All WN 376 (for the meaning of the expression of making false document').

"Or to any person".—Besides such documents as tend to a public damage or injury every false document, by whatever name it is called, which is intended to cause damage or injury to an individual is included. An idol being a judicial person and therefore, a person within the definition under the Code, the signature of an idol constitutes the offence of forgery. AIR 1944 Mad 77 : ILR 1944 Mad 685 : 211 IC. 528 : 45 Cr LJ 405.

2. Intent to defraud.—The expression "intent to defraud" implies conduct coupled intention to deceive and thereby to injury ; in other words "defraud" involves two conceptions, namely, deceit and injury to the person deceived, that is infringement of some legal right possessed by him but not necessarily deprivation of property. 42 Cr LJ 215 : 90 Ind Cas 534 : 36 Cr LJ 1574. In order to constitute, in point of law, an intent to defraud, there must be possibility of some person being defrauded by the forgery, or there must be a possibility of some person being not only deceived by injured by the forgery. AIR 1930 Pat 271 : 1930 Cr C 458. The term "fraud" as used in the Penal Code, is used in its ordinary and popular acceptation. Hence, a man, who deliberately makes a false document with false signatures, in order to shield and conceal an already perpetrated fraud is himself acting with intent to commit fraud. 15 Bom LR 708 : 14 Cr LJ 518 : 20 Ind Cas 998. Giving a false name and address in a certificate of the purchase at the time of purchasing fire-arms is an offence under this section. 20 CWN 326 : 43 Cal 421 : 32 Ind Cas 661 : 17 Cr LJ 69. In order to constitute forgery the document need not be intended to support a claim or a false title. If, in order to support a true claim or a genuine title a false document is created, it is forgery. 96 Ind Cas 850 : 27 Cr LJ 994 : AIR 1926 Mad 1078 ; AIR 1943 Sind 46 : 43 Cr LJ 905 : 202 IC 773. In forgery, the intent to defraud is essential. AIR 1926 Cal 224. If a man intends to gain an unfair advantage by deceitful means and uses a false document, for that purpose his conduct is fraudulent. 27 Cr LJ 994. Mere ante-dating document is not forgery unless there is dishonesty or fraud on the part of the alleged forgerer. 98 Ind Cas 111 : 27 Cr LJ 1263 : 8 Pat LT 104. An intent to commit fraud involves an intent to cause injury. It involves something more than mere deceiving. Where a process-server forged names on the notices with a view to save himself from the consequences of his neglect of duty or to save himself troubles ; Held, that it did not amount to intent to commit fraud. AIR 1935 Rang 203 : 156 Ind Cas 888 : 36 Cr LJ 1025 : 1935 Cr C 747. Where a person becomes a party to antedating a document his intention is obviously to make the act appear to have been done at a time when it was not done and by force of such a falsity to give it an operation which in truth and justice it ought not to have ; the act therefore amounts to forgery. 13 Mys LJ 182. Unless there is an element of fraud, the making of a false document does not amount to a forgery because one of the intent contemplated by Section 463 is that false document must be made with intent to commit fraud or that fraud may be committed. AIR 1957 Cal 222 : 1957 Cr LJ 442. On the fact of this case, the intention of the accused at the time when he made out the false documents was to short circuit the alternative procedure open to him and receive the money without going through the expense and trouble involved therein. On the said facts, there is no doubt that he had made the false documents with an intention to cause wrongful gain to himself. In that event he had secured an uneconomic advantage ; in the former case (i.e., after obtaining a succession certificate, at considerable expense and trouble) he made false documents dishonestly and in the latter case (i.e., he can after the expiry of three months from the date of death of the holder satisfy the post master-general about his sole heirship in case the current value of this certificate does not exceed Rs. 5000/-) fraudulently by saving the trouble. In either case, he is guilty of offence under Section 463. AIR 1963 SC 1577 : (1963) 2 Ker LR 169 : 66 Punj LR 60 : 1963 (2) Cr LJ 439 ; but in cases reported in AIR 1961 Guj 117 : (1961) 2 Cr LJ 76 and in AIR 1983 SC 252 : 1983 (1) Crimes 989, it was held that can be no conviction for forgery, as a false document as defined in Section 464, IPC, has not been made. See 1978 All Cr R 461 : 1978 Cr LJ (NOC) 294.

"Or to support any claim for title".—Even if a man has legal claim or title to property, he will be guilty of forgery, if he counterfeits documents in order to support it. Any false document purporting to create, extend, transfer, or otherwise to support, a right or alleged right is included.

"Or to cause any person to part with property".—As order or requests for the payment of money or delivery of goods, etc.

"Or to enter into any express or implied contract".—"As when a man is induced to employ another in a certain capacity by forged documents respecting his qualifications". Morgan and Macpherson ; see also 21 All 113

Intention to cause damage or injury on the basis of a false document is must to constitute offence of forgery. Suresh Lalchand Lulla v. Neela Sudhish Talpade, 1992 Mah LJ 1455.

3. Claim.—The term "claim" is not limited in its application to a claim to property only. AIR 1929 Lah 152 : 10 Lah 545 : 30 Cr LJ 900 : 33 PLR 724 : 118 Ind Cas 315.

The word "claim" is not limited to a claim to property. A written certificate is "property' within the meaning of this section. 15 All 210 : AWN 1893, 96 ; see also 25 Cal 512 ; 30 Cr LJ 900.

4. Illustrative cases.—The mere fact that the person forged signature of another person in a plaint, to enable him to file the plaint in time to save case being barred by limitation will not make the act of the person fraudulent. AIR 1930 Pat 271 : 1930 Cr C 258. An entry of excess payment in a muster roll would not make the muster roll a forged document. A false certificate of not very great importance is not a forgery as it is not made on affidavit. 27 ALJ 591 : 115 Ind Cas 135 : 30 Cr LJ 408. Creation of false document for supporting even a true or genuine title is forgery. 96 Ind Cas 850 : 27 Cr LJ 994 : AIR 1936 Rang 389 : 37 Cr LJ 1059. Using false document for giving unfair advantage is fraudulent within the meaning of Section 25. 96 Ind Cas 850 : 27 Cr LJ 994 : AIR 1926 Mad 1072. A false copy of a forged document by an authorised maker is a false document. But if he has no such authority then he does not commit the offence of making the false copy. 20 Cr LJ 142 : 4 Pat LJ 16 : 49 Ind Cas 174. Where a Sub-Inspector keeps persons under surveillance to extort confession and alters diary to save himself from the consequence of his act offence does not amount to forgery. 34 Bom LR 1090 : AIR 1932 Bur 545. In the above case Baker J., said ; "The alteration could not be held to have been made either dishonestly or fraudulently. As dishonesty involves wrongful gain or wrongful loss, obviously it does not apply to the present case when no pecuniary question arises. The element of fraud is also absent. There is no question in the present case of any loss being caused to the Deputy Superintendent of Police who was inquiring into the case by the fact of this diary being altered and pages substituted for the original. It would be a straining of language to say that because he was thereby likely to be led to come to a wrong conclusion as to the guilt of the Sub-Inspector or that there was a probability that the proceedings against him might not result in his conviction, this would therefore render the alteration of the document fraudulent within the meaning of the Penal Code". In the same case Broomfield J., said ; "The element of injury or risk of injury to an individual or to the public is an essential ingredient in the definition of forgery". Imitation closely copied from disputed writing cannot be proper standard of comparison. 144 Ind Cas 301 : 1933 Cr C 452 : 34 PLR 694 : 34 Cr LJ 714 : AIR 1933 Lah 608. The heir of the deceased holder of the Post-office National Savings Certificate, which was deposited as security with the Controller of Rationing put his signature and got the securities transferred was guilty of forgery within the meaning of the section. AIR 1963 SC 1577.

In the case on hand as per the allegations made in the complaint the petitioner/accused forged the signatures of the opposite party No. 2/ complainant in the respective petitions filed in the said title suit and falsely induced the Court to believe that those were the genuine signatures of the complainant and obtained the order by adopting such deceitful means causing loss to the party concerned against whom the interim order of injunction was obtained. Prima facie offence of forgery was held to have been made out. Ashok Kumar Yagnik v. State of WB, 2005 Cr LJ 3620 (Cal) : 2005(4) All Cri LR 758 : 2005 Cal Cri R 348.

5. Essentials of the offence.—The definition of the offence of forgery declares the offence to be completed when a false document or false part of a document is made with specified intent. The questions are : "(1) is the document false ? (2) was it made by the accused ? (3) was it made with the intent to defraud ?" If all these questions are answered in the affirmative, the accused is guilty. 1 Weir 548 ; 10 CLR 181. The falsity as well as the fact that it was forged with one of the intents mentioned in Section 463, has to be proved. 19 Cr LJ 343 : AIR 1918 Pat 36. In order to constitute an offence of forgery under this section the document must be made dishonestly or fraudulently. But dishonestly or fraudulently are not tantological. Fraudulently does not imply deprivation of property or an element of injury. In order to be fraudulent, there must be some advantage on the one side with a corresponding loss on the other. Each case has to be decided on its own facts. AIR 1944 Lah 308 : 46 Cr LJ 341 : 217 IC 387 ; AIR 1932 Bom 545 : 34 Cr LJ 557. An intent to commit fraud involves an intent to cause injury. AIR 1936 Rang 203 : 36 Cr LJ 1025. Every forgery postulates a false document either in whole or in part however small. A piece of blank paper is not a document. Procurement of a piece of paper or of writing instrument or of a scribe cannot separately or by combination be regarded as making a false document. 52 Cr LJ 1480 : 5 Al Cr D 816 : AIR 1951 Cal 581 : 6 DLR (Cal) 154. For the purpose of charge of forgery it is immaterial that the document contains lecitals, which may be false in other respects if it is not the case of the prosecution that the signature appearing in the document is not that of the person whose signature it purports to be. ILR 1951 Nag 714 : 1952 Cr LJ 98 : AIR 1952 Nag 12. In order that a document should be false document within the meaning of the first part of Section 464, IPC, it must appear that it was made with the intention of inducing the belief that such document was made by or by the authority of one who did make it or give such authority. In other words, the document must purport to have been made, signed or sealed by a person who did not in fact make it. ILR 1958 Andh Pra 917 : 1958 MLJ (Cr) 854 : (1958) 2 An WR 489 ; see (1981) 1 WLR 148 : (1977) 1 Malayam LJ 180 ; AIR 1968 Mad 399 ; 1968 Cr LJ 1282 ; AIR 1969 SC 724 : 1969 Cr LJ 194 (for what constitutes forgery).

To bring the case within clause (1) of Section 464, Penal Code, it is necessary to establish that the accused intended to induce a belief that a document was made, signed, sealed or executed by the authority of a person who did not make sign seal or execute it or that it was made, signed, sealed or executed at a time where it was not so done. 1964 Raj LW 501 : AIR 1965 Raj 9.

The word "property" is used in the Code in a much wider sense that the expression movable property. AIR 1962 SC 1821 : (1962) 2 Cr LJ 805.

6. Forgery committed for the purpose of defending one-self.—The fabrication of a false document, or the use of such document by an accused person for the sole purpose of defending himself, does not fall within the range of the sections dealing with forgery. 25 All 31.

Sec. 464. Making a false document.—[1][A person is said to make a false document—

First.—Who dishonestly or fraudulently

(a) makes, signs, seals or executes a document or part of a document,

(b) makes or transmits any electronic record or part of any electronic record;

(c) affixes any [2][electronic signature] on any electronic record;

(d) makes any mark denoting the execution of a document or the authenticity of the [2][electronic signature], with the intention of causing it to be believed that such document or part of a document, electronic record or [2][electronic signature] was made, signed, sealed or executed by or by the authority of a person by whom or by whose authority he knows that it was not made, signed, sealed or executed, or at time at which he knows that it was not made, signed, sealed or executed, or

Secondly.—Who, without lawful authority, dishonestly or fraudulently, by cancellation or otherwise, alters a document in any material part thereof after it has been made or executed either by himself or by any other person, whether such person be living or dead at the time of such alteration ; or

Thirdly.—Who dishonestly or fraudulently causes any person to sign, seal execute or alter a document, knowing that such person by reason of unsoundness of mind or intoxication cannot, or that by reason of deception practised upon him, he does not know the contents of the document or the nature of the alteration.

(a) A has a letter of credit upon B for Rs. 10,000, written by Z. A, in order to defraud B, adds a cipher to the 10,000 and makes the sum 1,00,000, intending that it may be believed by B that Z so wrote the letter. A has committed forgery.

(b) A, without Zs authority affixes Z's seal to a document purporting to be a conveyance of an estate from Z to A, with the intention of selling the estate to B and thereby of obtaining from B the purchase money. A has committed forgery.

(c) A picks up a cheque on a banker signed by B, payable to bearer, but without any sum having been inserted in the cheque. A fraudulently fills up the cheque by inserting the sum of ten thousand rupees. A commits forgery.

(d) A leaves with B, his agent ; a cheque on a banker, signed by A, without inserting the sum payable and authorizes B to fill up the cheque by inserting a sum not exceeding ten thousand rupees for the purpose of making certain payments. B fraudulently fills up the cheque by inserting the sum of twenty thousand rupees. B commits forgery.

(e) A draws a bill of exchange on himself in the name of B without B's authority, intending to discount it as genuine bill with a banker and intending to take up the bill on its maturity. Here, as A draws the bill with intent to deceive the banker by leading him to suppose that he had the security of B and thereby to discount the bill, A is guilty of forgery.

(f) Z's will contains these words—"I direct that all my remaining property be equally divided between A, B and C." A dishonestly scratches out B's name, intending , that it may be believed that the whole was left to himself and C. A has committed forgery.

(g) A endorses a Government promissory note and makes it payable to Z or his order by writing on the bill the words "Pay to Z or his order" and signing the endorsement. B dishonestly erases the words "Pay to Z or his order", and thereby converts the special endorsement into a blank endorsement. B commits forgery.

(h) A sells and conveys an estate to Z. A afterwards, in order to defraud Z of his estate executes a conveyance of the same estate to B, dated six months earlier than ' the date of the conveyance to Z, intending it to be believed that he had conveyed the estate to B before he conveyed it to Z. A has committed forgery.

(i) Z dictates his will to A. A intentionally writes down a different legatee from the legatee named by Z, and by representing to Z that he has perpared the will according to his instruction, induces Z to sign the will. A has committed forgery.

(j) A writes a letter and signs it with B's name without B's authority, certifying that A is man of good character and in distressed circumstances from unforeseen misfortune, intending by means of such letter to obtains aims from Z and other persons. Here, as A made a false document in order to induce Z to part with property. A has committed forgery.

(k) A without B's authority writes a letter and signs it in B's name certifying to A's character, intending thereby to obtain employment under Z. A has committed forgery inasmuch as he intended to deceive Z by the forged certificate. and thereby to Induce Z to enter into an express or implied contract for service.

Illustrations

(a) A signs his own name to a bill of exchange. intending that it may be believed that the bill was drawn by another person of the same name. A has committed forgery.

(b) A writes the word "accepted" on a piece of paper and signs it with *Z*s name. to order that B may afterwards write on the paper a bill of exchange drawn by B upon Z, and negotiate the bill as though it had been accepted by Z. A is guilty of forgery and if B, knowing the fact, draws the bill upon the paper pursuant to A's intention B is also guilty of forgery.

(c) A picks up a bill of exchange payable to the order of a different person of the same name. A endorses the bill in his own name. intending to cause it to be believed that it was endorsed by the person to whose order it was payable. here A has committed forgery.

(d) A purchased an estate sold under execution of a decree against B. B, after the seizure of the estate, in collusion with Z, executes a lease of the estate, to Z at a nominal rent.and for a long period and dates the lease six month prior to the seizure, with intent to defraud A. and cause it to believed that the leave was granted before the seizure. B, though he executes the lea*see* in his own name. commits forgery by antedating it.

(e) A, a traders, in anticipation of insolvency, lodges effect with B for A's benefit. and with intent to defraud his creditors and in order to give a colour to transaction writes a promissory note binding himself to pay to B a sum for value received, and antedates the note, intending that it may be believed to have been made before A was on the point of insolvency. A has committed forgery under the first hand of the definition.

Explanation 2.—The making of a false document in the name of a fictitious person, intending it to be believed that the document was made by a real person, or in the name of a deceased person, intending it to be believed that the document was made by the person in his lifetime. may amount to forgery.

1. Scope.—Assertion of a false claim in a document—It does not constitutes an offence under Section 464. B.R. Gupta v. Kaushal Kumar, 1995 (XXII) Cr LT 297 (P&H).

2. Fraudulently.—An intent to defraud implies something more deceit. The advantage intended to be secured or the harm intended to be caused need not have relation to property or be such as is implied in the term "dishonestly" but it must be something to which the party perpertrating is not entitled either legally or equitably. There can be no intention to defraud where no wrongful result was intended or could have arisen from the act of the accused. 28 Ind Cas 102. To constitute a document as a false document, it must be shown that it was made with such an intention as is implied in the term fraudulently or dishonestly. A mere intention to deceive is not sufficient. 1 Weir 542 ; see also 22 Bom 768 : 28 All 358 ; 13 M 27 ; 6 CWN 382 ; 2 JG 11 ; LBR (1894-1900), 437 ; 25 Cal 512 ; 22 Cal 513 ; 12 Bom 515 ; 9 WR Cr 20 : 6 PR 1895 Cr. Absence of intention to cause it to be believed that the document was signed by another person negatives offence. 52 Cal 47 : 29 CWN 447 : 26 Cr LJ 401. The term "fraudulently" means that there must be (1) deception actual or intended (2) and injury or risk of injury though not to any person. AIR 1954 MB 73 : ILR 1953 MB 204 : 1954 Cr LJ 88 (tenant forged the signature of the landlord, because without his consent the Electricity department would not give electricity).

3. Making a false document.—A person makes a false document who dishonestly or fraudulently signs with the intentions of cause it to be believed that the document was signed by a person by whom he knows it was not signed. 7 Ind Cas 179. The "meaning" of a document or part of a document, does not mean "writing" or "printing" it, but singing or otherwise executing it. The falsity (of a document) consists in the document or part of a document, being signed or sealed with the name or seal of a person, who did not in fact sign or seal it 8 CLR 572 ; 1964 MLJ (Cr) 395 (the word "make" in Section 464, does not mean any other than "makes" that is to say "creates or brings" into existence). Such a document must be dishonestly or fraudulently made.

signed or executed by the person who is charged and it must be made with the intention of causing it to be believed that such document or part of a document was made, signed, sealed and executed by or by the authority of a person, by whom or by whose authority he knows that it was not made, signed, sealed or executed. 17 CWN 354. "Makes" means "creates" or brings into existence". AIR 1928 Lah 781. Where only some of intended executants signs a deed, yet the document is made. 19 Cr LJ 177 : 41 M 589 : 43 Ind Cas 593. The "making of a part of a document" must be the making of a part of a false document and in the making of a part of a document not be proved. 27 ALJ 592 : 115 Ind Cas 135 : 30 Cr LJ 408. Where a Mahommedan executes a Kabinnama in favour of his alleged wife with a view to claim her property, he is not guilty of making a false document. AIR 1924 Cal 336 : 23 Cr LJ 723 : 69 Ind Cas 451. A person flying in blank columns in the "Store Issue Order" knowing it to be signed not by the officer authorised to sign and issue it, but another who has forged that officer's signature, commits forgery within the meaning of Section 464, IPC. 6 DLR (Pat) 13 : 5 AI Cr D 97 : AIR 1951 Pat 86 : 52 Cr LJ 771. A person to be guilty of forgery under the first clause of Section 465, must make a false document or part of a false document and merely cause it to be made. 1953 Cr LJ 1826 : AIR 1953 Cal 798. Antedating a document to defeat the provisions of an Act in the absence of proof of that this was done dishonestly or fraudulently regarding the persons affected by it, is not making a false document under Section 464. AIR 1962 All 582 : 1962 All Cr R 285 : 1962 (2) Cr LJ 722 ; see also AIR 1968 Mad 349 : 1968 Cr LJ 1282 ; AIR 1963 SC 1572 ; 1963 (2) Cr LJ 434 (non-economic advantage to the deceiver and non-economic loss to the deceived).

The fundamental pre-requisite of Section 464, is that the document must be fraudulent in the sense that it has direct tendency to injure the interest of a third person. AIR 1966 Pat 154 : 1956 Cr LJ 647 (proceeding under Section 144, Cr. P. Code).

A document is made falsely if the signature, seal or act is false or in other words, if the signature is affixed by a person other than the person whose signature it purports to be. AIR 1979 SC 1012 : 1979 Cr LJ 890 ; see also 1969 Ker LT 1 ; 1980 Cr LJ (NOC) 87 ; see also AIR 1983 SC 352 : 1983 Cr LJ 691 (conviction fails because no circumstance to prove the charge of forging Nikah form of marriage) ; see also AIR 1963 SC 1577 : 1963 (2) Cr LJ 434.

Under Section 464 of the Indian Penal Code, a person is said to make a false document who dishonestly or fraudulently makes, signs, seals or executes a document or part of document. The reasoning of the High Court, therefore, that the bail order without the signature cannot be said to be a document thereby not attracting the provision of section 464 of the Indian Penal Code is wholly unsustainable. State of U.P. v. Ranjit Singh, 1999 Cri LJ 1830 (SC) : AIR 1999 (SC) 1201 : 1999(2) SCC 617 : 1999(1) JT 626 : 1999(1) Scale 580.

4. Document.—The word 'document' has an extensive meaning assigned to it. The word seems to include everything done by the pen, by engraving, by printing or otherwise, whereby it is made on paper parchment, wood, other substance or representation of words of their equivalents addressed to the eye. Every writing used for the purpose of authentication, if falsely made, is a 'false document',—as in the case of a will by which a testator signifies his intentions as to the disposition of his property,—or of a certificate by which a public servant assures others of the truth of any fact,—or of a warrant by which a Magistrate signifies his authority to arrest an offender. And the words 'false document' include not only writings, but also false seals, stamps, and all the other visible marks of distinction by which the truth of fact is authenticated. But where the falsehood consists in a mark of distinction falsely testifying to the quality or genuineness or to the ownership of any article, it seems to be a false trade or property mark and to be properly dealt with under the penal provisions contained in the latter part of this Chapter. The most obvious way of making a false document is to write or print, as the case may be, the whole in imitation of a real or imaginary original. But to write a signature is the same in law as to write the entire instrument. And the signature may be made by a mark as well as by writing the letters of a name. It can make no difference whether the whole document is false or whether it is merely false in the material part by which the fraud or deceit is to be effected. If the document is falsified for a dishonest or fraudulent purpose, it is a false document".—Morgan and Macpherson, 412.

5. Or by the authority of a person, etc.—"If a man writes another's name by his authority, it is not course of forgery. And if he has no authority in fact, but acting in good faith 'without fault or carelessness believes himself to be authorised, he does not commit the offence. But if he is authorised to do a certain thing, as to fill up with a certain sum a blank cheque signed by A [see Illustration (d)] and he departs from his authority by dishonestly inserting a larger sum, he commits forgery".—Morgan and Macpherson, 413, If A signs for B and B is present at the time, A must be held to authorised to do so. AIR 1935 All 410 : 154 Ind Cas 517 : 1935 ALJ 651 : AIR 1935 All 410. Under Section 464, what is essential is that intention of making it to be believed that it was signed by or by the authority of some one else, while he knows that it was not so made or authorised by that person. AIR 1955 Andh 82 : (1954) 2 MLJ (Andh) 103 : 1954 Cr LJ 769.

6. Or at a time at which he knows that it was not made, etc.—As when the document is made to bear a wrong date for some dishonest purpose. These words are to be read distributively and are not governed by the proceeding words "by or by authority act". Rat Un Cr C 722. Elements to be proved in a case of forgery are (i) that the document was not executed on the date on which it purports to have been and (ii) that the parties who executed it did so with fraudulent intent. AIR 1928 Rang 117 : 6 Rang 49 : 29 Cr LJ 599 : 109 Ind Cas 679. No forgery is committed by mere antedating a document unless it acts or would act prejudicially to another. AIR 1926 Pat 535 : 5 Pat 573 : 8 PLT 133 : 27 Cr LJ 1308 : 98 Ind Cas 252. Change of date in a document by accused prejudicial to his cases, is not dishonest though improper. 20 Cr LJ 573 : 17 ALJ 972 : 52 Ind Cas 161.

7. Forged document.—Every forged or fabricated document is not a forged document. It must satisfy both Sections 464 and 463. An entry in the credit-side which does not impose any liability on the debtor, and as such would not cause any damage is not forgery. AIR 1923 Lah 11 : 3 Lah 373 : 25 Cr LJ 337 : 77 Ind Cas 225. Kabuliyat of a past period prepared subsequently by unsfractuary mortgage to defraud mortgagor as the amount paid by mortgagor's tenant are forged documents. 26 Cr LJ 1115 : 88 Ind Cas 283. It is one thing to hold that because an account book does not appear to have been kept in the regular course of business and does not contain entries that it ought to have contained, therefore, it cannot be acted upon in order to convict a person whose name appears therein as having received money, and it quite a different thing to hold as a positive fact that the account book is forged. In the absence of any other evidence, no prosecution should be allowed to be launched on the basis that it was forged. 98 Ind Cas 56 : 27 Cr LJ 1240 : AIR 1927 Pat 47. A document is forged if it is a false document. Under this section, the making of a false document is not restricted to the act of signing it. The section is wide enough to cover the making of a document, which really means creating or bringing into existence provided the act of signing or making the document is done dishonestly or fraudulently and with the intention of causing it to be believed that the document or any part of it was made, signed, sealed or executed by the authority of a person. 1963 (2) Cr LJ 36 : AIR 1963 Pat 262 see : AIR 1965 Raj 9 (section does not apply where a public officer knowingly making false entry). Not a case of forgery on the facts of the case as proved. (1981) 2 Malayam LJ 176.

Accused himself need not forge a document by his own-hands but can be executed through a skilled person. K.P.S. Kanakaj v. State, 1995 MLJ (Cri) 674.

8. Clause (2).—"A document which has once existed as a genuine document, may become "false document" by reason of some addition, or omission or by obliteration of some material part. Vide Illustrations (a), (f) and (g). But a complete cancellation or obliteration of a document, like the destruction of a document is an offence specially made punishable by a latter Section 477, and which seems not to fall within this definition".—Morgan and Macpherson, 414.

Attesting a document knowing it to be forged, the accused was held to be guilty of abetment. AIR 1942 Mad 92 ; AIR 1961 Guj 117 : 1961 (2) Cr LJ 76.

9. Clause (3).—"A document may be false document, although it is signed or executed by the person by whom it purports to be signed or executed. This happens, where a person [as in the case given in the Illustration (f) is fraudulently induced to execute a will, or a material alteration is made in the writing without his knowledge ; for in such a case, although the signature is genuine, the instrument is false because it does not truly indicate the testator's intention, and it is forgery of the person, who fraudulently caused such will to be signed, for he made it to be the false instrument which really is".—Morgan and Macpherson, 415.

10. Explanation (1).—"It is a false document if the offender makes it falsely in the name of any other person, although that name happens also to be the offender's own name. A man, who makes a promissory note in his own name without any false description or addition and with an honest intention, if he afterwards use or attempts to use the note pretending that it is signed by the another person of the same name does not, by this false representation, make the promissory note a "false document". It was genuine document when he signed it and does not become false by his subsequent use of it for the purpose of cheating. In such cases, as those mentioned in the Illustrations (d) and (e), a man signs or execute, a document in his own name which is false in a material part and is calculated to induce another to give credit to it as genuine and authentic where it is false and deceptive. A man who having conveyed land afterwards for fraudulent purpose executes a document, purporting to be a prior conveyance of the same land intends by this false document to obtain credit by deception, the document purporting to have been made at a time earlier than the true time of execution".—Morgan and Macpherson, 416 ; See 1967 Ker LJ 689.

11. Explanation (2).—"If a man forges the name of another person, real or factitious or the name of a deceased person, he makes a false document if the document is made for a fraudulent or dishonest purpose. It is nonetheless false, because the name used is a mere fiction".—Morgan and Macpherson, 416 ; see 1967 Ker LJ 689.

12. Cases.—Entering previous payments on the back of a bill is not forgery. 8 CWN 278. A charge of forgery cannot lie against a person who is not the writer of a document or who does not sign the forged name. 17 CWN 354. The prisoner made certain entries in his ledger, which consisted of rough loose sheets, showing that certain sums of money had been paid to the prosecutor, which in fact, had not been repaid. Held, that the prisoner was guilty of forgery. 1 Ind Jur N 46. The alteration of a date in a bond is an alteration in a material part thereof, although the alteration is not made for the purpose of saving limitation. 14 PR 1881 Cr ; see also 21 WR Cr 41 ; 23 WR Cr 49 ; 4 LBR 46 ; LBR (1893-1900), 266 ; 13 Cal 349 ; 77 Ind Cas 423 ; AIR 1918 Pat 36 ; 41 M 589 ; 43 Ind Cas 828 ; 3 Lah 373.

13. False description.—It would be going too far to hold that, whenever the executant of a document attaches a false description of his name, he comes within the purview of this section. But a false description may make a document a forgery when it is found that the accused, by giving such a false description, intended to make out or wanted it to be believed that it was not be that executing the document but a fictitious person. 19 MLJ 78.

14. Conviction.—Accused getting it prepared through skilled person. It can be convicted under Section 464. K.P.S. Kanakaraj v. State, 1995 MLJ (Cr) 674 (Mad).

15. Alteration of.—To attract the second clause of Section 464 there has to be alteration of document dishonestly and fraudulently. So in order to attract the clause "secondly" if the document is to be altered it has to be for some gain or with such objective on the part of the accused. Merely changing a document does not make it a false document. Therefore, presuming that the figure "1" was added in date in document in question, as was done in this case, it cannot be said that the document became false for the simple reason that the appellant-accused had nothing to gain from the same and she was not going to save the bar of limitation. Parminder Kaur vs. State of U.P. and Anr., AIR 2010 SC 840.

1. Scope.—When there is no attempt to show that a document has been prepared of a person other than the one who has prepared it, there is no offence of forgery. State of Gujarat v. M.J. Makwana, (1992) 1 Guj LR 764.

2. Intention.—This section cannot apply except where the dishonest or fraudulent intent embraced in the definitions given in Section 464, is made out and such intention is not made out merely by establishing, however, clearly that, under conceivable circumstances, a particular error might be used to support some false claim. Rat Un Cr C 201. In cases under this section, the immediate and more probable intention of an accused is that to which the Court must look and not some more remote and less probable intention. AWN 1892, 243 ; see also 16 Cr LJ 76. Clear proof is required in a case of forgery. It should be clearly shown upon whom the fraud was committed. UBR (1892-1896) Vol 1, 279. In order to convict a person under this section the prosecution has to prove beyond reasonable doubt that he knew that the document was forged. 47 Cr LJ 317 : 222 Ind Cas 620.

3. Evidence.—"The facts which show that the document is a false document within Section 464, must be proved also that the accused made the false document : and lastly, the guilty intention of accused to cause damage or injury, or to support a claim, etc. It is not a necessary part of this offence that any damage or injury should bar actually suffered or that any fraud should be perpetrated. Nor is a using or uttering the forged document a part of this offence. From the intention that the false document should deceive others into a belief that it is genuine it may generally be inferred that there is an intention to damage or injure. It will not avail the offender to show that he meant to pay the promissory note or other forged document when it became due, or even that he actually paid it and so prevented damage or injury".—Morgan and Macpherson.

1. Elements of fraud or dishonesty.—The elements of fraud or dishonesty, as explained in the Penal Code, must be present in the mind of the accused to bring his case under this section. 28 Cal 434. Tampering with the proceeding of Court to obtain favourable decision amounts to fraud. AIR 1943 Pat 343 : 45 Cr LJ 292. Alteration of name and age in an education certificate and using it as genuine with a view to obtain the official appointment constitute, in the absence of a satisfactory explanation, offences under Sections 466 and 471. 2 LBR 216. This section is not intended to apply to cases of persons, whose duty it is to make, entries in a public book, and who knowingly make a false entry, but to cases where a certificate or other document is forged by some unauthorised person with a view to make it appear that it was duly issued by a public officer. 7 CLR 356. The section seeks to treat forgery or certain specified kind of document as an aggravated form of offence. The expression "to institute or defend a suit or take any proceedings therein, or to confess judgment" has evidently to be associated with these words authority preceding the expression. 1964 Raj LW 501 : AIR 1965 Raj 9.

[1] Ins. by Act 21 of 2000, sec. 91 and Sch. I (w.e.f. 17-10-2000).

The essential ingredient are that the accused forged a document which is specified in this section. AIR 1966 All 510 : 1966 Cr LJ 1112 ; see also 1970 Pat LR 309.

Three disputed letters purporting to have been written by the Minister to officers of the department recommendatory in nature, were sent to handwriting expert whose report showed they were written by the accused. Held, that letters were forged with the intention of using them for cheating and accused actually used them for cheating he was clearly guilty of offence under Section 468. No charge under Section 466. 1987 Cri LJ 933 (All).

The expression "wrongful" in Section 23 of the Code means prejudicially affecting a party in some legal right. The words "gaining wrongfully or losing wrongfully" need not be confined only to the acquisition or to the actual deprivation of property. In this view of the matter if by virtue of preparing a false document purporting it to be a document of a Court of justice and by virtue of such document, a person who is not entitled to be released on bail, could be released then, undoubtedly, damage or injury has been caused to the public at large and, therefore, there is no reason why under such circumstances the accused who is the author of such forged document cannot be said to have committed offence under Section 466 of the Indian Penal Code. Then again under Section 464, whoever dishonestly or fraudulently makes a document or part of a document can be said to have made a false document. A person is said to do a thing fraudulently if he does that thing with intent to defraud but not otherwise. The expression 'defraud' involves two elements namely "deceit" and "injury" to the person deceived. "Injury" is something other than economic loss and it will include any harm whatever caused to any person in body, mind, reputation or such others. A benefit or advantage to the deceiver will almost always cause loss or detriment to the deceased where, therefore a document is prepared with the intention to deceive and by means of deceit, an advantage is obtained then there is a fraud and judged from this stand point the preparation of a forged bail order by the utilisation of which the person concerned obtained an advantage of being released deceiving the Courts and the society at large cannot be said to have made the document fraudulently, thereby attracting Section 466 of the Indian Penal Code. State of U.P. v. Ranjit Singh, 1999 Cri LJ 1830 (SC) : AIR 1999 (SC) 1201 : 1999(2) SCC 617 : 1999(1) Scale 580 : 1999(2) Supreme 291.

2. Cases.—Where the accused, a public servant, who committed criminal breach of trust made false entry in account book and was convicted of an offence under Sections 409 and 466 of the Indian Penal Code, and it appeared that the entry was not made with intent to defraud, held, that the conviction under Section 466 of the Indian Penal Code, must be set aside. 8 PLR 1904 : 1 Cr LJ 41. A rough sketch to serve as practice for a finished forgery but which has not been used and which could not be used in its then form, would not, apparently, come under the provisions of Section 466 or Section 467. 16 Bom 165. The real and substantial test by which to determine whether several offences are so connected as to form the same transaction depends on whether they are so related to one another in point of purpose, or as to cause and effect or as principal and subsidiary acts as to constitute one continuous action, irrespective of the persons by whom the same may have been committed, 17 OC 276 : 15 Cr LJ 643 : 25 Ind Cas 843. There is nothing illegal in a person being convicted for forgery and also for using a forged instrument as genuine one. The offence are separate and if both are committed separate convictions are legal. AIR 1925 Nag 162 : 77 Ind Cas 825 : 25 Cr LJ 473. Where a person was convicted under Section 406, IPC, for having committed forgery and made fraudulent use of a forged document altering the dates on the copying sheet of an appeal application, the lower Courts sentenced him to seven years' imprisonment on each count. Held, on appeal that separate sentences against the accused under Sections 466 and 401, IPC, read with Section 466, IPC, are illegal and the sentence under the latter section was set aside. 3 Mys LJ 38 ; see also 86 Ind Cas 993 : 26 Cr LJ 929. A man who signs a document makes himself responsible for it as he was the original drafter of it. It is no defence that some body else wrote it out and he only signed it. If a legal practitioner signs a document he will be deemed to have read it and would be responsible for its contents. He would be responsible for any dishonest or untruthful statement in it and it is no answer to say that it was done in the interests of the client, or that he did not read it before signing it. AIR 1927 All 45 : 48 All 442 : 27 Cr LJ 1373 : 98 Ind Cas 493. Whoever forges a document purporting to have been made by a public servant in his official capacity, is guilty of an offence under Section 466, IPC. (1967) 40 Mys LJ 880.

The forgery must be definitely proved. 1980 All LJ 1067 : 1971 Cr LJ 1364 (suspicion is not enough) ; see AIR 1954 SC 322 (accused cannot be held guilty of forgery for bringing existence a document bearing antedate on a later date).

The forgery need not be for the purpose of instituting or defending a suit. AIR 1965 Raj 9 : 1965 (1) CrLJ 213. No prima facie case was made. AIR 1983 SC 194 : 1983 CrLJ 348.

3. Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by a Magistrate of the first class.

4. Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused), as follows :—

That on or about the......day of...at......you forged the document, exhibit.......which purported to be a record (or proceeding of (or in) a Court of Justice, etc.) and you thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 466 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

The mere antedating a document is not forgery, but if it is shown that the antedating had or could have had any operation to the prejudice of any one it will be forgery. 5 Pat 573 : 98 Ind Cas 252. The forger using the forged document can be punished only under Sections 467 and 471. AIR 1925 Nag 440 : 26 Cr LJ 1275 : 88 Ind Cas 1051.

The word "defraud" involves two elements, namely deceit and injury to the person deceived. Injury is something other than the economic loss that is deprivation of property, whether movable or immovable, or of money and it will include any harm whatever caused to any person in body, mind, reputation or such others. Even in those rare cases where there is a benefit or advantage to the deceiver, but corresponding loss to the deceived the second condition is satisfied. 1963 SCD 802 : (1963) 2 SCJ 559 : (1963) 2 Cr LJ 434 : AIR 1963 SC 1572. Section 467 can not be said to be a minor offence as compared with Section 468. 1980 UP (Cr) LR 267. A mutation in revenues remedy can not be said to be such as kind that creates, title. (1980) 1 Chand LR (1) 196 ; (1974) 76 Punj LR 780 ; (1977-79) Punj LR 502.

Accused executed deeds bona fide believing that suit property belongs to him. He had not misrepresented himself as someone else or authorised by someone else.

When a person executes a document conveying a property describing it as his, there are two possibilities. The first is that he bona fide believes that the property actually belongs to him. The second is that he may be dishonestly or fraudulently claiming it to be his even though he knows that it is not his property. But to fall under first category of 'false documents', it is not sufficient that a document has been made or executed dishonestly or fraudulently. There is a further requirement that it should have been made with the intention of causing it to be believed that such document was made or executed by, or by the authority of a person, by whom or by whose authority he knows that it was not made or executed. When a document is executed by a person claiming a property which is not his, he is not claiming that he is someone else nor is he claiming that he is authorised by someone else. Therefore, execution of such document (purporting to convey some property of which he is not the owner) is not execution of a false document as defined under Section 464 of the Code. If what is executed is not a false document, there is no forgery. If there is no forgery, then neither Section 467 nor Section 471 of the Code are attracted. Md. Ibrahim & Ors. vs. State of Bihar & Anr., 2010 (2) CrLJ 2223 (SC).

The accused, working as Sub-Postmaster, was alleged to have withdrawn money from depositor's account by forging signature of the depositor in withdrawal form. It was observed that there was no reliable evidence which threw a doubt on expert's evidence. Apart from of expert evidence of co-employees also stated that writings were the accused. Evidence was corroborated by the statement of accused himself. It was held that charged against accused under Sections 467 and 471, were fully established. 1987 Cri LJ 612 (Ori).

Three disputed letters purporting to have been written by the Minister to officers of the department, recommendatory in nature, were sent to handwriting expert whose report showed they were written by accused. Held, that letters were forged with the intention of using them for cheating and accused actually used them for cheating he was clearly guilty of offence under Section 468. Offence under Section 467, IPC, aggravated form of offence described in Section 466—Elements of forgery was set out—Signing or sealing of the document completes the execution and 'Forgery' and 'making of false documents' explained. Dhirubhai v. Tulsi, (1995) 8 OCR 22 (Ori).

3. Proof of handwriting.—Where the document alleged to have been forged purports to be in the handwriting of the accused and he has not denied it to be his handwriting but has on the other hand stated that the handwriting and the signature on the document appear to be like his handwriting and signature and where the handwriting expert after comparing the signature of the accused with some of his admitted signatures stated definitely that the signature is that of the accused, the Court is justified in holding that the document is in the handwriting of the accused. 1936 OWN 1066 : 1936 Cr C 990 : AIR 1936 Oudh 381.

4. Cases.—Where a person sells a note purporting by an endorsement on it to have been sold to his firm, and it is proved that it was not sold to his firm by the persons named in the endorsement, it must be held that the person sells the note knowing or having reason to believe it to be forged, and is liable to be punished under Sections 467 and 471 of the Penal Code. 15 Cal; 269 ; see also AIR 1943 Pat 227. 14. Offence of forgery.—On scrutiny of the evidence it was found that origina accused No. 3-Advocate had admitted his signature in Form A below the certificate. Th handwriting expert also opined that the signature of Advocate below the certificate a 'Q' was in the handwriting of the Advocate i.e. original accused No. 3 the handwritin expert also opined that the signature on the document is from A identified as 'Q' wa not that of the petitioner. In other words, the signature of the petitioner was forged Only because handwriting expert could not positively say that the forgery wa committed by either accused No. 1 and 2 or , 3 the acquittal of all the accused person of all the charges in this case was not justified. Mallinath Ambanna Shedjale, v Purushotam vasudeo Somshetty and others, 2002 Cri LJ 506 Bom. : 2001 All MR (CRI 1324 : 2001(3) Bom LR 712.

15. Framing of charge.—The reliance of the High Court on the ruling was totall uncalled for as the factual situation in that case was entirely different than the on prevalent here in this case.

We were also taken through the report of the Central Vigilance Commission. Par 7.21 of the said report reads as under:

> "The allegations against Shri V.K. Bhutiani are held proved only to the extent of making a faulty judgment in recommending the proposal for the PC limit as pointed out in para 6.61 and the article of charge is held proved only to the extent as various allegations have been substantiated or otherwise as mentioned in the assessment portion of the report."

Thus, it cannot be held that the Central Vigilance Commission had given a clea chit to the respondent-accused.

In our opinion, though the report of the Central Vigilance Commission may be relevant factor, it cannot be held to be "be all or end all" of the matter for prosecutin the accused persons of such serious offences.

We do not find any such reasoning having been given in the present case by th High Court. On the other hand, a perusal of the impugned order suggests that the Hig Court did not examine the material available by way of charge-sheet and has proceede to follow the ruling of P.S. Rajya We are, therefore, satisfied that this appeal has to b allowed by setting-aside the impugned order passed by the High Court. Accordingly, th appeal succeeds. The impugned order is set-aside and the matter is remanded. Now th rial Court shall proceed with the trial since the charges have already been framed. All ne contentions in law and fact shall be available to the respondent as well as the rosecution. This judgment shall not be treated to be an expression of opinion on our art. C.B.I. vs. V.K. Bhutiani, 2009 (10) SCC 674 : 2009(13) Scale 64.

16. Transfer of criminal case—Apprehension of miscarriage of justice.—The nalysis of all the materials, the transfer of the case as sought for, at this stage, is not nly against the interest of prosecution but also against the interest of other accused ersons, the prosecution witnesses and the convenience of all concerned in the matter. or the sake of repetition, it is relevant to mention that when the complainant was xamined as PW. 56, he disowned his complaint and asserted that it (complaint) was ot filed by him though he admitted his signature found therein. Further, all important itnesses particularly government officials informed that what they said before the ourt alone is absolute truth and they were forced to make false statement at the time f registering the complaint. As stated earlier, similar transfer petition which was filed efore the High Court ended in dismissal and it became final. We are satisfied that the residing officer of the Special Court is conscious of his power and how to conduct fair rial at the same place. We are also of the opinion that the public prosecutor cannot act n the dictates of the State Government, he has to act objectively as he is also an fficer of the Court. The Special Court is free to assess whether prosecution has stablished its case. We have already pointed out that a mere allegation that there is pprehension that justice will not be done in a given case alone does not suffice. onsidering the totality of all circumstances, we are of the opinion that in a secular, emocratic Government, governed by the rule of law, the State of Punjab is responsible or ensuring free, fair and impartial trial to the accused, notwithstanding, the nature of he accusations made against them. In the case on hand, the apprehension entertained y the petitioners cannot be construed as reasonable one and the case cannot be ransferred on a mere allegation that there is apprehension that justice will not be done.

Taking into consideration the entire facts and circumstances of the case and the naterials on record, we are of the view that the petitioners have not made out a case hat they have reasonable apprehension of not availing justice in the State of Punjab. Ve would like to clarify that we have not expressed anything on the merits neither of he prosecution case nor the defence of the accused and whatever said in the earlier aragraphs are applicable only for disposal of transfer petitions and ultimately it is for he Special Court to decide the issues in the light of the material placed and in ccordance with the law. The inevitable conclusion is that both the transfer petitions iled by the petitioners deserve to be dismissed. Amarinder Singh vs. Prakash Singh adal, 2009 (6) SCC 260 : 2009 (3) Crimes 174 (SC) : 2009 (7) JT 187 : 2009 (7) Scale 82 : 2009 (9) SCR 194 : 2009 (5) Supreme 95 : 2009 (4) SLT 415.

Forgery though a substantive offence, partakes the nature of an attempt. It is usually an act done in furtherance of some criminal design. If it can be proved that the purpose of the offender in committing the forgery is to obtain property dishonestly, or if his guilty purpose comes within the definition of cheating (Section 136), he is punishable under the present section. The intention of the forger may be fairly inferred in most cases from the contents of the forged document".—Morgan and Macpherson.

3. Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not comp-oundable—Triable by any Magistrate of the first class.

4. Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you. (name of the accused) as follows :—

That on or about the.......day of......at......you forged a certain document, to wit..... (describe it) intending that it shall be used for the purpose of cheating, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 468 of the Indian Penal Code, and within by cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

5. Offence of conspiracy.—When money drawn from Provident Fund Account deposited in bank in account of another accused who withdrew it and petitioner only introduced another accused in bank account, conduct of petitioner does not attract offence of conspiracy. Narendra Kumar Bhardwaj v. State of Bihar, 1991 (1) Crimes 817 (Pat).

When there was criminal conspiracy by Government servant—Recovery established and there was acceptance of gratification offence was made out— Conviction was fully justified. Narain Lal Nirala v. State of Rajasthan, 1994 SCC (Cri) 1404 : AIR 1994 (SC) 118 : 1993 Cri LJ 3911 (SC).

6. Quashing of proceedings.—The accused were charged of conspiring to purchase the units at a price below than market value. The petitioner in this case is principal of the technical institution which was functioning in premises taken on hire from accused person. There was no prima facie evidence to establish conspiracy in sale of units nor there was proof about involvement of petitioner in the said transaction. The Court held that the proceedings are liable to be quashed. Saroj Kumar Sahoo v. State, 2003 Cr LJ 1872 (Orissa) : 2003(3) Crimes 517 : 2002(94) Cut LT 65.

7. Cheating and forgery.—It is true that the disclosure of material information is necessary for processing an Application seeking grant of Arms Licence to an applicant and the record shows that the petitioners have disclosed almost the entire details of pending criminal cases and have submitted application form for issuance of Arms Licence for protection of their persons and property as well as their family members and, therefore, it could not be believed that there was any deliberate concealment of information about the solitary criminal case. Since, the petitioners have honestly made disclosure of pending criminal cases against them in the application form, and adequate information about its correctness was available with the District Magistrate in the form of recommendation of the Superintendent of Police, therefore, it could not be said that either the petitioners have made concealment of the material information or the Investigating Authority was unaware of the fact of pending cases against the petitioners.

Therefore, in the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case, it appears that there was no criminal intention of the petitioners in not disclosing about the remaining criminal case, pending against them while submitting the application form and as such, no case of concealment of material information is even prima facie made out. Since the record fails to demonstrate that there exist a criminal intention even in the mind of the alleged wrong doer, therefore, it could not be said that they have committed either of the offences. The elements of cheating require that one has to deceive or induce any person, fraudulently or dishonestly to deliver any property to any person, or to consent that any person shall retain any property, or intentionally induce the person so deceived to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit if he were not so deceived, and that act or omission causes or likely to cause damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property and since, all these mandatory elements are missing, it cannot be said that even a prima facie case exist against the petitioners for being tried in relation to the alleged commission of offence in terms of Sections 420, 467, 468 & 471 of IPC. Ummed Singh & Ors. vs. State of M.P., 2010 (2) CriLJ 1257 (MP).

8. Sections 409 and 468 and Prevention of Corruption Act.—If the Special Judge has no jurisdiction to try an offence under Section 5(2) of the P.C. Act for want of valid sanction, he lacks jurisdiction to take cognizance of allied offences and to try the same, in view of the specific powers on a Special Judge with limitations specified in Section 7(3) of the Amendment Act. Where there is no valid sanction for prosecution under Section 5(1)(c) read with Section 5(2) the conclusion becomes inevitable that, the orders of conviction recorded against the accused in respect of the charges under Sections 409 and 468 of the IPC and the sentences passed against him thereunder cannot be sustained and thus, are liable to be set aside. Duryodhan Patra vs. State of Orissa, 2010 (3) CrLJ 2505 (Orissa).

9. Framing of charge.—The reliance of the High Court on the ruling was totally uncalled for as the factual situation in that case was entirely different than the one prevalent here in this case.

We were also taken through the report of the Central Vigilance Commission. Para 7.21 of the said report reads as under:

> "The allegations against Shri V.K. Bhutiani are held proved only to the extent of making a faulty judgment in recommending the proposal for the PC limit as > pointed out in para 6.61 and the article of charge is held proved only to the extent as various allegations have been substantiated or otherwise as mentioned in the assessment portion of the report."

Thus, it cannot be held that the Central Vigilance Commission had given a clean chit to the respondent-accused.

In our opinion, though the report of the Central Vigilance Commission may be a relevant factor, it cannot be held to be "be all or end all" of the matter for prosecuting the accused persons of such serious offences.

We do not find any such reasoning having been given in the present case by the High Court. On the other hand, a perusal of the impugned order suggests that the High Court did not examine the material available by way of charge-sheet and has proceeded to follow the ruling of P.S. Rajya We are, therefore, satisfied that this appeal has to be allowed by setting-aside the impugned order passed by the High Court. Accordingly, the appeal succeeds. The impugned order is set-aside and the matter is remanded. Now the trial Court shall proceed with the trial since the charges have already been framed. All the contentions in law and fact shall be available to the respondent as well as the prosecution. This judgment shall not be treated to be an expression of opinion on our part. C.B.I. vs. V.K. Bhutiani, 2009 (10) SCC 674 : 2009(13) Scale 64.

10. Conviction.—Sufficient material.—Conspiracy for drawing scholarship on the basis of fictitious post metric students of Government Junior College. Accused, officials of Social Welfare Department. Prosecution able to prove its case of conspiracy amongst the accused persons in drawing money twice over in respect of students on the basis of fictitious names. Y. Venkaiah vs. State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 2009 SC 2311 : 2009 CrLJ 2834 : 2009(12) SCC 126 : 2009(4) Scale 154 : 2009(4) JT 432.

1. Scope.—It is necessary for the prosecution when the charge is under this section, to show that the accused knew or had reason to believe the document to be forged and used it fraudulently or dishonestly. AIR 1940 Pat 486 : 41 Cr LJ 427 : 187 I.C. 256. To constitute use as contemplated by Section 471, it is not necessary that the forged document should be used as evidence in a Court. It is sufficient that it used in order that it may ultimately appear in evidence or used dishonestly or fraudulently. 1961 BLJR 369 : 1961 (2) Cr LJ 169 ; 1963 SCD 186 : (1963) 3 SCR 376 : 1963 (2) Cr LJ 698. Where it was held that what Section 471, requires is the use as genuine of any document which he knows or believes to be a forged document ; it does not lay down that such use can only occur when the original itself is produced, for the section does not require the production of the original. The mere fact that the suspicions of a Pleader ought to have been aroused by the sight of the document is not prima facie evidence that he knew or had reason to believe the document to be forged. AIR 1940 Nag 360 : 41 Cr LJ 753. The use of forged documents contemplated by this section is such use as causes wrongful gain or wrongful loss. That is to say, the section applies to the case of a person, who appears before some other person, or before a Court, with a document, and endeavours to induce that person or Court to do some act which he or it would not do, if the document was known to be a forgery. 11 CWN 838 : 5 CLJ 454, 1 Weir 550. Deprivation of property actual or intended, is not a necessary ingredient of the pretext to defraud in this section. 5 CWN 897. A copy of a document alleged to be false does not come within the definition of a "false document" and a conviction under Section 471, upon such copy, cannot stand. 20 MLJ 534 ; but see AIR 1932 Sind 90 : 1932 Cr C 530 :33 Cr LJ 452. Where it has been held that production of certified copy of forged document with necessary knowledge and intention is offence under Section 471. The production by a part of a document which he is bound by law to produce cannot by itself constitute a user of document by him. 22 MLJ 181. The filing of a forged document in a Court with the intention of relying on it at the trial of a case, amounts to an attempt to use such document, though the document itself was not actually used, and the person filing it may be prosecuted for offences under Sections 511 and 471. 13 Ind Cas 99. Where a person give his pleader a copy of a false document for the purpose of using it in the trial of his suit, held, that he was guilty of an offence under this section and not merely of an attempt to commit that offence. 26 Cr LJ 863 ; see also 19 CWN 125 ; 5 Cr LJ 233 ; 5 Cal 717. 'There must be a using of the document by a person who knows or has reason to believe that it is forged, and such using must be with the intention to defraud or to cause wrongful gain or wrongful loss. In deciding whether there has been a 'using as genuine' of the document, the Courts will advert to the nature of the document. Some document, such as receipts, are intended to remain in the holder's possession, other documents such as cheques or promissory notes must be tendered to the persons who are to pay them. Whoever the document, the dealing with it by the accused person, must be such as to satisfy the Court that he intended to defraud, but it is not necessary that wrongful gain or wrongful loss should actually be caused by the use.—Morgan and Macpherson. The fact that the primary object of the appellant in using the forged receipt was to get out of the difficulty in which he was put by the criminal case and that he did not support the document by production of perjured evidence may be taken into account in mitigation of punishment. 16 CWN 633. In a charge under Sections 471 and 193, failure to establish that the document is forged would result in acquittal. 72 CLJ 46. Where post-man was charged under Sections 409, 467 and 471, sanction of the Governor-General was held necessary for prosecution under Section 471, but trial could proceed for other offences. AIR 1941 Mad 33 : 42 Cr LJ 263 (1). The fabrication of a false document is criminal only when certain intentions can be attributed to the person who fabricates it. 42 Cr LJ 247 : AIR 1940 All 551.

[1] Subs. by Act 21 of 2000, Sec. 91 and Sch. I, for "document" (w.e.f. 17.10.2000).

All that the section requires is that there must be fraudulent or dishonest use of a document as genuine and knowledge of reasonable belief on the part of the person using the document that it is a forged. AIR 1961 Pat 451 : 1961 BLJR 411 : (1961) 2 Cr LJ 677 ; 1983 Simla LC 107 ; (1963) 3 SCR 376 (use as genuine, forged document).

2. Proof.—For the purpose of obtaining a conviction under Section 467, read with Section 471, IPC, it is not sufficient for the prosecution to establish that the document was not a genuine document ; it must be shown affirmatively that the accused either knew or had reason to believe that the document was forged. The prosecution must negative the possibility of the document having been prepared behind the accused's back and without his knowledge and of his having been imposed upon led to believe that it was genuine and to file it at such in good faith. 166 Ind Cas 531 : 38 Cr LJ 235 : 3 BR 177.

For a conviction under Section 471, the mere fact that the documents was forged could not conclude the matter, unless it is also established that he was a party to the forgery. It is incumbent on the prosecution to establish beyond reasonable doubt that the accused knew or had reason to believe that the certificates were forged. AIR 1960 Madh Pra 269 : 1960 Cr LJ 1217 ; AIR 1957 Ker 78: 1957 Cr LJ 755 : ILR 1957 Ker 277. For proof and evidence see (1942) 4 Ori JD 4.

3. User.—The use of a document contemplated by this section must be a voluntary one, and not the mere production of the document in compliance with an order of the Court which must be obeyed. 159 Ind Cas 287 : 1935 Cr C 1186 : AIR 1935 All 940 : 1935 AWR 1453 ; see also 159 Ind Cas 149 : 39 CWN 1309 : 1935 Cr C 1079 : AIR 1935 Cal 687 ; AIR 1935 All 521 : 157 Ind Cas 557 : 36 Cr LJ 1199 : 1935 ALJ 493 : 1935 A Cr C 128 : 1935 Cr C 546. The mere filing of a certified copy of a forged document may not amount to user of the forged document within the meaning of Section 471 of IPC. But the filing of the certified copy with the knowledge that it is a copy of a forged document would amount to user of the document because when a person files a copy he is using in substance the original itself if the filing is with the knowledge that the copy is the copy of the forged document. AIR 1956 Pat 354 : 1956 Cr LJ 1091 ; 1955 BLJR 641. Forged invoices produced in support of claim for evasion of sales tax. (1963) 2 SCJ 120 : 1963 (1) Cr LJ 330 : AIR 1963 SC 416 ; 175 IC 458 (as to preparation time and production of forged documents) ; (1981) 29 BLJR 530 ; 1983 (1) Crimes 833 (use must be fraudulent or dishonest. The essential ingredients are (1) knowledge or reasonable belief on the part of the person using the document is a forged one and fraudulent or dishonest use of the document as genuine. 1971 Cr LJ 1799 : (1970) 1 Cut WR 424 ; 1961 (2) Cr LJ 139.

Certain documents (cheques) were forged to create a tenancy in favour of the accused. Pay-in-slip signed by some one else were used to deposit the two cheques in the account of the complainant who had filed the pay-in slips in a civil suit instituted by the accused. Held, has under Section 195 (i) (b) (ii) against had not precluded cognizance of the offence. (1986) 2 Crimes 49 (Del).

4. Cases.—The fact that a person charged with an offence under Section 471, Penal Code, is himself, the forger of the document, is no reason why he should not be charged under Section 471, Penal Code, especially when he cannot be charged under Section 467. 13 Cr LJ 862 : 17 Ind Cas 798. In order to sustain a conviction under this section for using a forged document as genuine, it is not sufficient to prove that the accused was responsible for its use and should have been aware of its contents. It should also be proved that the accused himself used the document, that is, put in the document. 1 Weir 550 ; AWN 1887, 195 ; 25 PR 1913 Cr : 14 Cr LJ 667. It is extremely doubtful whether the mere filing of a copy of which the original is alleged to be forgery, is user of forged document. 20 CWN 262 : 43 Cal 783 : 17 Cr LJ 130.

A hundi purporting to have been drawn by a firm which never had any existence is a forgery. 30 PWR 1916 : 17 Cr LJ 574 : 36 Ind Cas 154. The production of a document which was a title-deed in answer to a citation in which no particular deed was specified is a voluntary production and amounts to user within the meaning of Section 471. 18 Cr LJ 839 : 41 Ind Cas 663. Using false attakshi with forged signature to defraud Court is an offence under this section. 42 M 558. An accused cannot be convicted under this section, for making change in a document so that it may be taken in evidence where the change is not material to facts. 17 ALJ 872 : 52 Ind Cas 61 : 20 Cr LJ 575. Where pending a police investigation a person tenders a forged document to the investigating officer and thereby causes that officer to do something which would otherwise not have done, he is guilty of having used a document within Section 441, IPC. 60 Ind Cas 674 : 22 Cr LJ 274. Accused obtained a prescription "from a medical man" for one tube of morphia and altering the words "one tube" to "four tubes" presented the prescription to a chemist and obtained four tubes of morphia from him. Held, that the accused was guilty of an offence under Section 471, IPC, 63 Ind Cas 617 : 22 Cr LJ 681. Where evidence is insufficient to prove that accused actually committed forgery, he may be convicted under Section 471, and not under Penal Code, Section 465. AIR 1931 All 258. Section 471 of the Penal Code, is no bar to the imposition of separate sentences on an accused persons who is convicted at the same trial of both the offences of forgery and using the forged document as genuine. Section 35 of the Criminal Procedure Code, authorises the imposition of such separate sentences. 52 M 532 : 29 LW 559 : 119 Ind Cas 63 : 30 Cr LJ 983 : AIR 1929 Mad 450 : 56 MLJ 554.

In order to qualify for appearance at a certain competitive examination, C attached a copy of a certificate as a true copy of original along with his application. On being asked to produce the original C produced it. The date of birth in the original certificate was changed from 5th January, 1901 to 15th January, 1904, so as not to debar him from appearing in the above competitive examination. Held, that the original document was a forged one inasmuch as the original date in it was altered and that C knew that it was a false document ; that it was made with intent to cause damage and injury to other candidates for the examination and to support C's claim to appear. 10 Lah 565 : 30 PLR 724 : 118 Ind Cas 385 : 30 Cr LJ 900. An offence under Section 471 of the Indian Penal Code, has no relation to the Registration Act and is governed entirely by different principles. Where therefore a prosecution was ordered both under Section 82 of the Registration Act, under Section 471, IPC, and the proceedings under the Registration Act are found to be illegal, such illegality in no way affects the validity of the prosecution under the Penal Code. 10 Pat LT 889 : 119 Ind Cas 888 : 30 Cr LJ 1101 : AIR 1929 Pat 500. S was convicted under Section 471, for having used a forged document and P for having abetted the same ; S was sentenced to four year's and P to two and a half years rigorous imprisonment. Held, that the sentence was not severe. 49 Cr LJ 193 : 116 Ind Cas 632 : 30 Cr LJ 656 : AIR 1929 Cal 203. Party setting up two titles and supporting one by false document is guilty. 2 AICR 58. If a forged document is presented for registration, that amounts to user for purposes of Section 471, IPC. 89 Ind Cas 1050 : 29 Cr LJ 1482.

Where the accused, who was a witness in the suit from some interest in, or desire to assist the defence, filed certain document for the purposes of the suit in advance of a trial. Held, that he used the document within the meaning of Section 471. 49 CLR 193 : 116 Ind Cas 632 : 30 Cr LJ 656 : AIR 1929 Cal 203. But a charge under this section is not maintainable when the accused was forced by the complainant to refer to such a document in evidence. 175 Ind Cas 488 : 10 RR 497 : 39 Cr LJ 592 : AIR 1938 Rang 194. If a person puts forward a document as supporting his claim in any matter whether that document is acted upon by the Court or used in evidence is immaterial for the purpose of constituting use of the document by the party within the meaning of Section 471. 111 Ind Cas 433 ; 29 Cr LJ 849.

Accused executed deeds bona fide believing that suit property belongs to him. He had not misrepresented himself as someone else or authorised by someone else.

When a person executes a document conveying a property describing it as his, there are two possibilities. The first is that he bona fide believes that the property actually belongs to him. The second is that he may be dishonestly or fraudulently claiming it to be his even though he knows that it is not his property. But to fall under first category of 'false documents', it is not sufficient that a document has been made or executed dishonestly or fraudulently. There is a further requirement that it should have been made with the intention of causing it to be believed that such document was made or executed by, or by the authority of a person, by whom or by whose authority he knows that it was not made or executed. When a document is executed by a person claiming a property which is not his, he is not claiming that he is someone else nor is he claiming that he is authorised by someone else. Therefore, execution of such document (purporting to convey some property of which he is not the owner) is not execution of a false document as defined under Section 464 of the Code. If what is executed is not a false document, there is no forgery. If there is no forgery, then neither Section 467 nor Section 471 of the Code are attracted. Md. Ibrahim & Ors. vs. State of Bihar & Anr., 2010 (2) CrLJ 2223 (SC).

The uses of a forged document for the purpose of securing an acquittal is dishonest and the same can form the basis of a conviction under Section 471, IPC. 9 Pat LT 800. Where the accused dishonestly used as genuine a forged document in a suit against an illiterate man. Held, that he could be punished under Section 471 with the punishment provided by Section 467, IPC. 109 Ind Cas 903 : 29 Cr LJ 631 : AIR 1927 Oudh 630. Even if a man uses a false document to support a good title, he is guilty of an offence under Section 471, IPC. AIR 1924 Cal 718 : 83 Ind Cas 504 : 51 Cal 469. Section 471 is only directed against persons other than the forger. 29 Cr LJ 1387 : 89 Ind Cas 523 : 21 NLR 1152. Where a person has been convicted for forgery under Section 467, IPC, he cannot be convicted under Section 471, for using the forged document as genuine. 88 Ind Cas 1051 : 26 Cr LJ 1295 : AIR 1925 Nag 440. Whenever a person fraudulently presents a document to another person being what it purports to be or causes the same to be so presented, knowing or having reasons to believe that the said document is a forged document, the document is "used as genuine" with Section 471. It matters not whether the document is presented by the accused himself or by his agent or whether it is produced by the accused of his own motion or pursuant to the order of the Court. 52 Cal 881. Although a person who produces documents in obedience to the order of the Court may not be held guilty of using forged documents even if they are found to be forged, the case would be different where the production of the documents in the Court not voluntary, but is in pursuance of a conspiracy between the accused, one of them being made the custodian of the document in order to get over some technical objection. 88 Ind Cas 181 : 6 Cr LJ 1093 : AIR 1925 Nag 45. A complainant when asked by Court to produce documents in support of his complaint produced certain forged ones. Held, he was guilty of an offence under Section 471, IPC, and he could not escape on the ground that it was an involuntary production of documents in Court. 6 Lah 50 : 26 PLR 156 : 88 Ind Cas 595 : 26 Cr LJ 1171. Accused securing service on allegation that he had passed certain examination and that he was a discharged person from Army and police service and producing certain forged certificates in support was found guilty under the section and sentenced to six years Rigorous Imprisonment. 1965 (2) Cr LJ 394 : AIR 1965 Pat 364.

A-1 aged 17 years got admission in MBBS Course by using forged mark-sheets in criminal conspiracy with A-2 his doctor-father A-1. From findings of High Court factual position leaves no manner of doubt that both the accused had not only the knowledge but also had reason to believe that the document i.e., the mark-sheet was forged one before they used it. For an offence under Section 471, one of the necessary ingredients is fraudulent and dishonest use of the document as genuine. The act need not be both dishonest and fraudulent. For sustaining conviction under Section 471 is necessary for the prosecution to prove that accused knew or had reason to believe that the document to be forged one and whether the accused knew or had reason to believe the document in question to be a forged one has to be adjudicated on the basis of materials and the finding recorded in that regard is essentially factual and as such the judgment of the High Court convicting the accused under Sections 471 and 420/120B of IPC does not suffer from any infirmity to warrant interference. A.S. Krishnan v. State of Kerala, (2004) 2 Crimes 317 (SC) : (2004) 11 SCC 576 : AIR 2004 SC 3229 : AIR Cr LJ 2833.

In a Surpeme Court case, amount from recurring deposit account was made by using forged vouchers. The accused-bank employees acted negligently in passing vouchers. It was not itself sufficient to convict them under Section 409. Further it could not be shown that they were acting in conspiracy and that they had knowledge that one of accused had fraudulently and dishonestly prepared forged vouchers. It was held that offences under Section 467, 471 & 409 were not proved and accused were entitled to the acquittal. *L. Accused No. 1 forged a number of receipts and passed as genuine and collected donations from various persons against those receipts. The only limited role of the accused two was that he accompanied the accused no. 1, when he collected the donation. 5. Execution of forged will.—W here the accused took no benefit on the basis of said forged will not be acted upon in any proceedings and accused was facing the trial for more than 26 years, therefore, the sentence reduced to the period already undergone which was about 7 months. Apart from this, the findings of convention recorded by the Courts below are based on correct appreciation of evidence and it cannot be said that the approach of the Courts below in dealing with the evidence is manifestly erroneous and the conclusions drawn are wholly unreasonable and perverse. The judgments of the Courts below did not suffer from any illegality in the approach to the case or any perversity in appreciation of the evidence on record. *Jagdish v. 6. Benefit of probation to convicted accused medical-students who got admitted in college by forged documents.—In a case when students use forged mark-sheets to obtain admission thereby depriving eligible candidates to get seats and that too a medical course and a doctor is involved in the whole operation, uncalled for leniency or undue sympathy will be misplaced and actually result in miscarriage of justice. Such types of crime deserve deterrent punishment in the large interest of society. Plea relating to sentence or extending the benefits of the Probation Act cannot be entertained. *A.S. 9. Jurisdiction of Court.—Vide 4 DLR (Mad) 254 : (1949) 2 MLJ 152.

Transfer of criminal case—Apprehension of miscarriage of justice.—The analysis of all the materials, the transfer of the case as sought for, at this stage, is not only against the interest of prosecution but also against the interest of other accused persons, the prosecution witnesses and the convenience of all concerned in the matter. For the sake of repetition, it is relevant to mention that when the complainant was examined as PW. 56, he disowned his complaint and asserted that it (complaint) was not filed by him though he admitted his signature found therein. Further, all important witnesses particularly government officials informed that what they said before the Court alone is absolute truth and they were forced to make false statement at the time of registering the complaint. As stated earlier, similar transfer petition which was filed before the High Court ended in dismissal and it became final. We are satisfied that the presiding officer of the Special Court is conscious of his power and how to conduct fair trial at the same place. We are also of the opinion that the public prosecutor cannot act on the dictates of the State Government, he has to act objectively as he is also an Officer of the Court The Special Court is free to assess whether prosecution has established its case. W have already pointed out that a mere allegation that there is apprehension that justic will not be done in a given case alone does not suffice. Considering the totality of al circumstances, we are of the opinion that in a secular, democratic Government governed by the rule of law, the State of Punjab is responsible for ensuring free, fair an impartial trial to the accused, notwithstanding, the nature of the accusations mad against them. In the case on hand, the apprehension entertained by the petitioner cannot be construed as reasonable one and the case cannot be transferred on a mer allegation that there is apprehension that justice will not be done.

Taking into consideration the entire facts and circumstances of the case and th materials on record, we are of the view that the petitioners have not made out a cas that they have reasonable apprehension of not availing justice in the State of Punjab We would like to clarify that we have not expressed anything on the merits neither o the prosecution case nor the defence of the accused and whatever said in the earlie paragraphs are applicable only for disposal of transfer petitions and ultimately it is fo the Special Court to decide the issues in the light of the material placed and i accordance with the law. The inevitable conclusion is that both the transfer petition filed by the petitioners deserve to be dismissed. Amarinder Singh vs. Prakash Sing Badal, 2009 (6) SCC 260 : 2009 (3) Crimes 174 (SC) : 2009 (7) JT 187 : 2009 (7) Scal 382 : 2009 (9) SCR 194 : 2009 (5) Supreme 95 : 2009 (4) SLT 415.

10. Sentence.—There was offence of submitting false document regarding claim o leave Travel Concession committed 10 years before and accused already undergon three months R. I, sentence reduced to period already undergone. Manjur Faiju Inamda v. State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cri LJ 2832 (Bom).

It was proved beyond a reasonable doubt that the accused used the duplicat certificate with changes, as a true certificate knowing it to be false in material particula and thereby got admission. Therefore, there was no reason to interfere with the conviction. However, looking to the nature of the offence and the fact that the accused's post and present records had been good and the fact that he had already lost his caree and was now married the sentence was reduced to that period already undergone. Tubibhai Jivabhai Changani v. State of Gujarat 2001 Cri LJ 741 (SC) : 2001(1) SCC 71 : 2001(1) JT 156 : 2000(8) Scale 238 : 2000(8) Supreme 455.

Where there was false claim of Rs. 2,500/- through LTC will by appellant— Travelling was not actually undertaken—Long time of 10 years was elapsed afte committing offence. Sentence was reduced to that period already undergone with sentence of fine. Manjur Faiju Inamdar v. State of Maharashtra, (1994) 1 East Cr C 5 (SC) : AIR 1993 (SC) 2322 : 1993 Cr LJ 2832 : 1993(2) UJ 323 : 1993(4) JT 147 : 1993(3) Scale 94.

The accused who came from the police department to the Dducation Department on transfer brought/prepared even the seals of the police department and he used those seals in forging the documents. He in order to see his own benefit, not only produced a forged document but also tried to obtain money of the salary of other teachers by producing this document. The Court declined to reduce even a day's sentence in such a serious matter. Jata Shanker Jha v. State of Rajasthan, 2000 Cri LJ 2108 (Raj) : 2000(1) Raj Cri C 344 : 2000(2) Raj Lr 266 (Raj).

1. Amendment.—The words in italics were substituted for words "transportation for life" by Act 26 of 1955, Section 119, and Schedule (w.e.f. 1.1.1956).

2. Scope.—The words "purports to be" in this section make the law of India upon this matter what it has in a long succession of cases, been held to be in England. In order to constitute an offence under this section, it is not necessary that the document must be stampted and receivable in evidence. 1 Weir 552. Where documents purports to be a valuable security under this section, the question whether it is invalid for want of consideration is immaterial. 1 Weir 554 ; 1 Weir 553. To support a prosecution under this section, the proof of the fraudulent secretion of a document is sufficient and it is not necessary to prove the validity of such a document. 97 Ind Cas 1055 : 27 Cr LJ 1230. A person may secret a document not only when its existence is unknown to other persons for preventing its becoming known, but also when its existence is known to others. In the latter case, he may secret it preventing its being produced in Court, mere failure to produce when there was duty to produce is not enough though this is evidence of section. Falsely denying the possession of the document is also good evidence. AIR 1931 Cal 184 : 1931 Cr C 248 : 25 CWN 425 : 58 Cal 1051 (FB) ; see also 58 Cr LJ 283. 3. Valuable security.—In order to become valuable security (under Section 30), the document itself should create the right or liability. Ordinarily speaking account books do not by themselves create any such right or liability though they may be evidence of the existence of such right or liabilities, that is not to say that under no circumstance can an account book be considered valuable security. 1962 Ker LJ 1072 : 1962 Ker LJ 615 : AIR 1963 Ker 68 ; 1963 (1) Cr LJ 279 : AIR 1963 All 131 ; see also 1973 Cr LJ 1640.

1. Amendment.—This section has been added by the Criminal Law Amendment ct, 1895 (8 of 1895), Section 4.

2. Scope.—It is sufficient to satisfy the words of the section, that the person harged under the section is one who undertakes to perform and does perform the duty f a clerk or servant, whether, in fact, he is clerk or servant, or not, and though he is under no obligation to perform such duties and receive remuneration. By fraud is meant an intention to deceive, whether it be from any expectation of advantage, to the party himself or from ill will towards the other is immaterial. 1 Weir 554. 1957 MWN 495. There must be relationship of master and servant.. Merely performing the work of a clerk does not come make him liable under Section 477A. 1953 All LJ 318 : 1953 Cr LJ 149 : AIR 1953 All 660 (AIR 1932 Cal 464 and AIR 1952 Sind 428 distinguished). But the position is different so far as the charge of the offence or conspiracy is concerned, as it is a distinct and separate offence. All that is necessary is the establishment of the agreement for the doing of the act which is so punishable. ILR 1953 Hyd 293. Person being agent of A company and receiving payment for doing its work as agent in spite of the fact that he is a full time servant of B Company is a servant as contemplated in the section. A man who deliberately makes a false document in order to conceal a fraud already committed by him is undoubtly acting with intent to commit fraud, as by making the false document he intends the party concerned to believe that no fraud has been committed. A criminal case was commenced in the Court of the first class Magistrate and involved charges against the accused under Sections 408 and 477-A IPC. At the time the case commenced the charge under Section 477-A, was exclusively triable by a Court of Session. Since the amended Cr. Pr. Code, came into force charges under Section 477 A, were triable by Magistrate with first class powers. Held, that the trial by the Magistrate after the amended Code, came into force on the charges under Sections 408 and 477-A, IPC, was quite legal and proper. The amendment of the law which enables in Magistrate with first class powers to try charges under Section 477-A IPC is a matter of procedure only and the amending Act applies notwithstanding that the case was commenced before the amending Act come into force. 28 CWN 998 : AIR 1924 Cal 983. The accused, working as Sub-Postmaster was charged for withdrawal of money from depositor's account by forging signature of the depositor in withdrawal form. Creation of false records without actual execution of work with a view to defraud Government is permissible under Section 477-A. M. Srinivasulu Reddy v. State 1991 (3) ALT 542.

3. Intent to defraud.—One of the most important ingredients of Section 477-A. is "intent to defraud". Where the manager of a company offered bribe out of the funds of the company, with the intention of causing injury to the company but on the contrary to promote its interest. Held. that the act of the manager was not punishable under Section 477-A. 170 Ind Cas 257 : 38 Cr LJ 887 : AIR 1937 Rang 280. Intent to defraud must be established to sustain a charge under this section. 1973 Cr LJ 1534 ; AIR 1951 Mad 894 ; AIR 1959 Bom 486 : 1959 Cr LJ 1032. 4. Criminal Breach of Trust.—As correctly pointed out by the learned Special Public Prosecutor and as laid down in the decision in Vishwa Nath v. State of J & K. AIR 1983 SC 174 : 1983 Cri LJ 231, after committing the criminal breach of trust in respect of money over which the accused had complete dominion, the refund of the amount after detection would not absolve him of the offence. Once it is proved that the amount was entrusted to him, then under Section 106 of the Evidence Act, he has to establish as to what happened to the said amount and that fact lies within the knowledge of the accused and as such, the burden of establishing the said fact is upon him. In this case, according to the defence, the appellant never received any amount from the loaness. But alternatively, it is contended that the amount had been paid back. S. Jayaseelan v. State by SPF, CBI, 2002 CriLJ 732 (Mad) : 2002 (2) RecCriR 484.

AIR 1967 SC 1590 : 1967 Cr LJ 1401. In a case under Section 477-A and Section 420, the acquittal under Section 477-A, would operate for the benefit of the accused in a charge under Section 420. 8. Charge.—"I (name and office of the Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused), as follows :—

10. Forgery or permit.—Accused working in office of civil supplies Inspector. Allegation that they prepared and signed permit for issuance of Palmolein Oil. While Permit was found to be issued in favour of an other accused a shop owner. Counterfoil retained in office was for other shop. Witnesses produced by prosecution for proof of handwriting and signature of accused on Permit, not stating that interpolation was in hand of accused.

Witness stated in his examination-in-chief that he knew the accused persons, viz., accused was working in Civil Supplies Inspector's Office in the rank of UDC and that he had earlier worked with him in the Finance Department. Witness has however, nowhere stated in the examination-in-chief that the present instance of interpolation or forgery was in the hand of accused. In the cross-examination, witness stated that although he had worked along with accused in the Finance Department, but he was working in a different section of the Department. He has clearly stated that he was working in the Budget Section called F1 whereas accused was working in the Motor Conveyance Section called F2 Section. It has also been brought to notice that in the cross-examination, it was said that the files dealt by A2 and F2 Section in the Finance Department never came to the F1 Section where witness was working. Therefore, the interpolation as also the initials appended thereto have not been proved and established to be in the hand of accused.

In that view of the matter, the prosecution has miserably failed to prove and establish that the alleged interpolation and forgery was done by either accused. Ravichandran v. State by Dy. Superintendent of Police, Madras, 2010 (3) CrLJ 2879 (SC).

OF PROPERTY AND OTHERS MARKS

Sec. 478. Trade Mark.—(Repealed by the Trade Merchandise Marks Act. 1958 (43 of 1958) Section 135, and Schedule (with effect from 25.11.1959)). The section before the repeal stood as follows :—For the purposes of this Code, the expression "trade mark" includes a trade mark registered under the Trade Marks Act, 1940, (V of 1940) and any mark used in relation to goods for the purpose of indicating or so as to indicate a connection in the course of trade between the goods and some person having the right to use the mark.

* * * * *

Comments

Property mark.—A property mark is intended to denote ownership over all movable property belonging to a person whether it is all of one kind or different kinds. So long as the person owns movable properties his property mark impressed upon them remains his, though any particular article out of it may, after such impression, pass out of his hands and cease to be his. The function of a property mark to denote certain ownership is not destroyed because any particular property on which it was impressed has ceased to be of that ownership. 6 Bom LR 513 : 1 Cr LJ 581.

Distinction between a trade mark and property mark whereas the former denotes the manufacture or quantity of the goods while the latter denote the ownership. AIR 1972 SC 2485 : 1972 Cr LJ 1751. The term "movable property" does not incorporal property. AIR 1975 Pat 228.

Whoever marks any goods or any case, package or other receptacle containing goods, or uses any case, package or other receptacle with any mark thereon, in a manner reasonably calculated to cause it to be believed that the good so marked, or any goods contained in any such receptacle so marked, have a connection in the course of trade with a person with whom they have not any such connection, is said to use a false trade mark.

Sec. 481. Using a false property mark.—Whoever marks any moveable property or goods or any case, package or other receptacle containing moveable property or goods, or uses any case, package or other receptacle having any mark thereon, in a manner reasonably calculated to cause it to be believed that the property or goods so marked, belong to a person to whom they do not belong, is said to use a false property mark.

Sec. 482. Punishment for using a false property mark.—Whoever uses [1][* * *] any false property mark shall, unless he proves that he acted without intent to defraud, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

1. Amendment.—The words appearing at the asteriks marked place "any false trade mark or" were omitted by Act 43 of 1958, Section 135 and Sch (with effect from 25.11.1959).

2. Facts to be determined.—Where a person is charged with an offence under Section 482, what the Court has to determine is whether the trade mark claimed by the complainant was a "distinctive" mark, and for that purpose, it has to take consideration the extend to which its user had rendered the mark in fact distinctive of the goods in question. ILR (1938) 1 Cal 665 : 175 Ind Cas 144 : 39 Cr LJ 537 : 66 CLJ 210 : 42 CWN 112 : AIR 1938 Cal 216. Where the accused is using a false trade mark, the burden is upon the accused to show that he is using such mark without intent to defraud. 161 Ind Cas 1007 : 37 Cr LJ 528 : 1936 Cr C 184 : AIR 1936 Rang 96. It is not necessary for a conviction under Section 482, IPC, that the trade marks or the paintings on them should be identical. It is enough that there is such similarity between the two that an unwary customer may not be able to distinguish one from the other, especially when he sees the one without having the other before him. The question whether the trade mark, the subject-matter of the prosecution, is a colourable imitation of another trade mark is one of fact, and the Court must come to its own conclusion after having placed itself in the position of the unwary customer. It is not necessary that any should in fact have been deceived. 165 Ind Cas 745 : 17 Pat LT 667 : 1936 Cr C 950 : AIR 1951 Pat 289, 290, Agrawal, C.J., said : "Section 482, renders punishable the use of any false trade mark or any false property mark unless the user is able to prove that he acted without intent to defraud. The expression "trade mark" is defined in Section 478, as amended by the Merchandise Marks Act 1941, as including a trade mark registered under the Trade Marks Act, 1940, and any marks used in relation to goods for the purpose of indicating or so as to indicate a connection in the course of trade between the goods and some person having the right to use the mark. At the relevant time no part of the design on the certain of the complainant or the petitioner had been registered under the Trade Marks Act, 1940, although I am told applications for registration were pending. This case, therefore, has to be decided with reference to the second part of the definition of the trade mark given in Section 478, Penal Code. The complainant relied on declarations which had been made in his application for registration which referred to a previous declarations made in 1905 and also to catalogues which he had issued over a course of many years for the purpose of establishing that he has been using this particular carton and deceive on it for a long time. It has. however, been pointed out in the case of Loke Nath v. Ashwini Kumar De, (1938) 1 Cal 665 : AIR 1938 Cal 216 : 39 Cr LJ 537, that a declaration of ownership for the purpose of registration is not evidence of legal ownership of trade mark for such a declaration represents nothing more than the opinion and claim of the declarant. What the .Court has to determine is whether the trade mark claimed by the complainant is distinctive mark. that is to say. a mark which is adopted to distinguish the goods of the proprietor of the particular trade mark from those of other persons. For that purpose it is necessary to ascertain the extent to which the user of the mark has rendered it in effect distinctive of the goods is question. For that purpose the evidence that is required is that persons bought the complainant's medicine because it was contained in his carton, that is to say, a person who received the complainant's carton would rely on finding in it the medicine he intented to purchase. If there was such evidence then any one selling medicine in a carton similar to that of the complainant as the mislead a purchaser into believing that he was actually purchasing the complainant's medicine would be infringing the complainant's trade mark". See also AIR 1941 All 87 : 42 Cr LJ 352.

Where a manufacture of biris flagrantly and dishonestly imitated the label and slip of another with the object of causing it to be believed that the goods of one quality in far belonged to another ; held. that he was liable to be convicted under Section 582, IPC. AIR 1930 Oudh 350 : 7 OWN 598. Although a Criminal Court has a discretion in J cases of bona fide dispute or long delay to refer the matter to a Civil Court, it can refuse remedy to an aggrieved person. Ibid. For the purpose of establishing a case of infringement it is not necessary to show that there has been the use of a mark in all respects corresponding with that which another person has acquired an exclusive right to use, but that the resemblance is such as not only to show an intention to deceive but also such as to be likely to make unwary purchasers suppose that they are purchasing the article sold by the party to whom the right to use the trade mark belongs. In other words, the standard of the comparison is not that of the expert but of the unwary purchaser. 34 CWN 339 : 51 CLJ 477 : AIR 1930 Cal 274 : AIR 1939 Rang 145 : 40 Cr LJ 546. A body corporate such as firm may be prosecuted for an offence under Sections 480 and 482. AIR 1929 Cal 498 : AIR 1929 Rang 322. Test of an infringement is whether a purchaser would be deceived into believing goods of accused as those of the complainant from looking at the getup where no confusion is likely to be caused, either by having both, side by side or by the purchaser having recollection of the get-up of the complainant's goods, prosecution under Section 482 is not sustainable, especially where there is no evidence of any purchaser having been misled. AIR 1929 Rang 345 : 7 Rang 169 : 30 Cr LJ 882 : 118 Ind Cas 113. There is no registration of trade mark in India. Right of action is based on deceit. Complainant is to prove reputation of his trade mark. 20 Cr LJ 276 : 12 SLR 129 : 50 Ind Cas 165. Where accused has used a false trade mark but had no intent to defraud, he could not be convicted under Section 487. 19 Cr LJ 722 : 16 ALJ 476 : 46 Ind Cas 402. Where the accused has introduced a trade mark, which if used on cheroots is reasonably calculated to cause it to be believed that those cheroots are the cheroots of the complainant, the Criminal Court should try the case. 169 Ind Cas 880 : 38 Cr LJ 840 : AIR 1937 Rang 203.

Under Section 482, an intent to defraud is an ingredient of the offence but when it has been proved that a trade mark is a false trade mark then it is to be presumed that the accused had that intent unless he rebuts the presumption when only he is entitled to be acquitted. 118 Ind Cas 113 : 30 Cr LJ 882 : AIR 1929 Rang 345. Even though no case of purchasers having been deceived by the use of the false trade mark is proved this fact standing alone is insufficient to justify the contention that the accused acted without intent to defraud. The state of mind of persons responsible for the introduction of the trade mark is a most relevant fact which can be established by evidence. In the absence of such evidence, the accused cannot be held to have discharged the ones of proving want of intention which was upon him. AIR 1929 Rang 322. It is nowhere laid down by Legislature that under no circumstances could a dispute relating to the infringement of a trade mark be entertained by a Criminal Court and that it should always be adjudicated upon by a Civil Court. The only thing which can be said is that the Criminal Court may, in view of the peculiar circumstances of a particular case, stay its own hands and direct the complainant to establish his right in the Civil Court. 9 Lah 491 : 29 PLR 610 : 29 Cr LJ 425 : AIR 1928 Lah 186. For a conviction under Section 482, evidence of actual deception is not necessary. It is enough if the Court finds on a comparison of the two trade marks that the accused was likely to deceive. AIR 1925 Cal 149 : 81 Ind Cas 922 : 25 Cr LJ 1098. In a trades mark case issue of search warrant for searching a house and for production of account books is not proper. 17 Cr LJ 543 : 9 BLR 45 : 10 Bur LT 216 : 36 Ind Cas 591. Mere imitation is no offence where there is no infringement of patent or copyright and no attempt to pass off goods as being that of the others. 1933 Cr C 1423 : AIR 1933 Nag 344. Section 18 of the Merchandise Marks Act does not prevent prosecution under Section 482, provided infringement is within 3 years. 36 Ind Cas 168. In cases of prosecution under this section, the High Court will not pass any order in revision in respect of costs or confiscation of accused's goods. If the complainant has in fact suffered any damage, he must seek his remedy in Civil Court. AIR 1941 All 87 : 42 Cr LJ 352 : 193 IC 189 ; see also 1983 All LJ 753. Where there genuine dispute between the parties as to who used false trade mark, the case should be brought in Civil Court. AIR 1939 Rang 145 : 40 Cr LJ 546 : 181 IC 404.

The proper test is whether the general get-up is likely to deceive the unwary using a false trade mark. AIR 1961 Cal 240 : (1961) 1 Cr LJ 488. [1] Subs. by Act 4 of 1889, Sec. 3, for the original Section 484.

1. Amendment.—The section was substituted by Act 43 of 1958, Section 135, and Schedule (with effect from 25.11.1959) for this original section reading as follows :—

> "488. Making or possession of any instrument for the counterfeiting a trade mark or property mark.—Whoever makes or has in his possession, any die, plate or other instrument for the purpose of counterfeiting a trade mark or property mark for the purpose of denoting that any goods are the manufacture or merchandise of a person whose manufacture or merchandise they are not, or that belong to person to whom they do not belong, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years or with fine or with both."

2. Notes.—A mark to be trade or property mark must be a mark used for denoting that the goods are the manufacture of the merchandise of a particular person. The mark in itself does not denote anything of the kind and it is necessary that it should do so, 27 Cal 776 : 4 CWN 423. Where a trade mark consists of an impression moulded in the glass of which the bottles are made together with label and the person is found in possession of the mould in question with the intention of counterfeiting that trade mark, although the apparatus for counterfeiting the label which would complete the trade mark has not been found, the person can be convicted under Section 485. 6. Charge 2892

1. Amendment.—The words in italics were substituted by Act 43 of 1958, Section 135, and Sch. with effect from 25.11.1959) for the words "Selling goods marked with a counterfeit trade mark or property mark. Whoever sells, or exposes or has in his possession for sale or for any purpose of trade or manufacture any goods or thing with a counterfeit trade mark or property mark".

2. Scope.—This section also applied to a retailer who connives with a fraudulent wholesales or manufacturer in palming off on unsuspecting public goods which purport to be other than what they are. But where there is no attempt to pass of the one as the other and no attempt at substitution there can be no conviction. 20 NLJ 183 : AIR 1937 Nag 347. The onus is upon the accused to show that he comes within the exception. 8 CWN 421 : 54 Bom LR 796, where it was held that if the accused can show that he had taken all reasonable precautions against committing the offence and that he had at the time of commission of the alleged offence no reason to suspect the genuiness of the mark on the article his case comes within clauses (a) and (b) of the section. 54 Bom LR 795. Section 486, casts upon the accused an onus which has to be discharged in compliance with provisions of the section itself. AIR 1956 Cal 260 : 1956 Cr LJ 736 : 1962 All LJ 1068 : 1962 All Cr R 458 (case of infringement of trade mark) 1962 All LJ 1038 : 1962 All Cr R 455 : 1963 (1) Cr LJ 282 : AIR 1963 All 133. The language of Section 486, by necessary implication leads to the inference that mens rea in its ordinary sense that is to say, in the sense of dishonest intention or on intention of deceiving or cheating does not form an essential ingredient for an offence under Section 486. AIR 1961 Bom 208 : ILR 1961 Bom 248 : 1961 (2) Cr LJ 66. Counterfeiting a label falls within this section. 16 Bom LR 78 ; see also 32 Cal 431 ; AWN 1987, 99 ; 32 PR 1902 Cr. No conviction under this section stands for the use of another firm's bottle nnocently and according to common practice. AIR 1928 Cal 873. Section 486. specifically confines the offence to selling a thing. The prosecution is within time if aunched within three years of specified offence contained against. The starting point for limitation is not terminations of three years from the date of the first of a series of offences. AIR 1928 Cal 495 ; AIR 1930 Cal 274 ; 22 M 482 ; AIR 1931 Mad 276 : 1930 MWN 1263 : 1931 Cr C 353. In a prosecution for an offence under Section 386, IPC, the est is not whether a person who is in the best on the alert and who knows the original well would have been deceived. The proper test is to consider the question from the point of view of the unwary purchaser. 34 CWN 524 : 128 Ind Cas 334 : 32 Cr LJ 137 : AIR 1930 Cal 728. For the purposes of this section the mark need not be the exclusive property of anybody. AIR 1940 Cal 351 : ILR (1940) 2 Cal 1 : 44 CWN 967 : 41 Cr LJ 336. Signature in a forwarding note does not show possession of the goods. AIR 1940 Mad 822 : 42 Cr LJ 28. The provisions of this section are meant for a retailer who onnives with a fraudulent wholesaler or manufacturer in palming off an unsuspecting public goods which purport to be other that what they are. Where, therefore, no attempt t substitution is made the accused cannot be convicted under this section. AIR 1937 Nag 341 : ILR 1938 Nag 192 : 39 Cr LJ 109.

Even in cases of goods which have no trade marks or in cases in which the trade mark has not been registered a person could have a cause of action both in civil and riminal Court for infringement of property mark. AIR 1969 Mad 94. For meaning of ounterfeit ; see AIR 1963 All 133 : 1962 AWR (HC) 821 : 1962 ALJ 1088. The olourable imitation of labels not being counterfeit, the accused can not be said to have ommitted offence under Section 486. AIR 1958 All 653 : 1955 Cr LJ 1102. Counterfeiting need not be an exact imitation. AIR 1960 SC 669 : 1965 Cr LJ 1017. For meaning of the word "innocently" see (1961) 2 Cr LJ 66 : AIR 1961 Bom 203.

3. Burden of proof.—(1) To establish that the accused marked the goods manufactured and sold by him (2) that he did so in a manner reasonably calculated to ause it to be believed that the goods contained in the packets so marked belonged to he complainant and (3) further that the accused has sold or exposed for sale of goods r has in his possession for sale of goods hand mark calculated to cause it to be elieved that the goods and the goods manufactured by and belong to the complainant. IR 1972 SC 2458.

The burden of proof under Section 486, IPC, is on the accused. It is true that roviso (b) to this section, as a defence available to accused, is linked with proviso (a) ut the fact that the accused did give all the information in his power with respect to he person from whom he obtained the spurious goods with the counterfeit trade-marks s admissible in evidence in considering whether he acted innocently or not. 20 NLJ 183 AIR 1937 Nag 341.

4. Sentence.—Ordinarily the infringement of a mark which is made punishable by ection 406, IPC, is rather a civil than a criminal wrong ; at best it is of a quasi criminal ature. In most cases of conviction under Section 486, therefore, unless the rcumstances warrant strongly to the contrary, a substantial sentence of fine would be ufficient to meet the ends of justice instead of imprisonment. 15 Mys LJ 272 (the case f infringement of trade mark).

5. Procedure.—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not comp-oundable with ourt's permission—Triable by a Magistrate of the first class.

6. Charge.—The charge should run thus :—

I (name and designation of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of th accused) as follows :—

OF CURRENCY NOTES AND BANK NOTES

Sec. 489-A. Counterfeiting currency notes or bank notes.—Whoever counterfeits, or knowingly performs any part of the process of counterfeiting, any currency-notes or bank-note, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this section and of Sections 489B, 489C, 489D and 489E, the expression "bank-note" means a promissory note or engagement for the payment of money to bearer on demand issued by any person carrying on the business of banking in any part of the world, or issued by or under the authority of any State or Soverign Power, and intended to be used by or under the authority of any State or Sovereign Power, and intended to be used as equivalent to or as a substitute for money.

1. Amendment.—Sections 489A to 489D, have been added by the Currency Notes Forgery Act, 1899, (Act 12 of 1899), Section 2. The words and figures in italics have been substituted by Act 35 of 1950, Section 3, and Sch. II for the words and figures "489C and 489D".

2. Scope.—A conviction under this section cannot stand unless it is proved that the accused were performing the process or part of the process of counterfeiting a note. Where no counterfeiting was done and where there was no part of any process which could have ended in producing a counterfeit worthy of the name and there was no intention of trying to counterfeit, the conviction under this section must be set aside. 38 Ind Cas 746. the words "as genuine" govern only the verb "use" and not any other verb. 7 Lah 80 : 27 Cr LJ 638 : 27 PLR 514. The object of the legislature in enacting the section is to stop the circulation of forged note by punishing all persons who knowing or having reason to believe them to be forged do any act which could lead to their circulation. 7 Lah 80 : 27 Cr LJ 638 : 94 Ind Cas 441. In the case accused were charged with offence of indulging in counterfeiting by printing 2000 notes of 20 dollar denomination. Prohibition against counterfeiting currency notes applies to currency notes of all countries. Held, that High Court of Kerala was wholly wrong in exerting itself unnecessarily and bending backwards to order to hold that Sections 489-A to 489-E, were not applicable to currency notes other than Indian Currency Notes. View taken by the High Court was thoroughly unsustainable. Judgment and order of discharge rendered by the High Court reversed and set aside. 1987 Cr LJ 308 (SC).

Counterfeit currency notes and incriminating articles recovered from possession of accused and only counterfeit coins from possession of co-accused. It was held that persons in possession of counterfeit coins were having mens rea and were liable to be convicted under Section 489A/120B. 5. Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows :—

That on or about the.......day of...... at......you counterfeited (or knowingly performed a part of the process of counterfeiting, to wit.....) a currency-note or a bank-note) of the value of...rupees, and thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 489A of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

6. Knowingly use of.—The fact that the note was fake confirmed only after examining by five experienced persons in that field, will clearly go to show that there is no apparent sign in the note for any ordinary man to come to the conclusion that it is a counterfeit note. Admittedly the petitioner is an ordinary man, who is not in the field of examining the note everyday. Therefore, mere possession of the counterfeit note will have presumption of the knowledge of the note. In order to bring the offence under Section 489 (b) and (c) it should be established that note must be used knowing fully well that the note was counterfeit one, A petitioner to come into possession casually cannot be prosecuted unless there are materials that he was using the note knowing that it is counterfeit. *Abdul Majeed Rehaman, Sarkhot, v. 1. Amendment.—The words in italics were substituted for the words "transportation for life" by Act 26 of 1955, Section 117. and Schedule (with effect from 1.1.1956).

2. Object of Sections 489-A to 489-E, IPC.—Section 489-A to 489-E deal with various economic offences in respect of forged or counteffeit currency notes or bank notes. The object of Legislature in enacting these provisions is not only to protect the economy of the country but also to provide adequate protection to currency notes and Bank notes. The currency notes are, in spite of growing accustomedness to the credit cards system. Still the backbone of the commercial transactions by multitudes in our country. But these provisions are not meant to punish unwary possessors or users. *Umashanker v. 3. Scope.—To convict a man under this section for using a forged note as genuine, the possession of the note does not necessitate the explaining the fact of his possession but the prosecution must prove that he knew it to be forged when he passed it. 81 Ind Cas 551. see also (1976) 1 Cr LJ 228. Transportation of knowledge of notes being counterfeit if can be drawn from the possession of the note. (1979) 4 SCC 23.

In the instant case the accused from whose possession the fake notes were recovered pleaded that he had no knowledge that the notes were forged. The Court repelled the continuation and observed, "The collateral circumstances, such as the bulk of the fake currency notes, the mixture of fake currency notes with the genuine currency notes, the planing off such notes quickly and the fact that the accused by no stretch of an undedicated man, are sufficient to infer that the accused had reason to believe the currency notes with him were fake or counterfeit. There remains no doubt in my mind that the prosecution has established the case against the Appellant (Accused), that the Appellant (Accused) used as genuine the forged or counterfeit currency notes and that the Appellant was found in possession of the forged or counterfeit currency notes and that he had reason to believe that those were fake/counterfeit currency notes". *Abdul Fakirsaheb Mamtule v. When recovery of bulk quantity of counterfeit currency notes from possession of accused for using them as genuine is corroborated by independent reliable witness stating entire facts and circumstances then conviction of accused just and proper. Peer Mohammad v. State, 2004 Cr LJ 45 (Mad).

The accused was found using fake currency notes in market. On search of her person fake currency notes of Rs. 500/- and Rs. 50/- were recovered. Later house searched of accused and her husband led to recovery of one side printed currency notes and other materials used for printing fake currency notes. The alleged currency notes recovered were fake as per opinion of Treasurer of Reserve Bank. The conviction of accused for offences under Section 489A, 489B, 489C and 489D was held proper. Sou Bharti v. State, 2003 Cr LJ 2583 (Bom) : 2003 All MR (Cri) 1285.

"The appellant was found carrying 250 fake currency notes on a public road in the city of Bhuj concealed in a Thela beneath cloth pieces as alleged in the charge. He was, therefore, transporting the said currency notes at the time when he was apprehended with them. Therefore, this is not a case of mere dormant possession, but, it is a case of active transportation of the currency notes, which would fall within the expression 'traffics in such currency notes.' Section 489-B of the Indian Penal code clearly contemplates the cases where the counter- feit currency notes are received from any other person as also the cases where a person traffics in such currency notes knowing or having reason to believe the same to be forged or counterfeit. In our opinion, these ingredients of the offence under Section 489-B are clearly established against the appellant. He was not only carrying 250 counterfeit currency notes on 9-4-1996 but he had concealed 101 other such counterfeit currency notes which he later discovered before the panchas on 12-4-1996. It is therefore, clearly established that the appellant was trafficking in these counterfeit currency notes which he had received from some source. The appellant is, therefore, rightly held guilty of the offences under Setcions 489-B and 489-C of the Indian Penal Code by the trial Court." Rayab Jusab Sama v. State of Gujarat, 1999 Cri LJ 942 (Guj).

In a case, the booking clerk was given a fake hundred rupee note to purchase the ticket. Though the booking clerk suspected the genuineness of the note he did not inform or ask the accused as to whether the note was a genuine note or not. On the contrary, he was simply called into his cabin and made him to wait there and upon his report the other witnesses came even at that time also the accused was holding the note in his hand. This conduct of the accused probabilised that the accused had no knowledge that it was a fake note. The accused was neither informed nor asked about the genuineness of the note. In the statement under Section 313, IPC, the accused categorically stated that he had given a genuine note but unnecessarily the booking clerk called him into his cabin and made him to wait. The accused had a strong feeling not only before the booking clerk, the police officers, but also before the Court that the note presented by him was genuine. The Court held that the accused had no knowledge or reason even belief that the note presented by him for purchase of ticket was forged one. Conviction of accused was held not proper. Veera Swamy Shanmaugam Sundaram v. The State of AP 2001 Cri LJ 3787 (AP).

4. Mens rea.—Mens rea of offences under Section 589-B and 489-C is "knowing or having reason to believe the currency notes or bank notes are forged or counterfeit" without the aforementioned mens rea selling, buying or receiving from another person or otherwise trafficking in or using as genuine forged or counterfeit currency notes or bank notes is not enough to constitute offence under Section 489-B of IPC. So also possessing or even intending to use any forged or counterfeit currency note or bank notes is not sufficient to make out a case under Section 489-C in the absence of the mens rea. Umashanker v. State qf Chattisgarh 2001 Cri LJ 4696 (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 3074 : 2001(9) SCC 642 : 20001(8) JT 322 : 2001(7) Scale 37

5. Counterfeiting.—Recovery of huge number of fake currency notes and implements to manufacture them from accused persons. It was submitted that none of the search/seizure independent witnesses of the locality were called. This submission is totally wrong. Every recovery memo and production of notes bears the signatures of independent witnesses.

Attesting witnesses were not stock witnesses. There is no reason why the Police Officers would prepare forged recovery memos. The huge quantity of notes recovered from the possession is self speaking evidence that the prosecution case is correct and no manipulation has been done. The learned trial Court has discussed in detail and has also rightly distinguished the cases cited before him and before this Court. The Investigating Officers of this case have done an excellent job of tracing the accused one after the other at the instance of the accused one by one. All of them are members of the criminal conspiracy. As a part of conspiracy, different accused have been assigned different jobs. Accused not falsely implicated as Investigating Officer and witnesses have no enmity with them.

In this case forged currency notes were recovered from every accused. Even if notes would have not been recovered from any accused then also he could not have said that as one of the conspirator's is not liable to be punished. It is totally wrong to say that one of the witness was shattered in cross-examination. It is proved beyond reasonable doubt that the police party went to Delhi and made recoveries. There is nothing to say that the attesting witnesses are stock witnesses. Simply given the name of stock witnesses does not affect the truthful and veracity of the statement. An imaginary argument which is usually meant in all criminal cases have been made that the accused were falsely implicated by the Investigating Officer. It is fantastic to say that so huge number of notes and implements to manufacture them could be placed by the police and make the accused liable. The Investigating Officers and the witnesses have no enmity with the accused.

Thus, wrong assertion has been made that the Indian Security Press report did not contain the number of counterfeit notes is deliberate wrong assertion of facts against the record leads to the inference that the accused is guilty of the offence charged. A complete conspiracy punishable under Section 120-B stand proved. For making a criminal conspiracy, it is not necessary that each of the accused fully participate in all the activities. Here is a case where Liyakat Ali used to manufacture fake and counterfeit notes. Huge amount of notes and all the implements and machines for preparing fake notes have been recovered from his possession.

According to India Security Press, Nasik, the notes produced before them suffered a number of defects, as such it should be held that they were prepared for fancy purpose. The argument is fantastic. The very existence of the fake notes amounting to lakhs and lakhs rupees indicate that all the accused under a criminal conspiracy are bent upon selling and introducing the fake notes in the market. This case is governed by the case K. Hashim vs. State of Tamil Nadu, reported in AIR 2005 SC 128 = 2005 (1) SCC 237 = 2005 CrLJ 143 (SC), the fact and ratio decidendi of the case of K. Hashim noted supra at verbatim with necessary changes in nomenclature applies to the facts of this case. By credible, cogent and reliable evidence tender the invertible conclusion is that the appellants have been rightly convicted and sentenced under various sections. The sentence as imposed do not warrant interference, particularly in view of the object for which the Sections 489-A, 489-B, 489-C, 489-D and 120-B of the IPC have been enacted.

From bare perusal of the statements of the prosecution witnesses mentioned above and the reasons mentioned above, it is clear that the prosecution has been able to prove the case against the accused appellants beyond reasonable doubt. From the accused appellants fake currency notes, and machinery used for preparing fake currency notes were recovered and they were found to be guilty of provisions of Sections 489-A, 489-B, 489-C and 489-D for which separately and collectively charged as mentioned above.

This Court has also gone through the findings arrived at by the trial Court on the question of sentence and I am in agreement with the view taken by the trial Court on this point. Arguments of the counsel for the appellants for releasing them for the period already undergone by them is also devoid of merit, hence rejected. The sentence of imprisonment imposed is just and proper, but I am of the considered opinion that in such types of heinous offences particularly relating to economic offences directly concerned with the State Exchequer, the accused appellants should serve sentence of imprisonment imposed upon them for full and no remission should be given to them, particularly when they were caught with huge fake currency notes and equipments used for preparing fake currency. Liyakat Ali vs. State of Rajasthan, 2010 (2) CrLJ 2450 (Raj).

6. Sentence imitation counterfeit deception resemblance.—Accused found guilty of manufacturing, selling and introducing fake currency notes in market. This Court has also gone through the findings arrived at by the trial Court on the question of sentence and I am in agreement with the view taken by the trial Court on this point. Arguments of the counsel for the appellants for releasing them for the period already undergone by them is also devoid of merit, hence rejected. This Court may add that in such types of heinous offences the accused appellants should serve the full sentence imposed upon them without getting any remission. Liyakat Ali vs. State of Rajasthan, 2010 (2) CrLJ 2450 (Raj).

9. Resemblance—Making a counterfeit note exact imitation is not necessary. For making a counterfeit note the exact imitation is not necessary. Existence of the resemblance which might cause deception is enough to raise the presumption of intention to deceive. The three Judge Bench of the Hon'ble Supreme Court in The State of Uttar Pradesh vs. Hafiz Mohd. Ismail, Hafiz Jawed Ali, held that "counterfeit — Meaning — Colourable imitation" Exact imitation not essential — existence of resemblance which might cause deception is enough to raise presumption of intention to deceive". AIR 1960 SC 669. In K. Hashim vs. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 2005 SC 128 = 2005 (1) SCC 237 = 2005 CrLJ 143, the Hon'ble Supreme Court held that "Section 28, IPC defines the word "counterfeiting" in very wide terms. The main ingredients of counterfeiting as laid down in Section 28 are :

(1) causing one thing to resemble another thing;

(2) intending by means of that resemblance to practice deception: or

(3) knowing it to be likely that deception will thereby be practiced.

"Counterfeit" in Section 28 does not cannot an exact reproduction of the original counterfeited. Explanation 2 of Section 28 is of great significance. It lays down a rebuttable presumption where resemblance is such that a person might be deceived thereby. In such a case the intention or the knowledge is presumed unless the contrary s proved. There is no necessity of importing words like "colourable limitation" therein. n order to apply Section 28, what the Court has to see is whether one thing is made to resemble another thing and if that is so and if the resemblance is such that a person might be deceived by it, there will be a presumption of the necessary intention or knowledge to make the thing counterfeit, unless the contrary is proved.

Plea that report of expert showing that notes recovered were not exactly similar to currency notes and there were marked difference as such they were not counterfeit notes but only fancy notes is not tenable. Liyakat Ali vs. State of Rajasthan, 2010 (2) CrLJ 2450 (Raj).

1. Scope.—The onus lies on the prosecution to prove circumstances which lead clearly, indubitably and irresistibly to the inference that the accused had the intention to foist the notes on the public. 11 Lah 555 : 31 PLR 867 : 129 Ind Cas 494 : AIR 1931 Lah 24. The mere possession of forged notes is not an offence under the Penal Code. In order to bring a case within Section 489C, it is not only necessary to prove that the accused was in possession of forged notes but it should further be established (a) that at the time of his possession he knew the notes to be forged or had reason to believe them to be so, and (b) that he intended to use them as genuine or that they might be used as genuine. 11 Lah 555 : 31 PLR 867 : 129 Ind Cas 494 : AIR 1931 Lah 74. Where the currency notes in possession of the accused are found to be of such nature that a mere look at them would not convince any person of average intelligen that they are counterfeit notes, the presumption that the notes in his possession we counterfeit cannot be drawn. There is also nothing to show that he had any intention use the same as genuine. The prosecution could not bring out any transaction of th accused with any other person. Thus, the prosecution failed to establish that th accused was intending to use the same as genuine. Therefore the accused cannot convicted under Section 489-C IPC. 3. Charge.—I (name and office of the Sessions Judge, etc.), hereby charge yo (name of the accused) as follows :—

That on or about the..........day of..........at......you had in your possession a forge (or counterfeit) currency-note (or bank note), to wit......knowing (or having reason t believe) the same to be forged (or counterfeit) and intending to use the same as genuin or that it may be used as genuine, and that you thereby committed an offenc punishable under Section 489C of the Indian Penal Code, and within the cognizance the Court of Session.

Recovery of counterfeit currency notes—Framing of charges against the recovery counterfeit currency notes was held and petitioner was filed against no ready interference was finally warranted. Subhash Chander v. State, 1995 CC Cases 363 : (1995) 1 Crimes 38 (Del).

4. Punishment.—The mere recovery of counterfeit currency notes attract punishment under Section 489-C. It is attracted only if the person has the knowledge that the currency he possessed are counterfeit notes and that he intended to use them as genuine. Hence, conviction set aside. T.J. Mohan v. State, (1995) 1 LW (Cr) 75 (Mad).

There was no evidence that accused has knowledge that they were counterfeit and he intended to use them as genuine. The mere recovery of counterfeit notes cannot attract the punishment under Section 489-C, IPC when other elements required under the section are wanting. T.J. Mohan v. State by Inspector of Police, Tiruvellore Police Station, 1995 MLJ (Cr) 88 (Mad).

5. Possession of counterfeit currency notes.—The term 'possession' as used in Section 489-C of the IPC bears a sense at variance from that in civil law. It would amount to criminal possession if the possessor had knowledge or reason to believe that the notes that were forged and if his continued possession was with the intention of foisting it on the public. If the notes were of such a nature that a mere look at them would convince anybody that they were fake notes it can be presumed that he had knowledge or reason to believe that they were counterfeit currencies. M. Mammutti v. State of Karnataka, AIR 1979 SC 1705; 1979 Cri LJ 1383, is the authority for the proposition. In the circumstances, the possession of the currencies comes within the criminal possession contemplated in Section 489-C of the I.P.C. The accused, in the circumstances, has committed the offence under Section 489-C of the I.P.C. and he was rightly convicted. It appears, he had also suffered the full terms of imprisonment including default clause. Vijayan alias Kochimon v. State of Kerala, 2002 Cri LJ 187 : 2001(2) Andh LT (Cri) Ker 241 : 2001(2) Ker LJ 236 : 2001(4) Rec R 243.

The recovered currency notes in the instant case were obviously fake. They were fake even to the naked eye. The notes were photocopies as per the report of the Reserve Bank of India. The colour of notes was different and the notes were slightly shorter than that of genuine notes. It has held that possession of such poor quality of fake notes would not require any special type of mens rea for the purpose of conviction. Pirthi Singh v. State, 2006 Cr LJ 1393 (P&H).

Hashim* noted supra at verbatim with necessary changes in nomenclature applies to the facts of this case. By credible, cogent and reliable evidence tender the invertible conclusion is that the appellants have been rightly convicted and sentenced under various sections. The sentence as imposed do not warrant interference, particularly in view of the object for which the Sections 489-A, 489-B, 489-C, 489-D and 120-B of the IPC have been enacted.

From bare perusal of the statements of the prosecution witnesses mentioned above and the reasons mentioned above, it is clear that the prosecution has been able to prove the case against the accused appellants beyond reasonable doubt. From the accused appellants fake currency notes, and machinery used for preparing fake currency notes were recovered and they were found to be guilty of provisions of Sections 489-A, 489-B, 489-C and 489-D for which separately and collectively charged as mentioned above.

This Court has also gone through the findings arrived at by the trial Court on the question of sentence and I am in agreement with the view taken by the trial Court on this point. Arguments of the counsel for the appellants for releasing them for the period already undergone by them is also devoid of merit, hence rejected. The sentence of imprisonment imposed is just and proper, but I am of the considered opinion that in such types of heinous offences particularly relating to economic offences directly concerned with the State Exchequer, the accused appellants should serve sentence of imprisonment imposed upon them for full and no remission should be given to them, particularly when they were caught with huge fake currency notes and equipments used for preparing fake currency. Liyakat Alī v. State of Rajasthan, 2010 (2) CrLJ 2450 (Raj).

6. Resemblance—Making a counterfeit note exact imitation is not necessary. For making a counterfeit note the exact imitation is not necessary. Existence of the resemblance which might cause deception is enough to raise the presumption of intention to deceive. The three Judge Bench of the Hon'ble Supreme Court in The State of Uttar Pradesh vs. Hafiz Mohd. Ismail, Hafiz Jawed Ali, held that "counterfeit — Meaning — Colourable imitation" Exact imitation not essential — existence of resemblance which might cause deception is enough to raise presumption of intention to deceive". AIR 1960 SC 669. In K. Hashim vs. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 2005 SC 128 = 2005 (1) SCC 237 = 2005 CrLJ 143, the Hon'ble Supreme Court held that "Section 28, IPC defines the word "counterfeiting" in very wide terms. The main ingredients of counterfeiting as laid down in Section 28 are :

(1) causing one thing to resemble another thing;

(2) intending by means of that resemblance to practice deception; or

(3) knowing it to be likely that deception will thereby be practiced.

"Counterfeit" in Section 28 does not cannot an exact reproduction of the original counterfeited. Explanation 2 of Section 28 is of great significance. It lays down a rebuttable presumption where resemblance is such that a person might be deceived thereby. In such a case the intention or the knowledge is presumed unless the contrary is proved. There is no necessity of importing words like "colourable limitation" therein. In order to apply Section 28, what the Court has to see is whether one thing is made to resemble another thing and if that is so and if the resemblance is such that a person might be deceived by it, there will be a presumption of the necessary intention or knowledge to make the thing counterfeit, unless the contrary is proved.

Plea that report of expert showing that notes recovered were not exactly similar to currency notes and there were marked difference as such they were not counterfeit notes but only fancy notes is not tenable. Liyakat Ali vs. State of Rajasthan, 2010 (2) CrLJ 2450 (Raj).

1. Amendment.—The words in italics were substituted for the words "transportation for life" by Act, 26 of 1955, Section 117, and Schedule (with effect from 1.1.1956).

2. Scope.—In order to establish a charge under this section what the prosecution has to prove in the first place, is that the machinery, instrument or material found in the possession of the accused person is such as would be used in the production of a counterfeit note, and it that is proved the next element which is to be proved is that the accused knew or intended that such article would be used for the purpose of counterfeiting currency-notes. 10 MLT 108; AIR 1939 Sind 190 : 40 Cr LJ 810. CHAPTER - XX

OF OFFENCE RELATING TO MARRIAGE

Sec. 493. Cohabitation caused by a man deceitfully inducing a belief of lawful marriage.—Every man who by deceit causes any woman who is not lawfully married to him to believe that she is lawfully married to him and to cohabit or have sexual intercourse with him in that belief, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Synopsis

1. Scope 2911
2. Procedure 2912
3. Charge 2913
4. Complaint—Maintainability of 2913
5. Practice of deception 2913

1. Scope.—The offence here made punishable is committed when a man, whether married, or unmarried induces a woman to become, as she thinks, his wife, but in reality his concubine. The form of the marriage ceremony depends on the race or religion to which the persons contracting the marriage may belong. When the races are mixed as in India, and religion may be changed or dissembled this offence may be committed by a person falsely causing woman to believe that he is of the same race or creed as himself, and thus inducing her to contract a marriage, in reality unlawful, but which according to the law under which she lives, is valid. Suppose a person half English and half Asiatic by blood, calls himself a Mohammedan or a Hindu and by this deception causes a Mahommedan or a Hindu woman to go through the ceremony of marriage in a form which she deems valid and to cohabit with him, he has committed this offence. A man who deceives a woman into the belief that a certain ceremony which he causes to be performed by some accomplice, constitutes a valid marriage and thus induces the woman to cohabit with him, may be punished under this section".—Morgan and Macpherson. 433 ; (1971) 2 Andh WR 278 ; 1970 Cr LJ 1321 ; AIR 1957 Ori 198 : 1957 Cr LJ 981 (for essence of the offence). What is required is the deceitful means, an accused must induce a belief of a lawful marriage and then make the woman cohabit with him. (1971) 2 Andh WR 278 (also for the distinction of the offence under Sections 493 and 406, an offence under Section 493, in giving a false assurance of marriage while in Section 486, fraudulently going through the ceremony itself).

Where the accused is charged for an offence under Section 493, and during the pendency of the enquiry, the complainant dies, there is no abatement. AIR 1967 SC 933 : 1967 Cr LJ 943. The Sessions Judge had jurisdiction to try the offence where the committal Magistrate held an enquiry under Section 376, in the case of an accused summoned under Section 493, provided that the accused had opportunity to meet the charges framed. 1967 Cr LJ 1411 : see AIR 1969 All 409 : 1969 Cr LJ 1203 (in a charge under Sections 453, 376 and 417, in which the element of deceit is common).

The section envisages the case when a man deceitfully induces a woman to have sexual intercourse with him causing her to believe that she is lawfully married to him. In order to establish deception there must first be allegation that accused falsely induced her to believe that she is legally wedded to him. Though they were not married they had sexual union. What was alleged in the complaint was only a promise to marry in future. She was submitting to the petitioner even when he evaded registration of marriage. Held, that facts could not at any rate attract Section 493. 1987 Cri LJ 1106 (Ker).

The informant neither in the FIR nor in her statement given under Section 161, Cr.P.C. has alleged that she was induced by the petitioner and was made to believe that she was married at any time to the petitioner accused, nor it is the case of the informant that she ever believed that ceremony of marriage was performed between the informant and the accused. Thus the basic requirement of deception caused by a man on a woman in consequence of which she consented for sexual intercouse has not been made out. Further, it appears from the reading of the FIR that the sexual relationship between the informant and the accused was continuing right from 1996 whereas the FIR was loldged two years after i.e. in February 1998. As alleged by the informant, the petitioner refused to marry her and denied to be the father of the child conceived by her. In view of the legal position and the facts and circumstances of the case the Court quashed the charge under Section 493, IPC. Dayanandhi Nayak v. State of Orissa 2002 Cri LJ 371 (Orissa) : 2002(1) CCR 29 (Ori).

The evidence of the prosecution witnesses disclose that the petitioner by coming to the residence of the victim girl in the absence of her parents put vermilion on her forehead and induced her to believe that by such putting of vermilion on her forehead he has married her and thus obtaining consent caused sexual intercourse with her. Thus, the evidence on record amply proves that the prosecution has been liable to prove that the accused has practiced deceit and by that deceit made the PW2, who is not his wife, believe herself to be lawfully wedded to him and thereby she had sexual intercourse with the accused. Suren Orang v. State of Assam, 2005 Cr LJ 3402 (Gau) : 2006(1) DMC 65 : 2006(1) East Cri C 120 : 200(2) Gau LT 279.

It was alleged that the accused though already married, married the informant in temple but no evidence was brought on record to show that marriage had been solemnized with proper ceremonies in due form. The victim after marriage had allegedly lived with accused as his wife in a rented house and accused during this period had induced her to cohabit with him. It was held that accused could be convicted of neither under Section 493 nor under Section 494 as second marriage was not performed in due form including Saptpadi and accused had never induced her to cohabit by causing her to believe that she was lawfully married to him. Since she was a consenting party the charge of rape under Section 376 also could not be established. Raj Kumar Narayan v. State, 2003 Cr LJ (NOC) 207 (Jhar) : 2003 AIR Jhar HCR 1035 : 2002(3) East Cr C 338.

2. Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by a Magistrate of the first class.

3. Charge.—I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows :

That on or about the.......day of......at....you deceitfully caused a certain woman, to wit......who was not lawfully married to you, to believe that she was lawfully married to you, and in that belief, she cohabited or had sexual intercourse with you ; and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 493, of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

4. Complaint—Maintainability of.—Where there was complaint for the offence under Section 493, IPC, after 2 years of the occurrence of the alleged offence—indicating prosecutrix's knowledge about the marital status of the accused which was not stating the practice of any fraud upon her—Complaint was held to be not maintainable. Sauraba Bank v. (Smt). Gouri Kaudi alias Gouri, (1994) 1 East Cr C 470 (Ori) : 1994 Cr LJ 440.

5. Practice of deception.—In the case of Sauraba Barik v. Smt. Gouri Kandi alias Gauri, (1993) 2 Orissa LR 378; 1994 Cri LJ 440, the basic ingredients necessary to be established for bringing home the offence under Section 493, IPC are catalogued follows:

(i) The accused practiced deception:

(ii) Such deceit was to induce the woman to believe that she was lawfully married to him,

(iii) There was cohabitation or sexual intercourse as a result of the deception.

The same is the view in the case of Raghunath Padhy v. The State, AIR 1957 Orissa 198 : 1957 Cri LJ 989, Janaki Kumar Das v. Gajendra Das, (1990) 3 DCR 367 and Amruta Gadtia v. Trilochan Pradhan, (1993) 6 OCR 14 : 1993 Cri LJ 1022. The above view also finds support from a Full Bench decision of Kerala High Court in the case of Moideen Kutty Haji v. Kunhikove, AIR 1987 Kerela 184 : 1986 Cri LJ 1106 well as in the case.

Scrutinising the present case under the wide spectrum of the ratio laid down by the decisions the court observed that one of the ingredients mandatorily required to bring home the offence under Section 493, IPC is made out. The informant, neither in the FIR nor in her statement given under Section 161, Cr.P.C. has alleged that she was induced by the petitioner and was made to believe that she was married at any time to petitioner accused, nor it is the case of the informant that she ever believed that ceremony of marriage was performed between the informant and the accused. Thus, basic requirement of deception caused by a man on a woman in consequence of which she consented for sexual intercourse, has not been made out. Further, it appears from the reading of the FIR that the sexual relationship between the informant and the accused was continuing right from 1996 where as the FIR was lodged two years after i.e. in February, 1998. As alleged by the informant, the petitioner refused to marry her and denied to be the father of the child conceived by her. Dayanidhi Nayak v. State of Orissa and others, 2002 Cri LJ 371 : 2002(1) CCR 29 (Ori).

Sec. 494. Marrying again during life-time of husband or wife.—Whoever, having a husband or wife living, marries in any case in which such marriage is void by reason of its taking place during the life of such husband or wife, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Exception.—This section does not extend to any person whose marriage with such husband or wife has been declared void by a Court of competent jurisdiction.

Nor to any person who contracts a marriage during the life of a former husband or wife, is such husband or wife, at the time of the subsequent marriage, shall have been continually absent from such person for the space of seven years, and shall not have been heard of by such person as being alive within that time provided the person contracting such subsequent marriage shall, before such marriage takes place, inform the person with whom such marriage is contracted of the real state of facts so far as the same are within his or her knowledge.

STATE AMENDMENT

Andhra Pradesh.—Amended by A.P. Act No. 3 of 1992. Section 2 (w.e.f. 15.2.1992).

In A.P. the offence is cognizable, non-bailable, triable by the Magistrate of the first class and non-compoundable.

12. Section 494, and Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 2923

1. Essentials.—Where polygamy is not legal, the charge of bigamy requires to b supported by the following proofs ; (1) the first marriage of the accused must be proved ; (2) his second marriage must then be proved ; and (3) it must be shown that his first wife or husband was alive at the time of the second marriage".—Morgan and Macpherson, 434. Amongst the Hindus and the Mahommedans in the case of males polygamy is allowed ; hence bigamy is possible only in the case of a woman. In such a case it must be proved that the accused had a husband living : (2) that she married during the lifetime of the first husband : and (3) that such second marriage is void by reason of its taking place during the life of such husband. When the accused belonged to a caste, in which a second marriage is allowed, no such offence is committed. 7 CLR 354 : AIR 1942 Sind 92 : 43 Cr LJ 647. The causing of the publication of the banns of marriage is not an attempt to marry, but only a preparation or such an attempt. 1 All 316. Under this section no distinction is made between void and invalid marriages. AIR 1928 Lah 854. A penal statute requires mens rea even if it contains no express words to that effect. If a person charged with bigamy believed that he was legally free to marry again, it cannot be said that the crime was committed either intentionally or recklessly and the question whether the belief was unreasonable is irrelevant. AIR 1959 Ker 151 : 1959 MLJ (Cr) 262 : 1959 Cr LJ 591.

In a prosecution under Section 494, the prosecution has to prove that the first spouse was living at the time of the second marriage and further that the second marriage was void by reason of its taking place during the lifetime of the first husband or wife. In order to prove that the second marriage was void the prosecution must prove : (1) that there was a first marriage, (2) that the first marriage was not dissolved by law, (3) that the parties of the first marriage did not have the customary right of dissolution of marriage or that they did have the customary right of divorce but the marriage was not in fact dissolved by act of parties based on a customary right of divorce. 1961 (2) Cr LJ 469.

On a plain reading of Section 469, and consideration of the idea behind the legislature, it appears that what is prohibited is taking of the second spouse in the lifetime of the first spouse. AIR 1962 AP 446 : 1962, 1 ALT 91 : 1962 MLJ (Cr) 146 : 1962 (2) Cr LJ 596 ; AIR 1961 Punj 167 : 62 Punj LR 921 : ILR (1961) 1 Punj 153 : 1961 (1) Cr LJ 549. 1976 Cr LJ 1333 : (1983) 2 DVMC 286 ; 1981 Cr LJ 577 : 1980 MB test (Cr) 174 (for essential ingredients of the offence). The essential ingredients of the offence is the voidness of marriage under the personal law governing the partition ; AIR 1979 SC 713 : 1979 CR LJ 652 ; 1976 Cr LJ 1333 ; 1984 All LJ 652 ; 1982 Cr LJ 1005 : ILR 1982 ; 31 Raj 797 (difference between offence under Section 494 and 496).

The proof of "satapadi" an essential ceremony not established. Hence, factum of second marriage is not made out. Laxmi Devi (Smt) v. Satya Narayan, 1996 JIC 402 : (1995) 1 LW (Cr) : (1995) 1 East Cr C 415 (SC).

2. Scope.—The second marriage of a Hindu husband after conversion to Islam, without having his first marriage dissolved under law, would be invalid. The second marriage would be void in terms of the provisions of Section 494, IPC, and the apostate husband would be guilty of the offence under Section 494, IPC. Sarla Mudgal (Smt). v. President Kalyani. (1995) 3 SCC 635 at p. 651 : 1995 JIC 770 : 1995 (2) KLT 45 : (1995) 2 ALT (Cr) 50 : (1995) 2 East Cr C 50: 1995 MLJ (Cr) 496 : (1995) 3 CCR 12 : 1995 SCC (Cr) 569 : 1995 Cr R 772 (SC).

The statements recorded under Section 202, Cr PC, clearly established that 'P has also solemnised marriage with petitioner interference Manju. A prima facie offence under Section 494, IPC, is made out. Hence, the impugned order does not warrant any interference. Prakash Chand v. (Smt) Geeta, 1995 Cr LR 269 (Raj).

When Muslim married under Special Marriage Act entered into second marriage under Muslim Law, he is liable to be prosecuted for offence of bigamy. S. Radhika Sameena v. SHO Habibuagar, 1997 Cri LJ 1655 (AP) : 1997(1) DMC 132 : 1997(3) Rec Cr R 427 : 1996(2) Hindu LR 358 : 1996(4) Andh LD 1 : 1996(4) Andh LT 73 : 1996(2) APL 293.

3. Marries.—The word "marries" used in Section 494, means marries by some form of marriage known to or recognised by the law Merely showing that some form of marriage ceremony was gone through is not sufficient. The section does not refer to a valid marriage. A bigamous marriage cannot be a valid marriage, and apart from the bar of the first marriage, it may be that there may be some other legal impediment to the validity of the marriage of the man or woman, some legal impediment personal to the man or woman, such as consanguinity ; yet if the second marriage be a form recognised by or known to the law, that would be sufficient to satisfy this particular provision of the section. 175 Ind Cas 461 : 39 Cr LJ 656 : AIR 1938 Sind 127 ; see also 159 Ind Cas 855 : 37 Cr LJ 161 : 1936 Cr C 35 : AIR 1936 Nag 13 ; AIR 1960 Bom 393 : 60 Bom LR 428 : ILR 1958 700 : 1960 Cr LJ 1189 ; 1962 Ker LT 487 : ILR (1962) 2 Ker 89 : 1962 Ker LJ 824 ; AIR 1955 Cal 522 : 1955 Cr LJ 1347 : ILR (1257) 2 Cal 249 (in case a Christian marrying again a Hindu woman according to Hindu rites—the marriage was held not be a marriage in the eye of law) ; see also 1965 (2) Cr LJ 544 : AIR 1965 SC 1564. Under Mohammedan law, in case of a contract between the husband and wife at the time of marriage, empowering the latter to divorce herself in specific contingencies, then it does not require any declaration from a law Court. Mere exchange of garlands in between accused and alleged second wife will not amount to performing marriage as per Hindu rites. Admittedly, there was strained relationship between the complainant and the accused and several cases were pending between them including one of maintenance. In the circumstances, it was essential for the complainant to adduce cogent and reliable evidence in support of her case which she filed. Surprisingly her father, who was the most competent witness in the case, was withheld by the prosecution and not examined in the Court and there was no explanation for the same. In view of the facts and circumstances of the case the acquittal of all the accused persons of the charges was held proper. *Smt. The accused during the substance of earlier marriage had entered into second marriage with complainant. Complainant did not state as to how her marriage was performed and whether essential ingredients of Satpadi and Homa were performed or not. Evidence of witness also failed to prove the alleged second marriage of accused. Accused was held entitled to be acquitted. Admission of accused about his relationship under Section 50 of the Evidence Act was held not admissible in a bigamy case. Gopal Lekharu v. State of Assam, 2005 Cr LJ 4719 (Gau) : 2006 ALJ 163 N : 2005 (4) Gau LT 77

4. Abatement of bigamy.—In a case the complaint alleged that accused committed second marriage during subsistence of first marriage in presence of co-accused. As the record did not disclose any material relating to abatement on the part of co-accused in alleged second marriage, the complaint against the accused was held liable to be dismissed. Tulsamma v. Jagnnath, 2004 Cr LJ 4272 (Kant) : AIR 2004 Kant HCR 3111 : 2004(4) Crimes 252 : 2001(6) Kant LJ 43.

11. Cognizance of offence.—Offence was under Section 494, IPC and there was cognizance of the offence. It was held that offence can be taken only upon the complaint by person mentioned under Section 198, Cr PC. Sharat Chandra Sahoo v. State of Orissa, (1995) 9 OCR 563 (Ori).

Where there was complaint by wife against husband—Magistrate ordering police investigation which was held to be not valid. Under Section 198 (1), Cr PC. Magistrate can take cognizance only on complaint after according sworn statement of complain and witnesses if he finds material for the same. Karakiappa v. Smt. Renuka. (1995) 3 Kar LJ 303 (Karn).

12. Section 494, and Hindu Marriage Act, 1955.—Section 17 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, recognizes the principle of monogamous marriages amongst Hindus. Provisions of Section 17 have to be read in harmony and conjunction with the provisions of Section 494, IPC as Section 17 clearly provides that Sections, 494 and 495, IPC shall apply accordingly. The voidness of marriage under Section 17 is in fact essential ingredient of Section 494, IPC, because the second marriage will become void only because of the provisions of Section 17 of the Act. Gopal Lal v. State of Rajasthan

AIR 1979 SC, 713 : 1979 Cri LJ 652; Priya Bala Ghosh v. Suresh Chandra Ghosh AIR 1971 SC 1153 : 1971 Cri LJ 939; Bhanurao Shanker Lokhande v. State of Maharasthra AIR 1965 SC 1564 : 1965 Cri LJ 544. A complaint by a Hindu wife against her husband for the offence of bigamy punishable under Section 494, IPC is maintainable as the effect of Section 17 of the Act is to make Section 494, IPC applicable to Hindus. Durga Charan v. State of Delhi 2000 Cri LJ 3530 (Delhi) : 2000(86) DLT 795 : 2000(2) Chand Cri C 270 : 2000(3) Cur Cri R 681 (Del).

Section 17. of Hindu Marriage Act is to be read in harmony and conjunction with Section 494. AIR 1979 SC 713 : 1979 Cr LJ 652 ; (1982) 1 Bom CR 507 : 1982 Cr LJ 546 : 1984 All LJ 609.

Since under the Hindu Marriage Act a bigamous marriage is prohibited and has been constituted as an offence under Section 17 of the Act, any marriage solemnized by the husband during the subsistence of that marriage, in spite of his conversion to another religion, would be an offence triable under Section 17 of the Hindu Marriage Act read with Section 494, IPC. Since taking of cognizance of the offence under Section 494 is limited to the complaints made by the persons specified in Section 198 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, it is obvious that the person making the complaint would have to be decided in terms of the personal law applicable to the complainant and the respondent (accused) as mere conversion does not dissolve the marriage automatically and they continue to be 'husband and wife'.

Change of religion does not dissolve the marriage performed under the Hindu Marriage Act between two Hindus. Apostasy does not bring to an end the civil obligations or the matrimonial bond, but apostasy is a ground for divorce under Section 13 of Hindu Marriage Act as also a ground for judicial separation under Section 10 of the Hindu Marriage Act. Hindu law does not recognise bigamy. The Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 provides for "Monogamy". A second marriage during the lifetime of the spouse, would be void under Ss. 11 and 17 of the Hindu Marriage Act, besides being an offence. If the person feigns to have adopted another religion just for some wordly gain or benefit, it would be religious bigotry. Looked at from this angle, a person who mockingly adopts another religion where plurality of marriage is permitted so as to renounce the previous marriage and desert the wife, he cannot be permitted to take advantage of his exploitation as religion is not a commodity to be exploited. The institution of marriage under every personal law is a scared institution. Under Hindu Law marriage is a sacrament. Both have to be preserved. Lily Thomas v. Union of India, 2000 Cri LJ 2443 (SC) : 2000 Luck Cri R 375 : 2000(1) An LT (Cri) 363 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 1056.

In Bhaurao Shanker Lokhande v. State of Maharashtra (1965) 2 SCR 837 : AIR 1965 SC 1564; 1965) 2 Cri LJ 544 the apex Court held as under:—

> "Section 17 provides that any marriage between two Hindus solemnized after the commencement of the Act is void if at the date of such marriage either party had a husband or wife living and that the provisions of Sections 494 and 494, IPC shall apply accordingly. The marriage between two Hindus is void in view of Section 17 if two conditions are satisfied; (i) the marriage is solemnized after the commencement of the Act; (ii) at the date of such marriage, either party had a spouse living. If the marriage which took place between the appellant and Kamlabai in February, 1962, cannot be said to be solemnized, that marriage will not be void by virtue of Section 17 of the Act and Section 494, IPC, will not apply to such parties to the marriage as had a spouse living."

This decision was followed in Kanwal Ram v. H.P. Administration (1966) 1 SCR 539: IR 1966 SC 614: (1966 Cri LJ 472). The matter was again considered in Priya Bala hosh v. Suresh Chandra Ghosh (1971) 3 SCR 961; AIR 1971 SC 1153:1971 (1) SCC 64; (1971 Cri LJ 939 In Gopal Lal v. State of Rajasthan AIR 1979 SC 713 : 1979 (2) CR 1171: 1979 (2) SCC 170: (1979 Cri LJ 652) Murtaza Fazal Ali J speaking for the ourt observed as under:—

> "Where a spouse contracts a second marriage while the first marriage is still subsisting the spouse would be guilty of bigamy under Sec. 494 if it is proved that the second marriage was a valid one in the sense that the necessary ceremonies required by law or by custom have been actually performed. The voidness of the marriage under Section 17 of the Hindu Marriage Act is in fact one of the essential ingredients of Section 494 because the second marriage will become void only because of the provisions of Section 17 of the Hindu Marriage Act."

It was contended in Sarla Mudga's case (1995) AIR SCW 2326 : AIR 1995 SC 531:1995 Cri LJ 2926 that making a convert Hindu liable for prosecution under the enal Code would be against Islam, the religion adopted by such person upon onversion. Such a plea raised demonstrates the ignorance of the petitioners about the enets of Islam and its teaching. The concept of Muslim Law is based upon the edifice of hariat Muslim Law as traditionally interpreted and applied in India permits more than ne marriage during the subsistence of one and another though capacity to do justice etween co-wives in law is condition precedent. Even under the Muslim Law plurality of arriages is not unconditionally conferred upon the husband. It would, therefore, be oing injustice to Islamic Law to urge that the convert is entitled to practice bigamy otwithstanding the continuance of his marriage under the law to which he belonged efore conversion. The violators of law who have contracted the second marriage cannot e permitted to urge that such marriage should not be made a subject-matter of rosecution under the general Penal law prevalent in the country. The progressive utlook and wider approach of Islamic Law cannot be permitted to be squeezed and arrowed by unscrupulous litigants, apparently indulging in sensual lust sought to be uenched by illegal means, who apparently are found to be guilty of the commission of he offence under the law to which they belonged before their alleged conversion. Lily homas v. Union of India 2000 CriLJ 2433 (SC) : 2000 Luck Cri R 375 : 2000(1) An LT Cri) 363 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 1056.

5. Complaint 2927

1. Object.—The act which, in the English Law, is designated as bigamy is always, an immoral act. But it may be one of the most serious crime that can be committed. It may be attended with circumstances which may excuse, though they cannot justify it.

"The married man who, by passing himself off as unmarried, induces a modest woman to become, as she thinks, his wife, but in the reality his concubine. and the mother of an illegitimate issue is guilty of one of the most cruel frauds that can be conceived. Such a man we would punish with exemplary severity.

"But suppose that person arrives from England and pays attention to one of his country woman at Calcutta. She refuses to listen to him on any other terms than those of marriage. He candidly owns that he is already married. She still presses him to go through the ceremony with her. She represents to him that if they live together without being married she shall be an outcaste from society, that nobody in India knows that he has a wife, that he may very likely never fail in with his wife again and that she is ready to take the risk. The lover accordingly agrees to go through the form of marriage. It cannot be disputed that there is an immense difference between these two cases".—Report of the Law Commissioners.

Under Sections 494 and 495, a complaint may be made by the person aggrieved but if the wife knew that the husband was married already, she cannot complain. 1967 MLJ (Cr) 550. For abetment of second marriage if an offence. See 1982 Cr LJ 11362 : 1982 Mad LJ (Cr) 19. Complaint can be filed by the first wife and not by the second wife. 1984 Hindu LR 65.

2. Ingredients.—An offence under Section 495, IPC, is committed only when the offence of bigamous marriage under that section is committed by concealing the fact of former marriage from the person with whom subsequent marriage is performed. (1988) 15 Reports 24 (Guj).

3. Procedure.—Not cognizable — Warrant — Bailable — Not compoundable — Triable by a Magistrate of the first class.

4. Charge.—The charge should run thus :

I (name and designation of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows :

'That on or about the....(date)...at...(time)....(place)....having a wife (or husband), namely......living, married again Smt/Sri.....which marriage is void by reason of its taking place within the lifetime of such wife (or husband), namely....... and you having concealed from Smt/Sri.....with whom the subsequent marriage was contracted the fact of the former marriage and thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 495, IPC, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

5. Complaint.—The trial Court took cognizance of offence on the basis of prima facie evidence on record. The petitioner is legally competent to file the complaint and it cannot be quashed on ground of delay. Balbir Singh v. Amarit Kaur, (1995) 1 CC Cases 428 (P & H).

Sec. 496. Marriage ceremony fraudulently gone through without lawful marriage.—Whoever, dishonestly or with a fraudulent intention, goes through the ceremony of being married, knowing that he is not thereby lawfully married, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for .a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

STATE AMENDMENT

Synopsis

2. Procedure....................2928
3. Charge 2928

1. Scope.—"A person, who by deceit, causes a woman to co-habit with him under the belief that she is his wife is punishable under Section 493. Where there is deceit or not as between the man or woman, if there is a dishonest or fraudulent intention on the part of those or other of those who go through the marriage ceremony knowing the marriage is not a lawful one, the present section is applicable. As in the case of a pretended lawful marriage, to enable the parties to obtain property so settled to come to one of them on marriage or as if a man wishing to obtain money, jewels or other property belonging to a woman, should deceive her into going through an invalid marriage ceremony, in order that he may obtain them. The mere abuse of the formalities of marriage where there is no deceit practised on the woman, and no 'dishonest or fraudulent' intention, is not an offence punishable by this Code whether the ceremony partakes of a religious character or not".—Morgan and Macpherson, 437.

A conviction under this section for falsely undergoing a marriage ceremony must be supported by proof of fraudulent or dishonest intent. The fact of permitting an illegal marriage to take place in one's house does not constitute the abetment thereof, as the law construes abetment. WR 1864 Cr 13. Section 486 of the Penal Code, applies to cases in which a ceremony is gone through which does not constitute, but it is believed by one of the parties to constitute a marriage. Rat Un Cr C 77. To establish a charge under Section 496, IPC, it is not enough to show that the marriage may be set aside on the ground of fraud or declared a nullity ; it is incumbent on the prosecution to go further and to prove that the accused knew that there was no valid marriage and he has gone through a show of marriage with a fraudulent or ulterior object in view. Where the accused who was a low class Brahmin falsely represented himself as a high class Brahmin to the complainant who was a high class Brahmin and induced her to give her daughter in marriage to him. Held, that the accused was not liable to be convicted of the offence under this section. 41 CWN 540 : ILR (1937) 2 Cal 221 : 167 Ind Cas 708 : 38 Cr LJ 577 : AIR 1937 Cal 214 (FB). Where the accused is charged with the principal offence under Section 496, and for abetment thereof there must be a complaint under Section 198, Cr. Pro. Code. AIR 1931 Mad 247. Where the parties were Mahommedans and all that alleged was that the complainant objected to the marriage on account of its being within prohibited decrees and the parties went to another place and got married. Held, that an offence under Section 496, was not committed. AIR 1931 Mad 247. No offence under this section has been committed where the act does not amount to going through the ceremony of being married, knowing that he is not thereby is lawfully married. 48 Cr LJ 842.

The necessary ingredients of the offence under the section are (1) that the accused want through the ceremony of marriage (2) that when he went through such ceremony, the accused knew that notwithstanding those ceremonies, he was not thereby lawfully married to the complaint and (3) that he went through the ceremony with a fraudulent intention and dishonestly. 1982 Cr LJ 1005.

2. Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by a Magistrate of the first class.

3. Charge.—"I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.), hereby charge you (name of the accused), as follows :

That on or about the..........................day of...................... at.................you dishonestly (or fraudulently) went through the ceremony of being married to AB knowing that you were not thereby lawfully married, and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 496, of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge. .

Sec. 497. Adultery.—Whoever has sexual intercourse with a person who is and whom he knows or has reason to believe to be the wife of another man, without the consent or connivance of that man, such sexual intercourse not amounting to the offence of rape, is guilty of the offence of adultery, and shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, or with fine, or with both. In such case the wife shall not be punishable as an abettor.

1. Scope.—"The offence of rape has been defined by Section 375. When the sexual intercourse does not amount to that offence, and when it takes place between a stranger and a woman who is and whom the offender knows or has reason to believe to be, the wife of another man, the offence of adultery is committed. In support of a charge of adultery, there must be proof ; (1) that the woman is married ; (2) that there was sexual intercourse ; and (3) that there were the circumstances which tended to show that the accused person at the time knew, or had reason to believe, that the woman was the wife of another man. If appears that the intercourse was by reason or connivance of the husband, this offence has not been committed. 2. Object.—This section is intended for the protection of husbands who alone can institute prosecution for offence under it. 1 Weir 569. Adultery must be without consent or connivance of husband. AIR 1964 Mys 67.

3. If void as Contravening Act 14 & 15 of the Constitution.—Section 497 does not contravene any of the fundamental rights laid down in the constitute and cannot therefore be held to be had or void under Article 13, of the Constitution. It cannot be said that Section 497, does not operate equally upon all persons as required by Article 14, in that women are absolved from any punishment under the section. Nor can it be said that the section offends against Article 15 (1), in that in enacting the section the legislature discriminated in favour of woman and against men on ground of sex. There is no such contravention. But assuming it to be such the alleged discrimination in favour of women is saved by Article 15 (3). 53 Bom LR 736 : AIR 1951 Bom 470. Sex is a sound classification and although there can be no discrimination in general on the ground, the constitution itself provides for special provisions in the case of women and children by clause (3), of Article 15. Articles 14 and 15, thus read together validate the last sentence of Section 497, which prohibits the women from being punished as an abetment of the offence of adultery. AIR 1954 SC 321 : 1954 SCJ 385 : 1954 SCR 930 : 1953 SCA 398 : 1934 Cr LJ 886 (affirming AIR 1951 Bom 470) ; AIR 1985 SC 1618 (no violation also of Article 21, of the Constitution because of no provisions in the section for leaving wife).

4. Cases.—Where the husband of a woman preferred a complaint of offence under Sections 494 and 408, of the Penal Code, held, that the complaint did not include an offence under Section 497, and that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to try the accused for such offence. Rat Un Cr C 531 : AWN 1881, 112. Where after a decree had given an option to the wife to return to her husband or to pay him money the accused contracted, its marriage with the woman, after payment of the money mentioned in the decree. Held, that the accused could not be convicted for adultery, as it could not be held that the accused and the woman did not believe that the latter was at liberty to re-marry. 5 BH Cr C 17. Where a husband omits to take any steps against the accused for six or seven years, held, that the offence under the section has been condoned by the husband and the accused cannot be convicted under the section. 1 CWN 498. Where the accused was discharged for want of a proof of marriage, retrial for the examination of the wife cannot be allowed. 11 Cal 81. The question of validity of the marriage is vital to the commission of an offence under Chapter XX of the Penal Code. The proof of a de facto marriage is not sufficient for a conviction under Sections 497, 998, Penal Code. 7 CWN 143. A conviction under Section 498, on a complaint by the husband of an offence under Section 497, IPC, was set aside by the Chief Court. 18 PR 1873 Cr. It is not necessary to make a marriage complete that there should be cohabitation. 4 PR 1874 Cr. In a case of adultery, sexual intercourse must be proved, the sexual intercourse required for adultery being there as identical thing as the sexual intercourse required for rape. The difference lies in the mode of proof ; in rape no presumption of sexual intercourse can be made ; in adultery, it can be from evidence pointing strongly to an inference of guilt. It is not necessary, therefore, that there should be direct evidence of an act of adultery, not that the adulterer should know whose wife the woman is provided he knew she was a married woman. 21 WR Cr 13. It is very difficult to get actual eye-witness of the commission of adultery or sexual intercourse and the Court has to rely upon the circumstances and conduct of the persons concerned. 1961 (2) Cr LJ 459 : 1964 (1) Cr LJ 250 (wife along with her grown up daughters lying in accused's home for long time—no evidence to show occupation of same room by wife and accused—no reference of sexual intercourse can be drawn).

1. Scope.—The offence which the present section punishes is the taking o enticing away for the unlawful purpose mentioned, a married woman from her husban or from those who have the care of her on his behalf. It is a matter whether the wife i shown to be a consenting party or not. Her consent is not in question. To support charge under this section, it must be proved : (1) that the woman is married and tha fact is known to the offender, or that he has reason to believe it ; (2) that she has bee taken away or enticed from her husband, or from her relatives or friends with whom sh may be living in her husband's absence ; (3) that the woman may have illicit sexua intercourse with himself or some other person. Persons who conceal or detain a woma who has been taken away knowing the circumstances and having the guilty intentio above mentioned, are also punishable under the present section. It is this intentio which is the main ingredient in the offence. A person, who, being a relative of a marrie woman would take her away from her husband's house or would conceal or detain he from her husband on account of the misconduct or cruelty of the husband or for an other cause, but without any intention that she should have illicit intercourse with any person, commits no offence".—Morgan and Macpherson, 439.

The two essential ingredients of an offence under this section are that the woman enticed away is the wife of the complainant and that the fact of the marriage is known to the accused. 15 Ind Cas 813 : 10 All 580 : 1 Weir 569 : 9 PR 1889 Cr : 1 Weir 571 : 16 PR 1891 Cr : 61 Ind Cas 652 : 22 Cr LJ 412 : AIR 1931 Lah 194 : 141 Ind Cas 40 : 10 OWN 833. The fact and the legality of the marriage is a material element in such a case. 11 ALJ 994 : 9 Mad 9 : 20 All 166 : 3 OC 342 : 17 PR 1893 Cr ; 2 PR 1879 Cr : 2 SLR 22 Cr : 5 PR 1894 : 6 Mad 374 : 26 Cr LJ 1376 : 5 Cr R 252 : 78 PR 1866 Cr : 13 CLR 125 : AWN 1898, 186 ; AIR 1925 Oudh 300 : 26 Cr LJ 1376 : 89 Ind Cas 464. Where the marriage is disputed there should be strict proof of the same. 145 Ind Cas 874 : 34 Cr LJ 1092 : 38 CWN 113 : AIR 1933 Cal 880 : 1933 Cr C 1530. The word "conceals or detains" must be taken to extend to the enticing or inducing a wife to withhold or conceal herself from her husband and assisting her to do so, as well as to physical restraint or prevention of will or action. 28 SLR 140 : 151 Ind Cas 175 : 35 Cr LJ 1254 : 1934 Cr C 625 : AIR 1934 Sind 72.

In order to constitute detention for the purpose of Section 498, Penal Code, there must be evidence to show that the accused did something which had the effect of preventing the woman from returning to her father. AIR 1951 Kut 17. The enticement of the wife must be from the control of the husband before the entice can be convicted under this section. AIR 1934 Sind 10 : 27 SLR 482 : 35 Cr LJ 816 : 148 Ind Cas 753. The gist of that offence under Section 498, IPC, is in depriving the husband of his proper control over the wife for the purpose stated in the section. Although any deposition of the woman or any consent or willingness on her part would be perfectly immaterial to the guilty of the accused there must be some influence from the accused operating on the woman or co-operating with her inclination at the time final step is taken which causes a severance of the woman from her husband, for the purpose of causing such step to be taken. It is not enough to constitute the offence that the woman left her husband's house or that she was afterwards seen passing along with the accused. There must be evidence that the woman was not acting as a free agent throughout or that any allurement or inducement or encouragement was held out to her by the accused to stay away from her husband. 65 CLJ 421 : 41 CWN 931 : 170 Ind Cas 903 : 38 CLJ 986 : AIR 1937 Cal 460 ; see also 168 Ind Cas 607 : 38 Cr LJ 576 : 39 PLR 488 : AIR 1937 Lah 317. A person cannot be held guilty of an offence under Section 498, IPC, if it is not proved beyond all reasonable doubt that he abducted the woman from the custody of her husband with the intention of having illicit intercourse with her. 39 PLR 191. In the absence of any improper intention an accused should not be charged under this section. 1944 AMLJ 53. There need not be any enticement. Taking away of another's wife with necessary intention constitutes offence. AIR 1950 Mad 13 : 4 DLR (Mad) 215 : (1949) 1 MLJ 610. The taking of a girl from the care of her mother with her mother's consent is not taking or enticing away within the meaning of Section 498, IPC, 165 Ind Cas 497 : 37 Cr LJ 1155 : 39 CWN 1055. Where the intention necessary to constitute an offence punishable under this section has not been proved, and the accused is in fact the real uncle of the woman alleged to have been enticed away, his conviction is liable to be set aside. 38 PLR 570. The word "taking" is intended to mean something different from enticing. It cannot mean taking by force, because this would amount to abduction. A case under Section 498, is sufficiently established, if it can be shown that the accused personally and actively assisted the wife to get away from her husband's house or from the custody of any person who was taking care of her on behalf of the husband. Of course the taking must be with the "intention", stated in the section. 159 Ind Cas 140 : 39 CWN 1280 : 1935 Cr C 1069 : AIR 1935 Cal 677 ; 1955 All WR (HC) 679 : 1956 All LJ 895.

It must be proved that the accused enticed the complainant's wife from her husband's or father's house with intent to have illicit intercourse with her. 1 CWN 498 : 13 ALJ 251 : 4 WR Cr 50 : 15 PR 1883 Cr : 22 WR Cr 72. The Chief Court declined to interfere with a conviction in a case where the husband charged a wife with bigamy and has father and mother with abetment—these latter being convicted under Section 498, because the facts complained of as constituting an offence under Section 494, Penal Code, were held sufficient to bring the proceedings under Section 498, Penal Code, within the Magistrate's jurisdiction. 19 PR 1882 Cr. The offence contemplated by Section 498, is complete if it appears that the accused went away with the woman in such a manner as to deprive her free which does not diminish the criminality of the act. 4 Bom LR 435 : 159 Ind Cas 140 : 39 CWN 1280 : 1935 Cr C 1069 : AIR 1935 Cal 677.

It is not necessary to inflict a severe sentence on an accused person convicted under Section 498, IPC, when the husband did not take care of his wife, and took no action for a number of months against the accused after he was informed of the abduction. 26 PLR 429. In a prosecution under this section when it appears that the woman is an active abettor in her own abduction, the sentence should be a light one. 27 PLR 642. The object of Section 498, IPC, is not so much to protect a husband as inflict punishment on those who interfere with the sacred relation of marriage. A severe sentence is justified in the absence of extenuating circumstances. 1952 Cr LJ 705 : AIR 1952 Mys 34. The wife's complicity in the transaction is no more material on a charge under this section than it is on a charge of adultery. 1952 MWN 604 : (1952) 2 MLJ 212.

The provision of Section 428, like those of Section 497, are intended to pretest the rights of the husband and not those of wife. The gist of the offence under Section 498, appears to be the deprivation of the husband of his custody and proper control over his wife with the object of having illicit intercourse with her. The consent of the wife to deprive her husband of his proper control over her would not be material. It is the infringement of the rights of the husband coupled with the intention of illicit intercourse that is the essential ingredient of the offence under Section 498. AIR 1959 SC 436 : 1959 SCJ 457 : 1959 All Cr R 243 : SCJ 457 : (1959) 2 SCA 116 : 1959 Cr LJ 527. The word "detains" means by deprivation and according to the ordinary use of language "keeps back". It need not necessarily be by physical force, it may be by persuasion or by allurements and blandishments. 35 Bom LR 1046 : AIR 1933 Bom 389 ; see also Oudh 256. "To detain" means to keep back from somebody or to restrain. Where the woman was willing to live with another and there was nothing to show that she was in any way restrained, held, that she was not "detained" within the meaning of this section. 103 Ind Cas 559 : 38 Cr LJ 703 : AIR 1927 Oudh 318. Section 498, is intended to protect the husband and not intended for the benefit of e wife. It cannot be said that in a case where a woman is willing to live with her ısband, may be even for good reasons and she comes and lives with another person as husband and wife, the other person should not be held to have taken the wife withi the meaning of Section 498. 1952 MWN 604 (2) : (1952) 2 MLJ 212. Even if marriag and offender's knowledge of it be taken as proved by the prosecution yet, unles detention or intention to have illicit intercourse with the woman detained has bee established the offender can not be convicted under Section 498. AIR 1954 HP 39 1954 Cr LJ 845. In the State of Kashmir an elopement which was the result of the joi adventure of a married woman with a lover would in view of the addition to Section 49 RPC, that in such cases the woman would be guilty as abettor, certainly come withi the mischief of Section 498. RPC AIR 1955 J&K 18 : 1955 Cr LJ 1188.

If the willingness of the wife is immaterial as defence under the first thre categories mentioned in Section 498, it can not be treated as a material fact in dealin with the last category of delinquencies mentioned in this said section. AIR 1959 SC 43 : (1959) 1 SCR Sup 464 : 1959 SCJ 527.

The term "detention" means keeping back a wife from her husband or any perso having care of her on behalf of a husband with the requisite intention. Ibid. Woman' willingness or consent or disposition to stay away the company protection and care her husband is perfectly immaterial to the guilt of the accused. 1977 Cr LJ 1735.

2. Proof of marriage.—No hard and fast rule can be laid down as the proof of valid marriage. It depends upon the custom of the people to which the lady belongs. AI 1949 All 237 : 50 Cr LJ 359.

3. Detain.—The word "detain" in Section 498, has its ordinary meaning of "keepin back". There are various ways of "keeping back". It need not necessarily be by physica force but there should be something in the nature of control or influence which ca properly be described as a keeping back of the woman. It cannot properly be said that man detains a woman if the latter has no desire to leave him and on the contrar wishes to stay with him. ILR 1937 Bom 244 : 169 Ind Cas 526 : 38 Cr LJ 769 : 39 Bo LR 61 : AIR 1937 Bom 186 ; AIR 1949 All 23 : 50 Cr LJ 82 : AIR 1940 Cal 477 : 41 C LJ 954 ; AIR 1939 Lah 295 ; AIR 1938 Pat 482 : 1953 Cr LJ 1802 : AIR 1953 Punj 263 AIR 1955 Pat 258 : 1956 BLJ 184 : ILR 35 Pat 93 : 1957 Cr LJ 653 (affirmed in AI 1959 SC 436) AIR 1954 HP 39 : 1954 Cr LJ 845. It is true that the word 'detains' ma denote detention of a person against his or her will but to the context of the section it i impossible to give this meaning of the said word. Detention in the context must mea back a wife from her husband or any other person having the care of her on behalf o her husband with the requisite intention such keeping may be by force or b persuasion, allurement or blandishments, which may have caused the willingness o the woman or may have encouraged or co- operated with her initial inclination to leave her husband. AIR 1959 SC 436 : 1959 Cr LJ 527 (over rulling 48 CWN 980 : ILR 1939 Lah 148 : AIR 1939 295 : 40 Cr LJ 760). Providing shelter to a married woman is such inducement as to amount to detention within the meaning of this section. 177 Ind Cas 706 : 19 Pat LT 795 : 1938 PWN 817 : 39 Cr LJ 952 : AIR 1938 Pat 432. The word "detain", must be construed ejusdem generis with enticement and concealment, some definite meaning must be attached to it. 40 CWN 996 : AIR 1936 Cal 450. There must be something in the nature of control or influence which can properly be described as a keeping back of a woman in question. 1936 AMLJ 11.

4. Such woman.—The words "such woman" in Section 498, IPC, do not mean such a woman as has been so enticed as mentioned in the section, but mean such woman whom the accused knows or has reason to believe to be the wife of another man. The language of the section can bear no other meaning. 1937 AWR 203 : 168 Ind Cas 833 : 1937 PLR 547 : 38 Cr LJ 621 : 1937 PLR 417 : AIR 1937 All 353. The words "any such woman in the expression" conceals or detains with that intent any such woman do not mean any woman taken or enticed away as described in the first part of the section but refer to woman who is and whom the offender knows or has reason to believe to be the wife of another. If therefore without any taking or enticement a woman leaves her husband and goes to the offender who thereafter prevent her by allurement or blandishment from returning to her husband, the offender must be held to have concealed or detained her within the meaning of the section. AIR 1959 SC 436 : 1959 Cr LJ 527 : see also 1968 Cr LJ 1352 : 1982 Cr LJ (NOC) 179.

5. Proof and evidence.—It can not be held that in a case of enticing a married woman with intent to have illicit intercourse with her, the uncorroborated evidence of the enticed woman is insufficient to base a conviction upon. AIR 1952 Mys 34 : 1952 Cr LJ 705. The intention has to be gathered from the surrounding circumstances. 1952 Cr LJ 705 : AIR 1952 Mys 34.

For a conviction under Section 498, there should be a proper complaint by the husband. AIR 1958 All 76 : 1958 Cr LJ 11 : 1982 All Cr R 392 (proof that the woman was a married woman, that she was taken or enticed concealed or detained and that it was with the intention that the accused or some one may have illicit intercourse with her) ; (1966) 32 Cut LT 5 : AIR 1980 SC 1729 : 1980 Cr LJ (NOC) 176 (imperently improbable that a first census would harbour evil design).

Where a finding completely required cogent consistent and reliable evidence, it was held that the High Court rightly relied upon such testimony and convicted accused. *K.R. Soorachari v. That on or about the......day of.......at.......you took away'(or enticed away or concealed or detained) AB, the wife of CD, whom you then knew (or had reason to believe) to be the wife of the said CD, from the said CD, (or from EF), who has the care of the said AB, might have illicit intercourse with some person (if known, name him), and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 498, of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

8. Jurisdiction.—A complaint evidenced commission to an offence by the accused. Held, the Magistrate as competent to take cognizance of the offence. (1986) 2 Crimes 435.

9. Acquittal.—Main ingredient being enticing away married woman from husband with criminal intent—non-examination of that woman, a material witness entitled accused to be acquitted. Natarajan v. Ramanujam, 1997 Cri LJ 389 (Mad).

In a Jharkhand case, a married woman was allegedly allured and enticed to get her married with the wealthy person. The statement of victim was not corroborated by independent witness. According to village witnesses she used to flee away from her parents house without informing them and used to move with other person. Her parents also stated that they had no knowledge of their daughter being allured or enticed away by the accused. The evidence also showed that she had deserted her husband after living with him for 14-15 days. Conviction of accused was held improper. Abdul Latif v. Latif Mian, 2004 Cr LJ (NOC) 175 : 2004 AIR Jhar HCR 640.

1. Procedure.—Cognizable—Not bailable—Triable by a Magistrate of the first class.

2. Constitutionality of Section 498A—Mere possibility of abuse—Effect.—The object of the provision is prevention of the dowry menace. But as has been rightly contended by the petitioner many instances have come to light where the complaints are not bona fide and have been filed with oblique motive. In such cases acquittal of the accused does not in all cases wipe out the agnomy suffered during and prior to trial. Sometimes adverse media coverage adds to the misery. The question, therefore, is what remedial measures can be taken to prevent abuse of the well-intentioned provision. Merely because the provision is constitutional and intra vires, does not give a licence to unscrupulous persons to wreck personal vendetta or unleash harassment. It may, therefore, become necessary for the legislature to find out ways how the makers of frivolous complaints or allegations can be appropriately dealt with. Till then the Courts have to take care of the situation within the existing frame work. Sushil Kumar Sharma v. Union of India, 2005 Cr LJ 3439 (SC) : AIR 2005 SC 3100 : 2005 AIR SCW 3569 : 2005 AIR Jhar HCR 2108 : 2005(5) Supreme 137.

Possibility of misuse. It is well settled that mere possibility of abuse of a provision of law does not per se invalidate a legislation. It must be presumed, unless the contrary is proved, that administration and application of a particular law would be done "not with an evil eye and unequal hand". See A. Thangal Kunju Musaliar v. M. Venkatichalam Potti., 1955 (2) SCR 1196 : AIR 1955 SC 191 : AIR 1956 SC 246. Satish Kumar Batra and Ors. v. State of Haryana, AIR 2009 SC 2180 : 2009 (5) SCR 451 (SC) : 2009 (12) SCC 491 : 2009 (5) JT 403 (SC) : 2009 (5) Scale 280 (SC) : 2009 (3) SLT 379 (SC) : 2009 CrLJ 2447 (SC) : 2009 (2) JCC 1341 (SC).

3. Scope.—When husband suspecting fidelity of wife, illtreating her, calling her prostitute, forcing her to state of being half-fed or left over and wife driven to commit suicide, it can be said that the offence proved against husband. Sarojakasan Shankaran Nayar v. State of Maharashtra, (1995) 2 Bom CR 47 (Bom).

Husband and in-laws set on fire after pouring kerosere. It was argued that Tahsildar has not obtained the certificate from the Medical Officer regarding condition of the deceased, that itself is not sufficient to discard the dying declaration. What is essential required is that the person who recorded the dying declaration must be satisfied that the deceased was in a fit state of mind. The certification by the doctor is essentially a rule of caution and, therefore, the voluntary and truthful nature of the declaration can be established otherwise. The evidence of doctor clearly shows that the deceased was in a sound state of mind while giving the statement before the Tahsildar. In such circumstances, we are of the view that such a dying declaration has got due weight in the evidence. Further, as stated earlier, the doctor has explained that though the deceased sustained 100% burn injuries, she was in a position to talk. In such circumstances, her statement cannot be rejected on the ground that she sustained severe burn injuries. Normally, the person on the verge of death will not implicate somebody falsely. Even if we accept some contradiction in complaint, in the light of dying declaration coupled with the evidence of eye-witnesses, there is ample evidence on record to hold that the appellants ill-treated the deceased and subjected her to cruelty by giving both mental and physical torture and in furtherance of their common intention only to commit the murder of the deceased, poured kerosene and set fire on her who ultimately succumbed to the injuries on the same day in the District Hospital.

The analysis of the prosecution witnesses and Taluk Executive Magistrate who recorded the dying declaration of deceused clearly proves the involvement of appellants in the commission of offence as charged and they were rightly awarded sentence of life imprisonment. Govindappa & Ors. vs. State of Karnataka, 2010 (3) CriLJ 3439 (SC).

Offence under Section 498-A, IPC, is a continuing offence and does and abate for charge or place of marital residence nor does the offence lapse for the lapse of time. Motahar Hossain In re (1995) 3 CCR 245 (Cal).

Cruelty by husband or his relative — Improvements in evidence. It is to be noted that in the first information report the thrust of allegations was primarily directed against the acquitted accused persons. They have been acquitted by the High Court. So far as the evidence of witnesses is concerned, it is true as noticed by the High Court, that there were lots of improvements. But the High Court found that even if these improvements are kept out of consideration, the evidence was sufficient to hold the present appellants guilty. It is to be noted that these improvements primarily related to relatives i.e. appellant Nos. 2 and 3. Therefore, in our considered opinion the acquittal as directed qua the co-accused persons should have also been done in the case of appellant relatives. However, the evidence is clear and cogent so far as the husband is concerned.

In the instant case the evidence of witnesses clearly establishes the accusations so far as the accused/husband is concerned and therefore we find nothing infirm in the judgment of the High Court in upholding the conviction of husband. The sentence imposed was two years. It is on record that he has undergone sentence of more than 13 months. He has been released on bail pursuant to order. Therefore, while upholding the conviction, sentence is reduced to the period already undergone. So far as the relatives are concerned, the prosecution has not been able to establish the accusations so far as they are concerned. Their appeal is accepted and the conviction is set aside. Satish Kumar Batra and Ors. v. State of Haryana., AIR 2009 SC 2180 : 2009 (5) SCR 451 (SC) 2009 (12) SCC 491 : 2009 (5) JT 403 (SC) : 2009 (5) Scale 280 (SC) : 2009 (3) SLT 379 (SC) : 2009 CrLJ 2447 (SC) : 2009 (2) JCC 1341 (SC).

Scanty evidence of relatives proving. So far as Section 498-A is concerned according to learned Counsel for the appellants the evidence is scanty but it is to be noticed that both the trial Court and the High Court having regard to the evidence of relatives concluded that the dowry demand was made. We do not find any infirmity with the conclusions arrived at more particularly in view of the evidence of witnesses and therefore, there is no scope for interference with the conclusions relating to Section 498-A IPC. Syed Hakkim vs. State, 2009 (4) SCC 324 : 2009 CrLJ 1891 : 2009 (3) JT 443 : 2009 (2) SCR 1060 : 2009 (3) Scale 277 : 2009 (2) SLT 632.

For proof of cruelty there must be reasonable nexus between cruelty and suicide. Ravindar Pyarelal Bidhan. v. State of Maharashtra., 1993 Cri LJ 3019 (Bom).

Cruelty is not mere harassment or mere demand for property etc. Ravindar Pyarelal Bidhan v. State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cri LJ 3019 (Bom).

Section 498-A, of the IPC, extends protection to the woman from the whims and caprices of man. This section was incorporated in the statute to fill in the lacuna in the existing law, so that if the wife commits suicide, the 'guilty' does not escape 'Cruelty' as defined in Section 498-A, means any wilful conduct which is of such a nature as is likely to drive the woman to commit suicide or to cause grave injury or danger to life, limb or health whether mental or physical of the woman, or harassment of the woman where such harassment is with a view to coercing her or any person related to her to meet any unlawful demand for any property or valuable security or is on account of failure by her or, any person related to-her to meet such demand. The expression 'cruelty' takes within its sweep both mental and physical agony and torture. The concept of cruelty varies from place to place and individual to individual and according to the social and economic status of the person involved. The question whether the act complained of was an act of cruelty has to be determined from the whole fact and relationship between the parties. The cultural and temperamental state of the life among them are factors from where the cruelty has to be inferred and will depend on the facts on each case. The expression cruelty postulates such a treatment as to cause reasonable apprehension in the mind of the wife that her living with the husband will be harmful and injurious to her life. Therefore, to decide the question of cruelty the relevant factors are the matrimonial relationship between the husband and wife, their cultural and temperament status in life, state of health, their interaction in their daily life which dominate the aspect of cruelty. Sarojakshan Shankaran Nayar v. State of Maharashtra, (1995) 2 CR 47 (Bom).

It is obvious from the perusal of the explanation given under Section 498-A, IPC that 'cruelty' means a willful conduct of such a nature and of such a magnitude so as to drive a woman to commit suicide or to cause grave injury or danger to life or limb or health of the woman. Seeking divorce on the ground that she was suffering from virulent disease like cancer, cannot be said by any stretch of imagination that it would lead to such a situation where she would prepare to commit suicide. The explanation further says that the harassment of woman shall be with a view to coerce her or any person related to her to meet any unlawful demand for any property or valuable security. This has to be considered with reference to the legal principles enunciated by the Court in the judgment referred to 1989 Cri. LJ NOC 52) that the element of mens rea shall be there. Ch. Narender Reddy v. State of A.P., 2000 Cri LJ 4068 (A.P.). The case reported as State by Rural Police v. Siddaraju 2000 Cri LJ 4220 (Kant).

Concerned predominantly the important aspect of law as to whether the contracting of second marriage by a husband during the pendency of the first one and at a time when the first wife has living with the husband in the same house would constitute cruelty within the meaning of Section 498-A, IPC and secondly, as to whether in a case where the wife committed sucide shortly thereafter and the facts established that the wife was driven to the act of suicide due to the cruelty of the accused, a conviction under Section 306, IPC i.e. abetment of sucide was tenable. In this case the accused contracted second marriage within two years of earlier marriage. The first wife was ill-treated and was not given even food when the deceased agreed to return to the matrimonial home because of the assurances given by the accused before the panchayat, it was not because she had forgiven and forgotten or because the accused had remedied the situation but because she was left with no option having regard to the economic status of her parents. There was no change in the domestic set up after her return. The deceased was subject to both physical and mental cruelty of the extreme levels and there was a direct inter relation between the high gravity of cruelty to which she was subjected and her committing suicide. There was nothing on record to indicate that the deceased was suffering from ill health or that there were any other facts that could have provoked a suicide. The evidence conclusively established a direct nexus between the cruelty and the suicide. The accused was convicted of the offences punishable under Section 498-A and Section 306, IPC

In the suicide note the deceased made a serious castigation against her husband for being an addict to narcotic drugs. Then she made a general allegation against her mother-in-law and in a lesser degree towards the sister-in-law. But unfortunately she did not advert to any concrete instance which could be termed as cruelty as defined in Section 498-A of the Indian Penal Code. The utterance said to have been made by the sister-in-law towards the deceased were to her chagrin and she had taken them very seriously in the suicide note she described such utterances as not worthy of reproduction. It was held that "it is not enough that the deceased left those words hurting, it must be subjected to judicial scrutiny and the Court must be in a position to hold that those words were sufficiently hurting enough as to amount to "cruelty" falling within the parameters fixed in Section 498-A of the Indian penal Code. The area remains grey and vague. Not a single word said to have been spoken by the appellant as against the deceased had been put on record by the deceased in the suicide note in spite of the fact that the said note is a very lengthy letter running into sevreal paragraphs. The tenor and language of the suicide note would reflect that she was not an illiterate lady. As the Court is rendered helpless to judge whether the words which deceased heard from the appellant would amount to cruelty, it is far from possibility for the Criminal Court to hold that she is guilty of the offence of cruelty as envisaged in the section. It is also to be pointed out that the deceased did not mention a single deed which the appellant would have done against her. All that is said against the appellant were that she spoke some thing which she took objectionable. The sister-in-law of deceased was not guilty of "cruelty" and hence acquitted. Smt. Raj Rani v. State of Delhi Admn., 2000 Cri LJ 4672 (SC) : 2000(10) SCC 662 : 2000(7) JT 458 : 2000(6) Supreme 570 : 2000(4) Crimes 104 (SC).

Where a wife is educated and never wanted to leave her husband and matrimonial home and she having high respect for her husband and not tolerating any one speaking ill of him. No evidence to show that there was such harassment, conviction under Section 498A, on the basis of an isolated incident is not justified. 1987 Cr LR (Guj) 165.

The offences under Section 498-A, IPC and Sections 3 and 4 of the Dowry Act are distinct and it cannot be said that if one fails other will also go. Krishna Kant Pathak v. State of U.P., 1995 (32) ACC 14 (All).

Mental torture and cruelty by husband. The concurrent findings were found against the appellant, however, in the interest of justice, we again carefully examined the entire evidence and documents on record. The evidence of Sushmna PW. 6 (neighbour of the deceased), Vidhya PW. 7 (sister of the deceased) and Vasant PW. 8 (father of the deceased) clearly lead to the only conclusion that this was a case of extreme mental cruelty which was perpetuated from the point of marriage and lasted till the deceased had committed suicide. There cannot be any iota of doubt that the extreme mental cruelty and torture compelled the deceased to put an end to her life. The appellant was wholly responsible for creating all the circumstances which led the deceased to take an extreme step of putting an end to her life.

The letter written by the deceased to her parents immediately before she had committed suicide, gives graphic description of the number of instances of extreme mental torture, day in and day out. This letter gives the impression that the appellant was deriving sadistic pleasure in causing extreme mental torture to the deceased. He would leave no stone unturned to ensure that the maximum mental torture and agony is caused to the deceased. We do not find the slightest doubt that the circumstances which have been enumerated in letter and the testimony of witnesses lead to a situation where the deceased virtually was left with no option except to take an extreme step of putting an end to her life. Milind Bhagwanrao Godse vs. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2009 SC 1828 : 2009 (3) SCC 699 : 2009 CrLJ 1736 : 2009 (1) Crimes 439 : 2009 (2) JT 574 : 2009 (2) SCR 39 : 2009 (2) Scale 621 : 2009 (2) Supreme 94 : 2009 (2) SLT 207 : 2009 (2) JCC 948.

In a AP case, the husband had developed illiest intimacy with another woman and deserted her wife and minor child. There was no evidence to show that such conduct of accused has affected the health of wife physically and mentally. It was held that the said conduct of the accused was not sufficient ground to induce the wife to commit suicide. Basai Venkata Ramana Murthy v. State, 2003 Cr LJ 4708 (AP) : 2003(3) ALD (CRL) 33 : 2003(2) Andh LT (Cri) AP 367 : 2003(4) RecCriR 597

There was no evidence on record to indicate that the deceased was meted out any ill-treatment or there was any dowry demand. The only grievance made in the dying declaration was that she wanted to live separately but her husband was not prepared and on that score, the husband had beaten her in the afternoon on the previous day. It was then stated that her grandmother disliked her. These statements in the dying declaration were held not sufficient to substantiate the prosecution case that deceased was meted out with ill treatment, an offence punishable under Section 498A, IPC. Paparambaka Rosamme v. State of A.P., 1999 Cri LJ 4321 (SC) : 1999 (4) Crimes 150 (SC) : 1999 (2) JCC (SC) 479 : 1999 (5) Scale 451 : 1999 (6) JT 585 : 1999 (7) Supreme 640.

4. Evidence.—It is not every harassment or every type of cruelty that would attract Section 498-A. The cruelty must be of such nature so as to coerce the wife to meet illegal demands or commit suicide. The evidence of demand and ill-treatment must be cogent and reliable. Ravindra Pyarelal Bidhan v. State of Maharashtra. (1994) 1 Mah LR 553.

Once evidence is admissible, i.e., statements made by the deceased to her relatives for the purposes of Section 304-B of the IPC, then surely, it could be used for the purposes of Section 498-A of the IPC. Sanjay vs. State. 2010 (3) Cri LJ 3214 (Del).

The delay in giving police report in such cases cannot be a ground to reject testimony of prosecution witnesses. The court has to scrutinise their evidence with more than ordinary care. Public Prosecutor. High Court of A.P., Hyderabad v. Ayinampudi China Apalaraju, (1995) 2 ALT (Cr) 189 (AP).

Fail to prove Cause of death. This Court wish the expert would have been forthright in her view in regard to the cause of death. A different conclusion was required to be arrived at keeping in view the fact that a large number of symptoms were absent which ordinarily point out to the cause of death of asphyxia by smothering. Most of the symptoms noticed by Modi should have remained present.

There was frothy fluid discharge of blood from mouth and nose. However, no frothy fluid blood was found on the pillow. It may not be imperative but that could have been a lead to a fairly definite opinion. It is in the aforementioned situation, the learned Sessions Judge opined that death might not have been caused by asphyxia.

The learned Judge noticed that witness was specific in her statement that paleness in the brain could not have been noticed as it had liquefied by that time. It was also found that witness had deviated from her earlier opinion and stated that it was not correct to say that no opinion of cerebral anoxia could be given or arrived at in the case of liquefaction of the brain. No saliva, blood and tissue cells were found in the pillow; no scratches, distinct nail marks, or laceration of the soft parts of the victim's face was noticed. It was not brought to notice that pillow was a soft one or not. No bruising or laceration was found in the lips, gums and tongue. The conduct of the accused that he had all along been present and the opinion of the Doctor did not satisfy the tests laid down in the authoritative book of Modi.

The High Court, on the other hand, while noticing only a part of the said tests proceeded on the premise that those symptoms spoken to by her in her evidence were not noted by her in the post-mortem report. Apart from the fact that the quotation from Modi does not take into consideration all the symptoms noted therein, a wrong test was applied that all the features in a given case would not be available where the body is burnt after killing, which is not the case herein. Despite noticing that some of the usual symptoms that would be available in the case of death due to asphyxia by smothering were necessary still a purported formal opinion was arrived at that the prosecution had definitely established the cause of death. Subramaniam vs. State of Tamil Nadu, 2009 CrLJ 3002 : 2009 (3) Crimes 140 (SC) : 2009 (7) JT 403 : 2009 (7) Scale 317 : 2009 (4) Supreme 788 : 2009 (4) SLT 384 : 2009 (9) SCR 725.

Circumstantial evidence. The evidence of witnesses clearly establish that the body was found in the matrimonial home of the deceased with injuries noticed by them which fit in with the evidence of the Autopsy Surgeon. The evidence of PWs. 2, 4, 7 and 8 throw considerable light on the controversy. The death took place within one year and four months of the marriage in the house of the accused persons and the dead body was found with injuries. At the relevant time the accused persons were absconding which is of considerable importance. The plea of alibi set up by the present appellant has been discarded because there was no material to substantiate such plea. The trial Court and the High Court have analysed this aspect in great detail. From the evidence of PWs. 2. 4. 7 and 8 it is seen that the accused persons were absconding since the date of incident when the dead body of the deceased lay in her matrimonial home. PW-14 the Investigating Officer's evidence was to that effect. The High Court has rightly noted that the conduct of the accused appellants before it had a striking feature in the absence of any reasonable explanation and is an inculpating circumstance against them. The injuries on the dead body were noticed by several witnesses e.g. PWs. 1, 2, 4, 7 and 8.

According to the doctor the death was due to asphyxia resulting from throttling which was ante mortem and homicidal in nature. Above being the position we find no merit in this appeal which is accordingly dismissed. Krishna Ghosh vs. State of West Bengal, AIR 2009 SC 2279 : 2009 CrLJ 2820 : 2009 (2) Crimes 102 (SC) : 2009 (12) SCC 413 : 2009 (4) JT 658 (SC) : 2009 (5) Scale 124 : 2009 (5) SCR 333 : 2009 (3) Supreme 39.

When accused was discharged by Sessions Judge under Section 227, Cr PC, as no case was made out—Revision petition was held for the same. The lower Court committed error in discharging the accused. It should have found charge and after recording evidence should have finally decided the case acquitting or convicting the accused. Hence revision is allowed and matter is sent back to Sessions Judge to decide afresh. State of U.P. v. Bai Mukund, (1995) 2 CCR 261 (Alld).

Ramaswamy*, 1996 Cri LJ 2628 (Kant).

Insufficient material for Dowry death.—It is of significance that Dr. Balbir Singh Randhawa in the cross examination had categorically stated that the history sheet of the patient Exh. DA was written by Dr. Bhupinderjit Kaur in Ex. PA. He also stated that the treatment was prescribed by him. It was entered in the bed head ticket made by doctor Bhupinderjit Kaur who was on duty on that day. He also stated that though the patient was in shock but she was not unconscious. He stated that he identified the signatures of Dr. Bhupinderjit Kaur and handwriting in the bed head ticket. In the FIR, reference was made to a letter purportedly to have been written by the deceased. This letter has been marked as an exhibit.

A bare reading of the letter clearly shows that there is not even a whisper about demand but the deceased had categorically stated that she had asked for the money and the articles on her own. The trial Court erroneously held that in the letter there was reference to demand of dowry. Strangely, the High Court held that even though the letter was inconsequential but the evidence of the relatives about the harassment for dowry cannot be brushed aside. As rightly submitted by learned Counsel for the appellant there were improvements in the statements recorded in Court. The two new witnesses introduced certain aspects for the first time. Significant statement in this regard is that of Sham Lal (PW-6). In Court he stated that the deceased told him in the hospital that kerosene oil was poured on her by the accused. He accepted during his examination that no such allegation was made in his statement recorded in terms of Sec. 161 of CrPC. Similarly, Surinder Kanta in Court stated that the deceased informed her about the demand of Rs. 1,00,000/- by her-in-laws and about her giving Rs. 20,000/-. This was not stated during investigation under Sec. 161 of Code as is evident from Exh. DA. In Court Surinder Kanta stated that the deceased was beaten and mistreated but no such statement was made during investigation. Additionally, no such allegation was made by PW-8 the complainant about this aspect in the FIR.

In the statement in Court Surinder Kanta stated that the deceased had told him that A-1 and A-2 caught hold of her and A-1 poured oil over her body and set her on fire by throwing match stick. No such statement was made during investigation. Similarly, that is not also the version of PW-6. In Court Surinder Kanta stated that all the accused persons i.e. the present appellant and the acquitted accused persons maltreated her. No such allegation was made while the witness was examined.

The High Court's judgment is not only sketchy but also devoid of reasons. Various factors highlighted above would go to show that the prosecution has squarely failed to establish the accusations so far as the appellant is concerned. Therefore, the appeal deserves to be allowed which we direct. The appellant is to be set at liberty forthwith unless to be required in connection with any other case. Raman Kumar vs. State of Punjab, 2009 CrLJ 3034 : 2009 (6) SCR 933 : 2009 (8) JT 422 : 2009 (6) Scale 335 : 2009 (3) JCC 1840.

Shoddy investigation cannot be a foundation for the accused persons to take advantage of shoddiness. But in the instant case, there was no material brought on record by the prosecution to establish the accusations so far as the present appellant is concerned. It is to be noted that there was a dying declaration recorded by the Executive Magistrate, Chandigarh who was present at PGI Hospital. The authenticity of the dying declaration has not been questioned. It is the stand of the prosecution that police officer should have recorded it. But that cannot be a ground to discard the dying declaration recorded by the Executive Magistrate. Additionally, the prosecution laid great emphasis on the letters purported to have been written by the deceased to her relatives. Here again, handwriting expert's report clearly shows that the letters were not in the handwriting of the deceased.

Above being the position, there is no evidence brought on record by the prosecution to establish the accusations. That being so, the appeal deserves to be allowed which we direct. Rakesh Kumar vs. State of Haryana, 2009 CrLJ 1895 : 2009 (2) Crimes 119 (SC) : 2009 (11) SCC 81 : 2009 (3) JT 377 : 2009 (3) SCR 1190 : 2009 (3) Scale 567 : 2009 (2) Supreme 459 : 2009 (3) SLT 153.

Where the statement of witnesses could not stand the test of cross-examination and there was material contradiction as to time of demand, the conviction of accused was set aside. Sakatar Singh v. State of Haryana, 2004 Cr LJ 2076 (SC) : AIR 2004 (SC) 2570 : 2004(4) Scale 529 : 2004(3) Supreme 661 : 2004(3) Crimes 1 : 2004(2) Hindu LR 182.

There were overtones of subsequent demands and that there were some incidents such as leaving the girl at her parent's place and the like which were relied on by the prosecution as incidents of cruelty of a serious nature. There was also a charge that the accused was friendly with the girl and that this is also one of the aspects of cruelty vis a vis the wife who had reacted seriously to this. That allegation was only in the form of a suggestion and the girl who was even cited as a witness was not examined. More importantly, what was found on a very minute evaluation of the record was that a review of the incident would undoubtedly disclose some level of unhappiness to the deceased, but in order to establish the criminal offence under either or both of the charges the incidents gravity and the volume of the cruelty would have to be much higher. All that could be held was that material came dangerously close, but that in its totality it was not good enough to sustain a conviction under either of the two charges. State v. Sridhar 2000 Cri LJ 328 (Karnataka).

The evidence as to harassment to the wife to meet any unlawful demand for money is necessary to constitute cruelty in criminal law. It is the requirement of the offence cruelty defined under Section 498-A, of Penal Code. The demand for dowry is prohibited under law. That amounts to cruelty entitling the wife to get a decree for dissolution of marriage. (1988) 1 CCC 105.

The reading of the letters of the deceased unmistakably indicated that deceased was being subjected to humiliation and harassment. She was taunted as coming from a poor family. There was expectation of payment from time to time by her brothers and sisters. It also appeared that she felt great embarrassment in asking money for furniture, and on other counts, but was compelled to meet the said expectations while she was at her matrimonial home. It was abundantly clear from the letters that deceased was in constant and acute mental agony, on account of the circumstances prevailing in her matrimonial home. It was also apparent from her last letter written shortly before her death that she had decided not to continue to live in her matrimonial home with the accused. The statement of her sister indicated that the accused had illicit affair with a girl. He used to drink and insist that deceased should also give him company by taking drinks with him. On her refusing to do so, appellant would beat her. He would come late in the night. He taunted her that dowry given in their marriage was inadequate. He would also caste aspersion on the character of deceased. In the foregoing circumstances, there appeared to be no doubt that the accused treated her with cruelty within the meaning of explanation (a) of Section 498-A of the Indian Penal Code. Presumption under Section 113A, Evidence Act was attracted and the accused would be guilty of abatement of suicide. Conviction under Section 304-B was altered to one under Section 306 and Section 498-A IPC. Anoop Kumar v. State of M.P., 1999 Cri LJ 2938 (M.P.).

When evidence was full of discrepancies there was failure to give details regarding second marriage on the part of the complainant and cruel treatment was not made out—Trial also found not proper but was held rather illegal—No error in the judgment of the trial Court resulting in patent injustice. Revision against the said judgment was held to be dismissed. Deokabai v. Namdeo Dhoke, (1995) 2 Crimes 443 (Bom).

The deceased died an unnatural death within 2 years of their marriage and that before her death she was subjected to harassment by the accused because she was not bringing from her parents the remaining amount of dowry promised to him. As regards the demand of dowry and harassment both the Courts below thought it fit to accept the evidence. According to evidence of eye witness sometime before the incident which led to her death, there was a quarrel between husband and the wife and, therefore, she wanted to leave his house but because of pursuation by neighbours not to leave at mid-night, she had agreed to remain there till next day morning. Their evidence further proved that ten minutes after deceased had returned to her room the witnesses again heard more noise coming from the appellant's room and therefore, both of them again went there. At that time they found that some other neighbours had also gathered there. The accused then opened the door. It was noticed that the deceased was sitting under a tap with her body fully burnt. Conviction of accused under Section 304-B and 498-A was held proper. Venugopal v. State of Karnataka, 1999 Cri LJ 29 (SC) : 1998(3) Crimes 116 : AIR 1999 (SC) 146 : 1998 SCC (Cr) 1592 : 1998(4) Scale 375 : 1998(5) JT 307 : 1998(6) Supreme 221 : 1998 SCC (Cr) 1592.

In an AP case, the prosecution relied on evidence of mother and sisters of deceased, who were not the direct witnesses of alleged cruelty. Their evidence was based on their communication with the deceased, who complained of additional dowry demand by husband. It was held that the statement of deceased to her mother and sisters was a weak piece of evidence, as the deponent could not be subjected to cross-examination and that such statement being hearsay was inadmissible in evidence. Conviction of accused was set aside. Sanganagari Narasimulu v. State of AP, 2005 Cr LJ 4168 (AP) : 2005(2) ALD (CRL) 387 : 2005(3) Andh LT (Cri) AP 290.

Evidence of Doctor showed that deceased died natural death and not suicide. Hence, case falls under Explanation (b) and (a) of Section 498-A, IPC, under which it is not every harassment of a woman by a relative that amounts to cruelty. Alamuri Lalitha Devi v. State of A.P., (1995) 1 ALT (Cr) 139 (AP) : 1995 Cr LJ 2127 : 1995(2) CCR 362 : 1995(1) Andh LT (Cr) 139 (AP).

Each and every aspect of cruelty inflicted on victim need not be mentioned either in FIR or spoken by every witness. Shanmuga Sundaram v. State, 1997 Cri LJ 499 (Mad).

In Kans Raj v. State of Punjab, 2000 Cri LJ 2993 (SC) where the evidence disclosed that accused nos. 3 to 5 were roped in the case only on the ground of being close relations of the husband of deceased, the Court held that for the fault of the husband, the in-laws or the other relations cannot, in all cases, be held to be involved in the demand of dowry. In cases where such accusation are made, the overt acts attributed to person other than husband are required to be proved beyond reasonable doubt. By mere conjectures and implications such relations cannot be held guilty for the offence relating to dowry deaths. A tendency has, however, developed for roping in all relations of the in-laws of the deceased wives in the matters of dowry deaths which, if not discouraged, is likely to affect the case of the prosecution even against the real culprits. In their over enthusiasm and anxiety to seek conviction for maximum people, the parents of the deceased have been found to be making efforts for involving other relations which ultimately weaken the case of the prosecution even against the real accused.

In Shaik Chuna Buda v. State of AP, 2002 Cri LJ 526 (AP) the medical evidence opined that the deceased died due to organophosphate insecticide poison. The blanket averment of the prosecution witnesses was that all the six accused harassed the deceased, but the father of the deceased categorically admitted that the deceased was liking the deceased. The evidence of all witnesses were full of controversies. As all other accused were acquitted the main accessed was also held entitled to the benefit of doubt.

Hearsay statement. In the present case, except the evidence of mother and aunt of the deceased, regarding treating the deceased with cruelty by husband and also regarding his illicit relations with other accused there is no other legal evidence on record to connect the appellant with commission of offence punishable u/S. 498A. When the appellant and other accused persons were acquitted of the charges framed u/Ss. 304-B and 306, IPC, this evidence of mother and aunt would be categorized as Hearsay evidence, for the purpose of S. 498-A and the conviction of the appellant based upon such evidence being not legal evidence cannot be sustained in the eye of law. More over, after telling like this, the deceased resided for two years in her parents place and thereafter when she went to her in-laws place in the second round then after residing there for about two years more, she committed suicide. There appears to be absolutely no legal evidence against the appellant in this matter and the conviction based upon only such evidence of mother and aunt liable to be set aside. Goverdhan Shobnath Bind v. State of M.P., 2008 CriLJ 529 (Chattisgarh).

5. Bail—Grant of.—The deceased was a lady of sensitive nature and she committed suicide for that reason. Section 498-A, contemplate such a conduct besides being wilful to result in likelihood of driving the woman to commit suicide. Hence it was fit case to grant bail. Dinesh Kumar Singh v. State of U.P. 1995 UR Cr R 22 (All).

When police investigation going on for offence under Section 498- A—Bail was granted—Subsequent addition of offence under Section 304-B there was—Distinct and separate offence and—Former bail order was cancelled— Expert report making out a case of poisoning—No valid reason was found to grant. pre-arrest bail—Anticipatory bail petition was held. to be dismissed. Deepak Kumar Goyal v. State of Rajasthan. 1995 Cr LR 453 (Raj).

Committal of suicide was by pouring kerosene oil on her body and setting fire and report was made to police by husband immediately—Complaint by father of deceased against A-1 and A-2 for committing the suicide could fulfil dowry demand—Conviction was challenged in appeal. It was held that considering the earlier versions given by PW 1, 2 and 8 i.e., the father, brother and sister of deceased, there is no hesitation in holding that A-1 and A-2, were not responsible for causing death of the deceased. Appeal allowed and acquittal recorded. J. Yadamma (Smt.) v. State of Andhra Pradesh, (1995) 1 ALT(Cr) 102 (AP).

The deceased never informed her father during her life time about alleged harassment. There was no proof that he harassed and beat the deceased. Hence no ground to interfere. Public Prosecutor, High Court of A.P., Hyderabad v. Ayinampudi China Apala Raju, (1995) 2 ALT (Cr) 189 (AP).

When deceased died within short time after marriage—Husband A-1, convicted under Section 198-A, for harassment—A-2 was acquitted—State appeal against acquittal appeal against conviction. It was finally held that evidence of deceased's older sister showed that deceased told her that she was happy. The deceased was patient of jaundice before marriage. Defence of accused that deceased might have committed suicide being fed up with decease cannot be brushed aside. The prosecution has failed to prove that deceased was subjected to cruelty. Hence conviction set aside and State appeal dismissed. Pappala Venkataramana v. State of A.P., (1995) 1 Andh LT (Cr) 396.

The prosecution did not lead any evidence that deceased was subjected to mental and physical torture by appellants for not bringing dowry. The deceased was in the habit of writing suicidal notes. No offence was therefore, made out under Section 498-A, against appellant. Hence conviction and sentence set aside. Rishiram v. State of M.P., (1995) 1 CCR 835 (MP).

6. Acquittal.—When cruelty was properly established—Injuries were found on the body of the deceased acquittal was not justified. Conviction justified under Section 498-A, not under Section 306, IPC. State of West Bengal v. Orilal Jaiswal, 1994 JIC 22 (SC) : 1994 Mad LJ (Cr) 187 : 1994 SCC (Cr) 107 : 1994 (1) SCC 73 : 1994 (1) ALJ (Cr) 193 : 1994 Recent Cr R 186 : 1994 (2) East Cr C 262 : 1994 Cr LJ 2104 : AIR 1994 SC 1418.

Revision against acquittal. The accused respondents were charged for causing death of the deceased for dowry and subjecting her to cruelty and harassment, but there is no evidence to evince such cruelty and harassment. In the facts and circumstances of the instant case, no presumption can be drawn about the dowry death and thus, the prosecution is found to have failed to bring home the accusation so far as they relate to offences punishable under Sections 304-B and 498-A of IPC.

There is no direct evidence with regard to cruelty or demand for dowry on record. Prosecution has miserably failed to furnish satisfactory and reasonable explanation of delay in filing FIR. Acquittal of accused respondents is proper. Krishan Lal Sharma vs. The State of Rajasthan, 2010 (2) CrLJ 2316 (Raj).

Where there was sentence to rigorous imprisonment for one year and also to pay fine of Rs. 1,000/- revision petition challenging of the same was filed. There was no allegation of demand of dowry or that the accused driving deceased to commit suicide. The allegation of unlawful demand of property was found without any basis. Section 498-A, is not attracted. Conviction held illegal and liable to be set aside. H. Shanker v. State of A.P., (1994) 2 AP LJ 60 (AP).

Acquittal—Insufficient evidence. The only evidence to bring home charge under Section 498-A, IPC, is that of brother of deceased. In their deposition brother of deceased stated that their sister told them that accused was torturing her as he wanted that her brothers arrange a job for him or the house at Ganj Basoda is given to him or a cash of Rs. 1 lac is given to enable him to do some business. They deposed that as and when their sister come to their house, she would tell them that accused used to insert cloth in her mouth and give beatings for dowry. The trial Court as well as the High Court relied on the evidence of brothers of deceased and held that charge under Section 498-A, IPC, against the accused was proved. Apart from the statement attributed to the deceased, none of the witnesses had spoken anything which they had seen directly insofar as torture and harassment to Ranjana Rani @ Raj Kumari was concerned.

The moot question is : whether the statements attributed to the deceased could be used as evidence for entering upon a finding that the accused subjected Ranjana Rani @ Raj Kumari to cruelty as contemplated under Section 498-A, IPC. In our considered view, the evidence of brothers of deceased about what the deceased Ranjana Rani @ Raj Kumari had told them against the accused about the torture and harassment is inadmissible under Section 32(1) of the Evidence Act and such evidence cannot be looked into for any purpose. Except Section 32(1) of the Indian Evidence Act, there is no other provision under which the statement of a dead person can be looked into in evidence.

What has been deposed by brother of deceased has no connection with any circumstance of transaction which resulted in her death. The death of Smt. Ranjana Rani @ Raj Kumari was neither homicidal nor suicidal; it was accidental. Since for an offence under Section 498-A simpliciter, the question of death is not and cannot be an issue for consideration, we are afraid the evidence of brothers of deceased is hardly an evidence in law to establish such offence. In that situation Section 32(1) of the Evidence Act does not get attracted.

Section 6 of the Evidence Act, in the facts and circumstances of the case, insofar as admissibility of a statement of brother of deceased about what the deceased had told them against the accused of the treatment meted out to her is concerned, is no at all attracted.

We hold, as it must be, that there is not an iota of evidence which can be admitted in law to be used against the appellant for the offence punishable under Section 498-A, IPC. Consequently, the appeal has to be allowed and is allowed. Bhairon Singh vs. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 2009 SC 2603 : 2009 CrLJ 3738 : 2009 (3) Crimes 199 (SC) : 2009 (7) JT 495 : 2009 (9) SCR 875 : 2009 (8) Scale 634 : 2009 (5) Supreme 153 : 2009 (4) SLT 793 : 2009 (3) JCC 2114.

No evidence to cruelty. In order to sustain conviction under Sec. 306, IPC, it must, therefore, be proved by the prosecution that there was abetment of suicide. According to the allegations of the complainant and the case of the prosecution, the deceased was instigated to commit suicide by constant harassment in connection with demand of Rs. one lac and motorcycle by the appellant and his mother. In the present case the prosecution has failed to prove that deceased was subjected to cruelty or harassment by the appellant in connection with the demand of dowry. The statements of prosecution witnesses are inconsistent, contradictory and unreliable. It would be pertinent to mention here that presumption under Sec. 113A of the Indian Evidence Act cannot be taken as the marriage of the deceased was not solemnized within a period of seven years before her death. Accused not liable to be convicted for offences under Ss. 304B, 306 and 498A. Suresh Kumar alias Sushil and etc. v. State of Rajasthan, 2006 CriLJ 116 (Raj).

The husband, his mother and brother took the bride to the hospital. This proved their good conduct. The presumption of dowry death cannot be drawn on mere testimony of deceased's brother. The offence is not proved beyond reasonable doubt and appellant entitled to benefit of doubt. Devinder v. State of Haryana, (1994) 3 Recent Cr R 78 (P&H).

Bare reading of Sec. 378 of the Code (appeal in case of acquittal) quoted above, makes it clear that no restrictions have been imposed by the legislature on the powers of the appellate Court in dealing with appeals against acquittal. When such an appeal is filed, the High Court has full power to reappreciate, review and reconsider the evidence at large, the material on which the order of acquittal is founded and to reach its own conclusions on such evidence. Both questions of fact and of law are open to determination by the High Court in an appeal against an order of acquittal.

During cross-examination he accepted that all this was not stated during investigation. He also accepted that it was not mentioned in the FIR that gifts and other articles were given as dowry. He accepted that his father in law Udai Singh had settled the marriage between the accused and the deceased. Interestingly Udai Singh (DW. 1) has stated that there was no demand from the side of the accused at the time of marriage. The deceased and her parents had never complained to him that the accused or any member of his family was raising any demand of any kind when confronted with the statement made during investigation, PW. 5 accepted that he had not stated many vital things during investigation which for the first time he was speaking in Court. Similar is the position with PW. 7 the brother of the deceased. He also accepted on being confronted with the statement made during investigation that he had not stated particularly certain relevant aspects. Similar is the position with the evidence of mother of deceased (PW. 6).

As was rightly noted by the trial Court there was no evidence towards the claim regarding any demand of dowry. That being so the High Court ought not to have interfered with the well reasoned judgment of the trial Court directing acquittal. The reasoning of the High Court that something must have happened and otherwise deceased would not have committed suicide is clearly indefensible. That certainly could not have been a reason to set aside the trial Court's judgment of acquittal. Nepal Singh vs. State of Haryana, AIR 2009 (SC) 2913 : 2009 (12) SCC 351 : 2009 (7) JT 172 : 2009 (6) SCR 982 : 2009 (6) Scale 555 : 2009 (4) SLT 2.

Acquittal of husband of deceased-wife—When valid. The prosecution examined six witnesses including Shrirang, the father of the deceased, Vimal, the mother of the deceased and Smt. Nirmala, the elder sister of the deceased. The trial Court found that demand of gold ring by mother-in-law and cruelty to deceased on account of non satisfaction of the demand was proved only against mother-in-law. It was found that Anita had committed suicide. Accordingly, mother-in-law was convicted as afore-noted and rest of the accused persons were acquitted. As noted above, Suman challenged the conviction whereas the State challenged the acquittal of rest of the accused persons.

Learned Counsel for the appellant submitted that the trial Court had rightly held that in letter there was nothing to implicate the present appellant. Therefore, his acquittal was correct, but the High Court on erroneous reading of the document has directed conviction.

Learned Counsel for the State on the other hand supported the order. In the letter on which both the trial Court and the High Court have relied upon to conclude one way or the other, reference is made to several earlier letters. It specifically refers to the demand by mother-in-law of a gold ring. There is no reference to the present appellant in the letter.

The evidence of father, mother and sister is also relevant. Father has stated that except above letter he had not received any letter and the statement in the letter to the effect that the deceased had earlier sent 2/3 letters is correct. If on one hand he says that he had not received any letter, the question of not replying to them does not arise. Similarly, mother has stated that she cannot say whether there was any demand of in letter. Elder sister has accepted that deceased had written to her father that mother-in-law Suman was demanding gold ring in the letter.

Learned Counsel for the State submitted that there is some reference to money in the letter. The sentence is being read out of context. The deceased had written in the letter that she may have to get a gold ring but wherefrom will she get the money for buying it. Therefore, there is no reference to any demand of money by the present appellant. That being so, the High Court was not justified in upsetting the judgment of the trial Court. The impugned judgment of the High Court is set aside and that of the trial Court is restored. Vijay vs. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2009 (SC) 1217 : 2009 (2) SCC 87 : 2009 (1) Crimes 178 (SC) : 2009 (16) SCR 890 : 2009 (1) SLT 313 : 2009 (1) JCC 113.

Where there was no evidence showing that demand of dowry was made or deceased was subjected to cruelty or harassment by accused husband and in law soon before her death or in connection with demand of dowry, conviction of accused under Section 498A or 304B was liable to be set aside as no presumption against accused persons could be drawn under Section 113 of Evidence Act. Mukesh v. State, 2003 Cr LJ 2598 (Uttranchal).

There were conflicting versions with regard to the demand for additional dowry and there was no evidence of victim having been harassed for the same. None of the prosecution witnesses had alleged the cruel treatment. It was held that conviction under Section 498A was not proper as no presumption under Section 113A of Evidence Act could be invoked. Penchala Sadaiah v. State, 2003 Cr LJ 3827 (AP) : 2003(2) ALD (CRL) 332 : 2003(2) Andh LT (Cri) AP 562.

Where the deceased-wife while staying at her parents house never stated about alleged ill-treatment or harassment, but dying declaration mentioned ill-treatment. It was held that the dying declaration was not reliable as the same was made in unconscious state of mind and, therefore, the accused was entitled to acquittal. S. Tripat Patra v. State, 2003 CrLJ 1591 (Ori) : 2003 (1) Crimes 571 : 2003 (1) Ori LR 13.

In an Orissa case, it was alleged by the parents that their daughter was tortured on account of demand of dowry. In the dying declaration the victim did not utter even a single word with regard to any torture or harassment by accused persons. She rather attributed the cause of death to her parents. There was no cogent evidence of any neighbour or near relations about cruelty or harassment meted out to deceased in relation to demand of dowry. Conviction under Section 498A and Section 406 of Dowry Prohibition Act was held improper. Benumadhab Padi Mohapatra v. State, 2004 Cr LJ 615 (SC) : AIR 2004 (SC) 503 : 2004(1) Crimes 31 : 2003(10) Scale 61 : 2003(8) Supreme 424 : AIR 2003 SCW 6542.

In a Bombay case, it was alleged that accused persons-in-law committed murder of deceased due to non-fulfilment of dowry demand. There was eye-witness to any kind of torture. The prosecution itself proved that at least on two occasions in five months of marriage, victim came home for day or two and stayed there for a week or so. No complaint was made against alleged torture. Acquittal of accused was held proper. State of Maharashtra v. Vivek Gangadhar Thakare, 2005 Cr LJ 3625 (Bom) : 2005 AllMR(CRI) 2612 : 2005(4) BomLR 180 : 2006(1) HinduLR 274.

In an Allahabad case, where the accused-husband, who was having bad habits such as gambling, liquor addiction and beating of wife, had set the deceased to ablaze and had run away instead of extinguishing the fire, it was held that his conviction under Sections 498A and 302 was proper. Ramesh Chand v. State, 2003 Cr LJ 1315 (All) : 2003 All LJ 464 : 2003 (46) All Cri C 90.

Where there was allegation of cruelty and harassment and demand of dowry was made. After two years of marriage there was unnatural death— Offence was established. Conviction was fully justified. Gurdeep Singh v. State of Haryana, (1994) 2 CC Cases 232 : (1994) 1 Recent Cr R 190 (P&H) (DB).

Where there was abetment of suicide and subjection of wife to cruelty— There was also harassment, ill-treatment and torture of deceased wife by husband and mother-in-law for non-fulfilment of demands of dowry which resulted in wife committing suicide—Prosecution evidence established offence beyond reasonable doubt—Conviction was held to be justified. P. Krishna Murthy v. State of A.P.. 1994 Cri LJ 506 : (1994) 1 Crimes 357 (AP).

The opinion expressed by Doctor is clear that death was due to throttling. The evidence of PW 9 and PW 11, and explanation shows that death is homicidal in nature and not a suicidal one. If husband and wife are alone in the house and wife died unnaturally the presumption is always against the accused husband alone. Hence conviction and sentence upheld. Chekka Venkataswamy v. State of A.P., (1994) 2 ALT (Cri) 252 (AP).

When offence was under Section 498-A, IPC—Conviction was by trial Court—Appeal against the same was filed. Version of the father, brother and sister of the deceased gave clean chit against husband and mother-in-law—Conviction was not held to be justified. J. Yadamma (Smt) v. State of Andhra Pradesh, (1994) 3 Crimes 615 (AP).

The deceased was continuously being harassed as she had not produced children after marriage. The involvement of husband and mother-in-law was proved but there was no evidence to prove the involvement of father-in-law. The accused husband and mother-in-law were convicted under Section 302/498A read with Section 34 but co-accused father-in-law was given benefits of doubt. Boma Mallaih v. State, 2003 Cr LJ (NOC) 14 (AP) : 2002(2) ALD (CRL) 548: 2002(2) Andh LT (Cri) AP 400.

Where there was evidence as regards alleged cruelty towards the deceased which was found to be quite vague, incomplete, contradictory, replete with material contradictions, unworthy of credence and same set of evidence being relied upon for conviction of the accused and for acquittal of others. It was finally held that there is jurisdiction to practice discrimination in respect of appellant to convict him for offence under Section 498-A. When lady committed suicide within 7 years of marriage—Suicide committed due to numerous cruelties imposed upon the lady by the husband and the in-laws and there was no evidence with regard to abetment to suicide by the husband and the in-laws—Conviction under Section 306, was held to be not proper. Conviction should be under Secs. 498-A and 304-B. Pasumarthy Prabhakar Rao v. State, (1995) 1 Crimes 434 (AP).

When deceased being harassed by accused husband for not complying with unlawful demands—Testimony of witnesses corroborated by statement in diary maintained by deceased. However there was no evidence connecting co-accused and her in-laws with alleged offence. It was held that conviction of accused upheld while that of co-accused not proper. Alamuri Lalitha Devi v. State of A.P., 1995 Cr LJ 2127 (AP).

In an Andhra Pradesh case, a complaint was made by wife that she was kicked out of the matrimonial house. Thereafter, the accused-husband gave an undertaking voluntarily to the police that she would take the complainant back in house and treat her properly but this undertaking was not in the form of a compromise and the complainant was not signatory to it. It was held that the undertaking on the contrary strengthened the version of complainant and that conviction of accused was proper. *Mohd. 8. Sentence.—Held—The evidence of Doctor's Post-mortem Certificate and inquest report proves death of deceased as homicidal in nature and not suicidal. The prosecution failed to prove harassment to deceased and it was not able to establish that accused caused the death of the deceased. Accused was, therefore, liable for offence under Section 201, IPC. The sentence of 7 years' Rigorous Imprisonment, reduced to 3 years' Rigorous Imprisonment. K. Ravindra v. State, (1994) 2 ALT 10 (NRC).

Where there was conviction and sentence under Section 498-A, IPC and appeal was made before Sessions Court—Benefit of Probation was given which was challenged in revision petition. Consequences of cruelty which are likely to drive a woman to commit suicide or to cause grave injury or danger to life, limb or health, whether mental or physical of the woman are required to be established in order to bring home the application of Sec.

498-A, IPC. Cruelty has been defined in the Explanation for the purpose of Sec. 498-A. It is to be noted that Secs. 304-B and 498-A, IPC cannot be held to be mutually inclusive. These provisions deal with two distinct offences. It is true that cruelty is a common essential to both the Secs. and that has to be proved. The Explanation to Sec. 498-A gives the meaning of "cruelty". In Sec. 304-B there is no such explanation about the meaning of "cruelty". But having regard to common background to these offences it has to be taken that the meaning of "cruelty" or "harassment" is the same as prescribed in the Explanation to Sec. 498-A under which "cruelty" by itself amounts to an offence. Satish Kumar Batra and Ors. v. State of Haryana., AIR 2009 SC 2180 : 2009 (5) SCR 451 (SC) : 2009 (12) SCC 491 : 2009 (5) JT 403 (SC) : 2009 (5) Scale 280 (SC) : 2009 (3) SLT 379 (SC) : 2009 CrLJ 2447 (SC) : 2009 (2) JCC 1341 (SC).

The averments regarding cruel treatment were specific so far as husband was concerned. It did not appear reasonable that all members of the family including ladies picked up daggers and assaulted with the Panch which had came for reconciliation. The petition is devoid of merit and dismissed. Jaswinder Pal Kaur v. Iqbal Singh. (1994) 2 SLJ 1111 (P&H).

The deceased wife who had undergone operation was unable to do household work. The oral evidence showed that the accused used to beat her constantly. The post-mortem report showed that there were six bruises on the body of the deceased there on the right thigh and three on the right hip part. Thus the oral evidence was corroborated by the medical evidence. Under the circumstances an offence under Section 498A, IPC was made out. State v. Gopal, 2001 Cri LJ 2873 (Raj).

In a Supreme Court case, the accused-in-laws allegedly participated with accused husband in driving out deceased from their house. It was held that the acquittal of in-laws under Section 498A/304B was proper, and the conviction of husband under Section 498A was justified. It was further held that the acquittal of husband under Section 304B as there was evidence about the demand of dowry. It was also held that the accused could also be convicted under Section 306, IPC, if no charge was framed thereunder. *K. Prema S. The marriage had taken place about 25 years back and allegation was that husband was treating the complainant with cruelty and harassing her right from day one for bringing insufficient dowry. The last occasion when wife was turned out of the house pertained to decade ago. It was held that harassment or cruelty that might have occurred two decades ago could not be made a ground for punishment and order of framing charge under Section 498A was liable to be set aside. Smt. Basant Kaur v. State (NCT of Delhi), 2003 Cr LJ 803 (Delhi) : 2002(101) DLT 470 : 2003(66) DRJ 119.

The remark that the daughter-in-law was not beautiful was not of such a nature which would drive her to commit suicide. It was not sufficient gravity. It is a question of fact in each case whether the woman was subjected to cruelty within the meaning of Clause (a) of the Explanation to Section 498-A, IPC. The letter showed that the deceased was very much emotional, of low tolerance and unstable mind. There was no grave and serious provocation by the appellant. Even after the introduction of Sections 498-A I P C and 113-A Evidence Act proof must be beyond any shadow of reasonable doubt. Gurbachan Singh v. Statpal Singh, AIR 1990 SC 209 : 1990Cri LJ 562. On a dispassionate consideration of the material on record, it is found that the charges against the accused are also not established Smt. Annapurna Bai v. State of Madhya Pradesh 1999 Cri LJ 2696 (M.P.)

In a case where the wife committed suicide within one year of marriage the prosecution based his case on a letter written by the deceased wife to his father. The letter nowhere indicated any demand of dowry having been made by the accused. The deceased in his letter requested his father to return the ornaments which were given to him by the deceased for being repaired. The second thing which the letter suggested was of her having beaten and pushed out of house for her forgetful nature. The Court on going through the evidence held as under : "From an independent evaluation of evidence and having gone through oral evidence adduced and the several documents available on record, mostly the writing of the deceased we are satisfied that the present one is not a case of dowry death or the deceased having been instigated into committing suicide for her failure to satisfy the dowry demands of the accused appellant. However, treating by the accused appellant of the deceased, ill treating her for her mistakes which could have been pardonable and turning her out of the house, also once beating her inside the house at the odd hours of night did amount to cruelty within the meaning of section 498A of IPC and therefore we agree with the Trial Court as also with the High Court though to some extent at variance with the cause for cruel treatment that the accused appellant subjected deceased Seema to cruelty and, therefore, conviction of the accused appellant under Section 498-A deserves to be maintained". Ramesh Kumar v. State of Chattisgarh 4729(SC).

Where the husband suspected the character of wife and abused her saying "Bloody where why did you die, the framing of charge under Section 498A was held proper. Mohan Chand Kholi v. State, 2003 Cr LJ 710 (Delhi) : 2003(2) All CriLR 559 : 2003(1) Rec Cri R 694.

12. Intention—In cruelty by husband or his relatives intent to injury is most important element of cruelty under Section 498-A. Rajammal v. State, 1993 Cri LJ 3029 (Mad).

13. Compromise.—In matrimonial offence compromise between husband and wife is permissible even though offence is non-compoundable in exceptional circumstances. Smt. Dagghopati Jayalashmi v. State, 1993 Cri LJ 3162 (AP).

Where the husband and wife agreed for mutual divorce and application was filed for quashing the proceedings initiated by her but the High Court refused to exercise the inherent jurisdiction vested in it. It was held that refusal was not proper as it would prevent the woman from settling earlier and that is not the object of Section 498A. B.S. Joshi v. State of Haryana, 2003 Cr LJ 2028 (SC) : AIR 2003 SC 1386 : 2003 AIR SCW 1824 : 2003(3) Scale 214 : 2003(3) Supreme 227.

The offence under Section 498A could be compounded if parties have jointly expressed their views and willingness for the purpose. The parties during pendency of complaint separated from each other by getting a decree of divorce in which provisions were also included for making future maintenance to the wife. The Court said that even if offence is not compoundable under Section 320 Cr PC but Court by invoking inherent powers under Section 482 Cr PC can quash the complaint in order to save institution of marriage. Chandra Papa Rao v. State, 2003 Cr LJ (NOC) 62 (AP) : 2002(1) Andh LT (Cri) AP 300 : 2003(2) DMC 239.

14. Suicide by wife.—It can be presumed that cruel treatment meted out to deceased by accused husband earlier had continued unabated till wife was forced to commit suicide and hence conviction of accused justified. Balram Prasad Agarwal v. State of Bihar, 1997 Cri LJ 1640 (SC).

The accused married Kantaben (deceased). Soon after two years of his marriage, the accused started in flicting mental and physical torture on her and she was taunted by the accused for not bringing sufficient dowry in the marriage. He also demanded from the victim an amount of Rs. 40,000/- for the purpose of purchasing a house. He even wrote letters to the in-laws and demanded Rs. 40,000/- for purchasing the house. The demand was persistent. Even threats were administered to the deceased and her family members. Thus, the accused inflicted mental and physical torture on the victim which prompted her to commit suicide by burning herself after pouring kerosene on her body. Thus, as per the prosecution case, the appellant has committed the offence punishable under Sections 498-A and 306 IPC read with Sections 3 and 7 of Dowry Prohibition Act.

The complaint was given and on the strength of the complaint given by the complainant investigation was carried out. It is pointed about that the accused himself had taken the deceased to the hospital and from his conduct it clearly shows that the accused was not guilty. In essence, it is submitted that the commission of alleged offences has not been established by the prosecution.

The conviction so far as it relates to Sec. 306 IPC, therefore, cannot be sustained in view of the background facts and is set aside. But the materials on record particularly the letters on which specific emphasis has been led by the trial Court and the High Court amply demonstrate the commission of offences punishable under Sec. 498-A IPC and Sec. 3 of DP Act. The convictions are sustained. But the sentence in respect of Sec. 3 of DP Act is reduced to three years. Kishangiri Mangalgiri Goswami v. State of Gujarat. AIR 2009 SC 1808 : 2009 CrLJ 1720 : 2009 (4) SCC 52 : 2009 (2) JT 84 : 2009 (2) Scale 31 : 2009 (1) Supreme 491 : 2009 (1) SLT 698.

Suicide by woman within 7 years and cruelty by husband does not automatically give rise to presumption. Having regard to the principles aforesaid, we may now advert to the fact of the present case. Here is a case where the evidence on record discloses that the deceased wanted to be married in a literate family. She was not happy with the fact that her husband was illiterate and also with the status and condition of the family of her husband. She was also required to do some domestic work as the family was poor, for which she was not happy. The deceased was of the view point that her life has been spoiled by marrying appellant. The letter reflects the attitude of the in-laws of the deceased towards the deceased. In the said letter there was no reference of any act or incident whereby the appellants were alleged to have committed any wilful act or omission or intentionally aided or instigated the deceased to commit suicide.

On such slender evidence, therefore, we are not persuaded to invoke the presumption under Sec. 113-A of the Evidence Act to find the appellant guilty of the offence under Sec. 306 IPC.

The next question which remains forour consideration is whether an offence is made out under Sec. 498A of IPC. Though the letter allegedly written by the deceased mentions the fact that the attitude of the family was not good towards the deceased and she was not treated well but there is no mention about any of such incident. Witnesses in their statements have emphasized that the mother-in-law of the deceased used to ask the deceased to run hand driven flourmill to which she was not habitual. In the year 1988 when the abovementioned incident occurred, the hand driven flourmills were generally used by women in the poor families in the villages and even till today one may find use of the same in some villages in the country. Thus asking one to run the same at that point of time may not amount to an act of cruelty.

In the said statements there is also a mention of an incident where the deceased had been beaten by her husband. The mother-in-law cannot be held liable for the said act; rather there is evidence on record of PW3 who had stated that mother-in-law had once restrained her son. Though in the statement of PW 1 there is mention of one or two incident when the present appellant had beaten the deceased but there appears to be possibility of embellishment. The father of the deceased (PW2), in his statement has not made any statement regarding cruelty being committed on his daughter in her in-laws house. After analyzing the said evidence and the statements made by PW1 and PW3 we are of the opinion that the benefit of doubt should be granted to mother-in-law. Rajbabu and Anr. v. State of M.P., AIR 2008 SC 3212 : 2008 (8) JT 250 (SC) : 2008 (10) Scale 437 (SC) : 2008 (5) Supreme 666 (SC) : 2008 (8) SLT 472 (SC) : 2008 (8) SRJ 119 (SC) : 2008 CrLJ 4301 (SC) : 2008 (3) Crimes 313 (SC) : 2008 (3) JCC 2013 (SC) : 2008 (3) Recent CR 890 (SC).

No direct evidence to show that the appellant had by his acts instigated or provoked the deceased to commit suicide. Set aside the conviction under Sec. 306 but uphold the conviction under Sec. 498-A as allegation of cruelty proved by evidence.

The prosecution has specifically alleged that the day prior to the date of commission of suicide by the deceased, the deceased was tortured by the appellant, Anita and the other accused persons present in the house of the appellant, as a result of which the deceased committed suicide on the next day. On a perusal of the record of the present case, we find that both the trial Court as well as the High Court have disbelieved the said incident as, according to them, the statement of the witnesses to establish the said fact are not reliable and trustworthy. Those findings recorded by the trial Court and the High Court have not been challenged before us. It is not the case of the prosecution that the case in hand would fall within the ambit of clause firstly of Explanation 1 to Sec. 107, IPC.

It is pertinent to note that the appellant had brought Anita to stay with him at his house three months prior to the date of the death of the deceased. If the deceased had been so perturbed by the act of the appellant in marrying the said Anita and in bringing her to his house that she felt impelled to commit suicide then she could have done so on the very day when Anita had come to stay with the appellant in his house as naturally at that point of time her annoyance or dismay with life would have been at its pinnacle. From the period of three months which elapsed in between the incidents of the appellant bringing Anita to his house and the deceased committing suicide, it can be clearly inferred that it was not the act of the appellant which instigated or provoked the deceased to commit suicide.

The perpetration of physical torture on the deceased on the day prior to the date of the incident which led the deceased to commit suicide is the prosecution case all throughout. It is nowhere the case of the prosecution that the appellant had played any active role either in instigating or aiding the commission of suicide by the deceased for denying to accept Anita as the wife of the appellant. Anita, the second wife of the appellant was brought by the appellant to his house about three months prior to the date of the incident of suicide by the deceased and, therefore, bringing of the second wife to the house by the appellant cannot be said to have either incited or facilitated the commission of suicide by the deceased. It is also not the case of the prosecution as disclosed from the evidence led which we have scrutinised very minutely. The aforesaid contention, in our considered opinion, is far-fetched and is not established by the facts of the present case. After carefully assessing the evidence on record we find that there is no direct evidence to show that the appellant had by his acts instigated or provoked the deceased to commit suicide and has not done any act which could be said to have facilitated the commission of suicide by the deceased.

From the evidence on record available before us, we find that the prosecution witnesses have in their testimonies stated that the deceased was tortured both physically and mentally by the appellant for the first time after his marriage with the deceased when he was refused permission for marriage with said Anita by the deceased. On having been refused the permission for his second marriage with Anita, the appellant again, after a few days requested the deceased to accede to his request for marriage with Anita, which request was again refused by the deceased. Consequent to the said position and due to the adamant position taken by the deceased, cruelty was meted out to her by the accused which fact is sufficiently proved from the evidence on record. Therefore, we find no reason to take a different view than what has been taken by the trial Court and the High Court as far as Sec. 498-A, IPC is concerned. Amalendu Pal alias Jhantu vs State of West Bengal, 2009 AIR SCW 7070 : AIR 2010 SC 512

When cruel treatment to wife not stopped even after she gave birth to two sons, presumption arises that cruelty continued unabated till her suicide and thus accused liable to be convicted under Section 498-A, IPC. Balram Prasad Agarwal v. State of Bihar, 1997 AIR SCW 1271.

The essence of the offence in Section 498-A is cruelty as defined in the explanation appended to that section. It is a continuing offence and on each occasion on which the respondent was subjected to cruelty, she would have a new starting point of limitation. The last act of cruelty was committed against the respondent, within the meaning of the explanation, on October 13, 1988 when, on the allegation made by the respondent in the complaint to Additional Chief Judicial Magistrate, she was forced to leave the matrimonial home. Having regard to the provisions of Section 469 and 472 the period of limitation commenced for offences under Section 406 and 498-A from October 13, 1988 and ended on October 12, 1991. But the chargesheet was filed on December 22, 1995, therefore, it was clearly barred by limitation under Section 468 (2), Cr. P.C. Section 473 Cr P. C which extends the period of limitation is in two parts. The first part contains non-obstante clause and gives overriding effect to that section over Sections 468 to 472. The second part has two limbs. The first limb confers power on every competent Court to take cognizance of an offence after the period of limitation if it is satisfied on the facts and in the circumstances of the case that the delay has been properly explained and the second limb empowers such a Court to take cognizance of an offence if it is satisfied on the facts and in the circumstances of the case that it is necessary so to do in the interests of justice. It is true that the expression in the interest of justice in Section 473 cannot be interpreted to mean in the interest of prosecution. What the Court has to see is interest of justice. The interest of justice demands that the Court should protect the oppressed and punish the oppressor/offender. In complaints under Section 498-A the wife will invariably be oppressed, having been subjected to cruelty by the husband and the in-laws. It is, therefore, appropriate for the Courts, in case of delayed complaints, to construe liberally Section 473, Cr. P.C in favour of a wife who is subjected to cruelty if on the facts and in the circumstances of the case it is necessary so to do in the interests of justice, When the conduct of the accused is such that applying rule of limitation will give an unfair advantage to him or result in miscarriage of justice, the court may take cognizance of an offence after the expiry of period of limitation in the interest of justice. This is only illustrative not exhaustive. Arun Vyas v. Anita Vyas 1999 Cri LJ 4379 (SC).

In Vanka Radhamanohari (Smt.) v. Vanka Venkata Reddy, (1993) 3 SCC 4: 1993 AIR SCW 3595, the wife who was subjected to cruelty left the matrimonial home in 1985. In 1990, she filed the complaint alleging cruelty and mal-treatment against the husband and mother-in-law and further stating that the husband had remarried. The Magistrate took cognizance of offence under Sections 498-A and 494, IPC. On the petition of the husband under Section 482 Cr. P.C the High Court quashed the complaint. The Apex Court on appeal from the judgement of the High Court, held that the High court erred in quashing the complaint as Section 468, Cr. P.C. could not be applied to offence under Section 494 IPC (for it is punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to 7 years) and even in respect of offence under section 498-A, the attention of the High Court was not drawn to Section 437, Cr. P.C while setting aside the impugned order of the High Court, the apex Court observed:—

> "As such Courts while considering the question of limitation for an offence under Section 498-A i.e. subjecting a woman to cruelty by her husband or the husband or the relative of her husband, should judge the question in the light of Section 473 of the Code, which requires the Court, not only to examine as to whether the delay has been properly explained, but as to whether it is necessary to do so in the interests of justice."

15. Cruelty to Wife.—Reading the evidence of PWs 1 to 3 together what is evident is that the allegation that there was demand for bore dowry is not supported by any reliable evidence. As already mentioned, as far as the version of assault and hospitalisation are concerned, they are unsupported by medical evidence. What is clear from the version of PWs 1 and 3 is that the main cause of difference of opinion between the parties is the animosity of the mother-in-law and that even now she is prepared to live with the husband provided the husband goes over to her house. The Court was not satisfied therefore that the prosecution has succeeded in improving the ingredients of Section 498(A). Cruelty, as defined in Section 498 (A), remains unestablished though the fact that there is difference of opinion between the spouses resulting in their separate life stand established. Lawrence v. State of Kerela, 2002 Cri. L.J. 3458 (Ker.).

'girl friend'. Husband having connection with. Appellant herein had not been charged for abetment of a crime. Any conspiracy amongst the accused persons has also not been alleged. A woman in terms of the aforementioned provision must be subjected to cruelty by her husband and/or his relative. The word 'cruelty' has also been defined in the explanation appended thereto. It is in two parts. Clause (a) of the said explanation refers to a conduct which is likely to drive the woman to commit suicide or to cause grave injury or danger to her life, limb or health (whether mental or physical); Clause (b) provides for harassment of the woman, where such harassment, is with a view to coercing her or any person related to her to meet any unlawful demand for any property or valuable security. It is not the case of the first informant that the appellant had any role to play with regard to demand of dowry. U. Suvetha vs. State, 2009 (6) SCC 757 : 2009 CrLJ 2974 (SC) : 2009 (2) Crimes 357 (SC) : 2009 (7) JT 222 : 2009 (7) SCR 902 : 2009 (7) Scale 149 (SC) : 2009 (3) Supreme 797 : 2009 (4) SLT 462 : 2009 (3) JCC 1677.

In the present case there are certain material aspects which were lost sight of by the trial Court but have been noted by the High Court. The dead body was detected in the morning. Parents of the deceased informed the police and not the inmates. The parents were informed by neighbours and not by the inmates. DW2 has been disbelieved as he was nearly 70 years of age. It was highly improbable that he was in employment as a watchman. Parents of deceased deposed that deceased was very depressed and unhappy due to improper treatment at hands of husband. The trial Court had held that the evidence of PWs. 6 to 8 regarding pressing mark on the neck and injuries on the fore arms of the deceased are not corroborated by the medical opinion. This is factually incorrect. The doctor had categorically stated that he was of the opinion that death was due to result of compression of the neck, and the post mortem report was accordingly issued. PW 6 has stated that second opinion was sought for and then the report was given. The falsity of alibi is an additional link. Narendra v. State of Karnataka, AIR 2009 SC 1881 : 2009 (7) SCR 585 (SC) : 2009 (6) SCC 61 : 2009 (7) JT 566 (SC) : 2009 (7) Scale 6 (SC) : 2009 (4) Supreme 101 (SC) : 2009 (2) Crimes 415 (SC).

The commission of the offence punishable under Section 498-A, IPC, against such of the accused who have been convicted, having perused the testimony of witnesses i.e. the parents and the brother of the deceased as also having perused her complaint made to the crime against Women Cell we are satisfied that the prosecution has satisfactorily brought home that deceased was physically beaten and was treated with mental and physical cruelty on account of dowry demands by her parents-in-law, her husband, her devar as also her devrani and one nanad. The conviction of said four persons for the offence punishable under Section 498-A, IPC cannot be faulted. Gurcharan & etc. vs. State, 2010 (3) CriLJ 3339 (Delhi).

Sporadie incidence of ill-treatment by husband, even if believed true would not attract the definition of cruelty. Sunil Kashinath Raimale v. State of Maharashtra, 2006 Cr LJ 569 (Bombay).

Accused persons can be convicted under Section 498-A even if a charge under Section 304-B fails. On reappraisal of the evidence on record in the considered opinion of this Court there being no clear, cogent and credible evidence on record with regard to death of the deceased by any burn or bodily injury otherwise than the normal circumstances and also the deceased was subjected to torture by the appellants for non-fulfillment of their demands of dowry and much less being the evidence that any torture had any live link to the death of the deceased. In such premises, the judgment of conviction recorded by the trial Court in this case appears to be indefensible and as such liable to be set aside.—Khetramohan Panda and Ors. vs. State of Orissa, 2010 (1) Cri LJ 498 (Orissa).

16. Section 498A and 366 IPC.—Sections 498A and 396, IPC are independent and constitute different offences. Though, depending on the facts and circumstances of an individual case, subjecting a woman to cruelty may amount to an offence under Section 498A and may also if a course of conduct amounting to cruelty is established leaving no other option for the woman except to commit suicide amount to abetment to commit suicide. However merely because an accused has been held liable to be punished under Section 498A, IPC it does not follow that on the same evidence he must also and necessarily be held guilty of having abetted the commission of suicide by the woman concerned. Ramesh Kumar v. State of Chattisgarh, 2001 Cr LJ 4724 (SC) : 2001(8) JT 599 : 2001(7) Scale 298 : 2001(10) SRJ : 2001(7) Supreme 737.

17. Domestic violence.—In cases of domestic violence or in cases of violence within close quarters, that obviously there will be no outsiders who could have or would have witnessed the incident and this habit of acquitting the accused on the ground that independent evidence was necessary is totally incorrect and will have to be deprecated. If the evidence of the victim is trustworthy, if it has withstood cross examination and if it is corroborated by the medical evidence, then there is no ground on which the trial Court can reject such evidence. In the present case, after a very careful consideration of the records which, defence case accepted that the material may not be strong enough to sustain the charge punishable under Section 307, IPC and consequently, acquittal order confirmed. As far as the charge under Section 498-A, IPC is concerned, the evidence clearly establishes the guilt of the accused. Regarding charges under Section 498-A the order of acquittal set-aside. State of Karnataka v. Syed Fareed, 2002 Cri LJ 2857 (Kant.).

18. Muslim woman (Protection of Rights on Divorce) Act, 1986—Applicability.—There was demand of dowry and for non-fulfilment of demand wife was tortured and assaulted. The accused took the plea that the complainant should have taken recourse to Muslim Woman (Protection of Rights on Divorce) Act, 1986 as no provision has been made in this Act that a Muslim woman can maintain criminal case for offence under Section 498A. Rejecting the plea it was held that persistent cruelty to wife was proved and conviction of accused was proper. Mohd. Arif v. State, 2003 Cr LJ (NOC) 261 (Jharkhand).

19. Prima facie case.—The trial Court found in the discharge application filed by the accused that prima facie a case has been made out against the accused to prosecute them for the offence under Section 498-A IPC. If the averments made in the charge-sheet and the statements made in support of it are proved, there is no doubt that the said averments clearly constitute an offence under Section 498-A IPC. The charge is triable, and there is no sufficient ground to discharge under Section 227 and the learned Magistrated also rightly refused to discharge the accused. Had the victim died in her attempt to commit suicide on account of the demand of dowry made by the accused, it would have been a dowry death under Section 304-B IPC with Section 113-B of Indian Evidence Act. If the averments made in the charge sheet are prima facie establishes the offence under Section 498-A, it is expected in the interest of justice to permit the prosecution to continue. D. Surender Reddy and others v. State of A.P., 2002 Cri LJ 2611 (A.P.).

Birth to a female child. One of the reasons for ill-treatment to the deceased was that the deceased gave birth to a female child, which was considered to be inauspicious and after the birth of the said female child, the Rajendran's brother's wife died and the appellants thought that the birth of the said female child as the reason for various debacles in the family and consequently, she was tortured by the appellants.

Section 498-A IPC has two limbs. The first limb of Section 498-A provides that whoever, being the husband or the relative of the husband of a woman, subjects such woman to cruelty shall be punished. 'Cruelty' has been defined in Clause (a) of the Explanation to the said Section as any willful conduct which is of such a nature as is likely to drive to a woman to commit suicide. When there is demand of dowry, the case comes under Clause (b) of the Explanation to Section 498-A. Clause (a) of the Explanation has definite application to the facts of the present case. Additionally, effect of Section 113-A of the Indian Evidence Act cannot be lost sight of.

Further as per Section 113-A of the Evidence Act when the question as to whether commission of suicide by a woman had been abetted by her husband or any relative of her husband and it is shown that she had committed suicide within a period of seven years from the date of her marriage and that her husband or such relative of her husband had subjected her to cruelty, the Court may presume that such suicide had been abetted by her husband or by such relative of her husband. This has not been rebutted by the appellants. Above being the position we find no merit in these appeals, which are accordingly dismissed. Rajendran vs. State, AIR 2009 SC 855 : 2008 (15) Scale 371 : 2009 (1) SLT 283 : 2008 (16) SCR 1005 : 2009 (1) JCC 200.

20. Death of wife by burning.—Allegations that she was harassed for demand of dowry and was beaten black and blue, however dates years and months of beating not disclosed nor any particular incident mentioned. Even dying declaration was not reliable and found to be afterthought, therefore, no offence under Section 304-B will be made out. The prosecution witnesses including PW. 5 Munni have admitted that the husband and wife (Ganpat Singh and sajjan Kanwar) had a quarrel soon before the incident and the cause of quarrel was that Ganpat Singh refused to take his evening meal and went to sleep without taking the dinner. The investigation officer PW. 18PW. 18 Kalyan Singh has admitted this fact during his cross-examination. In these circumstances, there remains no basis for convicting the appellants under Section 304-B of the Indian penal code. Ganpat Singh and others v. State of Rajasthan, 2002 Cri LJ 2246 (Raj.).

Ill-treatment was meted out to deceased by husband, mother-in-law and sister-in-law. The wife had also filed petition for maintenance u/s. 125 CrPC. In the circumstances accused's conviction u/s. 306/498A read with Section 34 was upheld but sentence was reduced. Kamalakar Padhu Mahapatra v. State, 2004 Cr LJ 615 (SC) : AIR 2004 (SC) 503 : 2004(1) Crimes 31 : 2003(10) Scale 61 : 2003(8) Supreme 424 : AIR 2003 SCW 6542.

In a case where accused are charged of the offence under Sec. 498-A and Sec. 302 there should be no difficulty for the Court to convict the accused under Sec. 306 if the basic ingredients of the offence under Sec. 306 of IPC are established by the prosecution even without framing a charge under that section. What is material and relevant, is that the prosecution should establish that the accused had enough notice of the allegations which could form the basis for conviction under Sec. 306 of IPC. In a bride burning case there could be or could not be any eye-witness and if there is no direct evidence the Courts have to base the order of conviction either under Sec. 302 or under Sec. 306 of IPC on the basis of circumstantial evidence. Motive for committing murder and basic ingredients of the offence under Sec. 306 of IPC in such cases could be one and the same. In both the cases the accused would make every effort to disprove the case of the prosecution under Sec. 498-A, namely, that neither any demand of dowry was made nor any gifts or presents or money was received by the accused at a subsequent stage or that he subjected the deceased to cruelty for the same or for any other reason. In other words, the accused would try to disprove the motive if a charge is under Sec. 302 and/or to establish that the ingredients of the offence under Sec. 306 do not exist. The motive for conviction either under Sec. 302 or the basic ingredients to establish charge under Sec. 306 of the IPC in a case of bride burning would be common and, therefore, the conviction under Sec. 306 of IPC can safely be recorded and same would not result in failure of justice in any manner even if the charge under Sec. 306 was not framed and the accused was tried only under Sec. 302 r/w Sec. 498-A of IPC. There is absolutely no reason and ground as to why the trial Court cannot frame alternative charge under Sec. 306 of IPC in a case of bride burning particularly where the accused are charged under Sec. 498-A also. As a matter of fact, if the facts and circumstances demand, the trial Court should frame alternative charge under Sec. 306 also so as to keep the accused on guard and make him aware that there could be a conviction under Sec. 306 even if a charge under Sec. 302 of IPC is not established. Kisan and Ors. v. State of Maharashtra, 2007 CriLJ 130 (Bom).

Death caused by burn injuries within seven years of marriage of deceased. Evidence of witnesses stating incidence of quarrel which took place about two months prior to incident between accused persons and complainant about adjusting loan amount paid to accused by complainant as dowry money. All the accused said that an amount of Rs. 50,000/- shall be adjusted against the demand of dowry money. Thus, relying upon the evidence of witnesses, the trial Court and the High Court came to the conclusion that the prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that deceased was being constantly harassed and tortured by accused for the demand of dowry and a sum of Rs.50,000/- paid to them as loan amount was also adjusted by them as dowry money. Witnesses have been subjected to searching cross-examination by the defence, but nothing tangible material has been extracted from their evidence to create any shadow of doubt that they are not reliable and truthful witnesses.

Having regard to the entire evidence discussed above and having carefully and closely considered the judgments of the trial Court and the High Court, it appears that the view taken by both the courts was reasonable and plausible. We find no infirmity or perversity in the findings recorded by the learned Judges of the High Court to interfere with the well-reasoned judgment. Kanti Lal v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 2009 SC 2703 : 2009 (6) SCR 525 (SC) : 2009 (3) SLT 569 (SC) : 2009 (5) JT 635 (SC) : 2009 (6) Scale 116 (SC) : 2009 (12) SCC 498 (SC) : 2009 (3) Supreme 360 (SC) : 2009 (3) JCC 1604.

21. Cruelty and demand of dowry.—A necessary ingredient for proving offence under Section 498-A of the Code must be held to be absent hence, the conviction for such an offence must also be held to be not maintainable. For this learned counsel has placed reliance on a decision of the Apex Court in the case of Sakhi Mandalain v. State of Bihar, (1999) 8 JT (SC) 351. That was a case in which the appellant, sister-in-law of the deceased was convicted under Sections 304-B/34 and 498-A of the Code as also under Sections 3 and 4 of the D.P. Act. On appeal the High Court had acquitted the appellant of the charges under Section 304-A read with Section 34 of the Code, giving her benefit of doubt but conviction under Sections 3 and 4 of the D.P. Act was maintained. In that case, it was the demand of dowry, coupled with harassment, which constituted the basis of the prosecution case. It was held by their Lordships of Supreme Court that once the main part of the charge under Section 304-B of the Code was not found to be established, it was not possible to record conviction under Sections 3 and 4 of the D.P. Act. Smt. Basanti Devi and Others v. State of Bihar and Another, 2002 Cri LJ 161.

Cruelty and Dowry Death. Accused person in-laws of deceased ill-treated her on account of non-fulfillment of dowry demand due to which deceased committed suicide. Evidence of prosecution witnesses viz., brother, parents and aunt was consistent.

The victim committed suicide. Such fact was proved by medical evidence. Inquest report proved that she committed suicide in her in-laws' place. In our considered view, the appellants being her in-laws were duty-bound to unfold the narrative, which was within their special knowledge. The appellants did not do so while being examined under Section 313. They did not even adduce any evidence. The Appellant on the other hand tried to make aspertion on the victim that she had extra marital affair, although the defence did not lead any evidence on that score. The other accused could not check her grievance and categorically stated that they did not get any gold out of dowry.

The learned Judge held the appellants' guilty under Section 304-B/498-A of Indian Penal Code. Taking a sum total of the facts, followed by consistent evidence of witnesses being corroborated by each other, we do not find any scope to hold it otherwise, specially in case of appellants. We, however, find that the evidence on record which is held reliable to convict the appellants for the offence under Section 498-A of Indian Penal Code clearly makes out a case for offence of abetting suicide under Section 306 of Indian Penal Code with the aid of Section 113-A of the Evidence Act, 1872. The facts of this case do not support the conviction of the appellants under Section 304-B of Indian Penal Code. Jhantu Sardar and Ors. vs. State of West Bengal, 2010 (3) Cri LJ 3012 (Cal).

Appellants tortured and assaulted victim for non-fulfillment of demand for dowry. Informant and witnesses had come to sasural of victim lady and asked appellants not to torture her. On same day they suffocated lady to death. Sufficient evidence to hold that all appellants have committed offence under Sec. 498-A. Held, conviction of appellants is proper. Liyakat Miyan & Ors vs State of Jharkhand, 2010 (4) CriLJ 4008 (Jhar).

Consequences of cruelty which are likely to drive a woman to commit suicide or to cause grave injury or danger to life, limb or health, whether mental or physical of the woman are required to be established in order to bring home the application of Sec. 498-A IPC. Cruelty has been defined in the Explanation for the purpose of Sec. 498-A. Substantive Sec. 498-A IPC and presumptive Sec. 113-B of the Evidence Act have been inserted in the respective statutes by Criminal Law (Second Amendment) Act, 1983. It is to be noted that Secs. 304-B and 498-A, IPC cannot be held to be mutually inclusive. These provisions deal with two distinct offences. It is true that cruelty is a common essential to both the Sections and that has to be proved. The Explanation to Sec. 498-A gives the meaning of 'cruelty'. In Sec. 304-B there is no such explanation about the meaning of 'cruelty'. But having regard to common background to these offences it has to be taken that the meaning of 'cruelty' or 'harassment' is the same as prescribed in the Explanation to Sec. 498-A under which 'cruelty' by itself amounts to an offence. Gopal vs. State of Rajasthan, AIR 2009 SC 1928 : 2009 (11) SCC 314 : 2009 (2) JT 419 : 2009 (2) SCR 423 : 2009 (2) Scale 704 : 2009 (2) SLT 193 : 2009 (2) JCC 920.

Demand of dowry in respect of invalid marriage would not be legally recognizable. However purpose for which Sections 498A, 304B of Penal Code and Section 113B of Evidence Act were introduced cannot be ignored. Absence of definition of husband to specifically include such persons who contract marriages ostensibly and cohabitate with such woman in purported exercise of his role and status as husband is no ground to exclude them from purview of Section 304B or 498A. Reema Aggarwal v. Anupam, 2004 Cr LJ 892 (SC) : AIR 2004 SC 1418 : 2004 AIR SCW 344 : 2004 AIR Jhar HCR 1026 : 2004(1) Crimes 276.

So far as the offence under Sections 498A and 304B, IPC is concerned, throughout it has come on record that accused 2 (brother in law) was staying elsewhere whereas accused 1 and deceased were staying first at Bettadapura and later at K.R. Nagar. It is also the evidence of the neighbouring witnesses staying near the house of the accused and deceased that the couple were cordial and some of the women who were talking with the deceased also have specifically stated that there was no dowry demand much less payment of additional dowry. Even the deceased had not complained of the harassment to bring additional dowry.

Of course, the defense of the accused is that the deceased was suffering from stomach-ache and also pain in the left lower limb as such, she being frustrated, committed suicide. It is seen, on some occasions the deceased had been treated at the hospital for which some documents are produced. Further, it is the specific case of the father of the deceased and other witnesses i.e. mother and sister that accused was never allowing the deceased to attend any of the ceremonies in their family. Even as per the prosecution, the deceased requested the 1st accused to take her to the house warming ceremony of one of her relatives and he refused to take her on which much thrust has been given in the evidence of witnesses. Of course, due to such an indifferent attitude on the part of 1st accused, the deceased must have felt humiliated or got annoyed. In the usual course, family bickering between spouses by itself, cannot be said to be a reason for her to commit suicide and it may not be a ground to hold against the accused that there was abetment to commit suicide and also that the accused is guilty of the offence under Section 498A, IPC.

From the evidence on record that of father, mother and sister and PW 15, it is seen, they have spoken about the deceased complaining of harassment to her whenever she used to meet them. In this regard, however, no complaint has been filed by the family of the deceased against the accused. Apart from that, what is noticed is, the deceased was residing along with her husband and after marriage, for three years she lead marital life and also gave birth to a child. It is also noticed, the 1st accused was demanding Rs. 20,000/- as per the evidence of some of the witnesses and also they made arrangement to pay Rs. 15,000/-. In this regard father has not stated or whispered anything before the Taluka Executive Magistrate. So, it appears to be an afterthought to make out a dowry harassment case to implicate the accused. Even with regard to the evidence as to collecting dowry is concerned, the statement of father is that the 2nd accused has collected dowry amount whereas in the further statement it is stated that 1st accused has collected the dowry amount and that itself shows that there is much contradictions and Ex. D5 also depicts the contradiction version. Moreover, in the absence of any such complaint being filed by father and mother on coming to know of the deat of the deceased except the suspicion they have expressed at the time of recording the inquest statement by the Tahsildar, no other steps have been taken by father to file the complaint. Even the FIR is registered for the alleged offences only after ten days. Certain of the contradictions marked at Ex. D. 4 to 6 show that there is no such demand by the accused for dowry. May be some misunderstanding between the husband and wife regarding not allowing the deceased to attend the function of her relative but, that itself cannot be treated as a cruelty harassment. In order to prove the offence under Section 304B, IPC, death must have occurred within seven years of marriage in unnatural circumstances in connection with dowry harassment. The evidence of the neighbouring witnesses is consistent and contradicts the version of the relatives of the deceased and also, apart from that, the boy witness who was residing along with the deceased and the accused has not whispered anything about any untoward incident that has occurred to hold the accused guilty of the offences under Sections 498A and 304B, IPC. Even if some amount is given or taken, it appears to be in the form of customary practice having regard to the status of the family and, even for having made payment, there is no record made available. Believing the version of the relatives of the deceased as gospel truth the trial Court has convicted and sentenced the accused without looking into the various contradictions and admissions and also the delay in filing the complaint. The complaint is lodged, that too by the police, after ten days. Ex.D. 1 to D 3 are the prescriptions of the deceased who was treated for ailments. The statement of PW 5 is recorded by the police only after 9 to 10 days after the death of the deceased and nothing has been stated by him in the Inquest Report regarding alleged demand for additional dowry by the accused. It appears to be an afterthought and improvement made by the prosecution witnesses, especially by father, mother and sister.

In view of the above discussion, having noticed that deceased committed suicide within seven years of her marriage, it appears her death would have probably been due to misunderstanding between the deceased and the 1st accused in not sending her to attend the ceremony of her relative in the family of her parents. Although several wild allegations are made, there is no cogent evidence to hold the accused guilty of the alleged offences. The order of conviction and sentence rendered by the trial Court is without looking into the contradictions and also without considering the material evidence of the independent witnesses who got to speak about the attitude of the accused with the deceased. Dr. Seetharamaiah and Anr vs. State of Karnataka, 2010 (3) CriLJ 3389 (Karn).

22. Charge.—Where the basic ingredients of offence under Section 306, IPC was established to substantiate the charge under Section 498A but conviction under Section 306 was not provide, it was held that conviction of accused under Section 306, IPC without framing a charge there under was permissible. Hans Raj v. State of Haryana, 2004 Cr. LJ 759 (SC) : AIR 2004 (SC) 2790 : 2004(3) Crimes 11 : 2004(2) Scale 727 : 2004(3) Supreme 676 : 2004(2) All Cri LR 698 : 2004(3) JT 45.

Even if there is no specific charge under Section 498, the conviction can be ordered if sufficient evidence to support the charge is available. Dinesh Seth v. State, 2003 Cr LJ 4532 (Delhi) : 2003(70) DRJ 556 : Hira Lal v. State (NCT of Delhi), 2003 Cr LJ 3711 (SC) : 2003 (2) DMC 206 : 2003 (69) DRJ 714 : 2003 (4) PatLJR 100 : 2003 (4) Raj LW 541 : 2003 (8) SCC 80.

23. Jurisdiction of court.—Where there accused was charged. Under Section 498A and pleaded no jurisdiction in his defence. It was held that the offence under Section 498A being of continuing nature, the court of place where the victim wife was faced to take shelter had jurisdiction to by the offence under Section 498A. Bina Dey v. Pratibha Dey, 2003 Cr LJ 3618 (Gau.) : 2003 (3) GauLT 659.

Court at place where her matrimonial home was situated would have jurisdiction and not Court at place where her parental home was situated. More so, when there was no allegation in complaint that petitioner contacted her over phone after her return to parental home and then she was abused or treated with cruelty giving part of cause o action at that place. Dr. Satheesh N.V. vs. State of Kerala, 2010 (2) CrLJ 1734 (Kerala).

The husband came to the house of the complainant's father and seeing the child he repeated his earlier remark that the child did not match his face and she carried the sin of somebody else. The question is whether this remark allegedly made by the accused /husband in the house of the complainant's father can give jurisdiction to the learned Magistrate at Asansol for the trial of the case under Sections 498/A/323/505/406/34 of the IPC. In my considered opinion, this single averment which does not introduce a new fact can hardly gives jurisdiction to the learned Magistrate of Asansol. This bare remark is a repetition of what the accused No.1 earlier stated in her matrimonial home. In fact a thorough reading of the petition of complaint revealed that cruelty was perpetrated upon the complainant in her matrimonial house in the district of Hooghly. The solitary expression which is a repetition of what was earlier stated at the time when the child was not born cannot give the Asansol Court of the jurisidiction to try the case. The provision of Section 178 Cr. P.C. does not apply here because it is not a case where offence is committed partly in one area and partly in another, nor the said offence can be said to be a continuing one; nor it is the offence consisting of several acts done in different local areas. Further the expression alleged in Paragraph 14 does not come within the ambit of Section 179, Cr.P.C. because the alleged expression is not an act by reason of anything which has been done and of a consequence which has ensued. Sankar Prasad Roy Chowdhury & Anr. vs Mitali Roy Chowdhury, 2010 Cri LJ 981 (Calcutta).

24. Bail.—Old age and health condition of accused. With regard to the case of appellant, it has been contended that she is an 80 years old lady and is suffering from various age related ailments. This factual assertion is not disputed by the respondents. Looking at the age of the appellant it does not seem fair to hold her back in jail during the pendency of appeal even if she had been convicted for the alleged serious offence, against which she has come before this Court. Furthermore, in the peculiar circumstances of this case and in view of the fact, that the Appellant is an old lady of 80 years of age and she had already been in jail for more than one year, in our view, she is entitled for the relief prayed in the application. Accordingly, we grant interim bail to the second appellant, subject to the appellant furnishing the bail bond as well as surety to the satisfaction of the Additional Sessions Judge. Bakshish Ram vs. State of Punjab, 2009 (6) SCC 561 : 2009 (2) Crimes 351 (SC) : 2009 (6) JT 431 : 2009 (7) Scale 231 : 2009 (3) Supreme 757 : 2009 (4) SLT 366.

Seriousness and gravity of offence must be looked into. It is clear from the various decisions of this Court as stated above that, cases where a serious offence had been committed and the accused had been held guilty for the said offence, then his application for grant of bail should not be decided leniently during the pendency of the appeal. The seriousness and gravity of the offence must be looked into before granting the bail. In the instant case, accused are convicted by the trial Court for harassing, torturing and compelling the deceased to end her life by committing suicide, and the said conviction is confirmed by the High Court. Bakshish Ram vs. State of Punjab, 2009 (6) SCC 561 : 2009 (2) Crimes 351 (SC) : 2009 (6) JT 431 : 2009 (7) Scale 231 : 2009 (3) Supreme 757 : 2009 (4) SLT 366.

25. Deceased died in her matrimonial home.—The deceased breathed her last within about one year and three months from the date of marriage while living in the house of her in laws. She was not suffering from any ailment prior to marriage and even after the marriage she continued to be hale and hearty. The evidence of PW-3, the father of the deceased is very significant. According to him on 17.03.1995 the deceased came to his house. She informed him that the accused was torturing her as they had to purchase a new house they were demanding Rupees one lac from her. To the similar effect is the evidence of PW-4 the brother of the deceased. Prosecution had pressed into service the agreement deed Exh. PB for the purchase of house by Gurmukh Singh from one Sapan Dass (PW-2). Said agreement reveals that it was executed on 08.02.1995 and the sale deed was to be executed on 08.05.1995. The High Court noted that this document amply established that the family required money for purchase of plot from Sapan Dass. The High Court further noted that there was no material brought on record to show that the agreement was performed by the accused persons. The High Court found that the presumptuous conclusion of the trial Court that there was no link of the demand for dowry with the said agreement. The High Court also noted that the trial Court had erroneously concluded that the accused persons were rich persons and, therefore, there was no need for asking any dowry. Jagjit Singh vs. State of Punjab, AIR 2009 SC 2133 : 2009 CrLJ 2440 : 2009 (2) Crimes 134 (SC) : 2009 (4) SCR 75 : 2009 (4) SCC 759 : 2009 (3) JT 382 : 2009 (3) Scale 680 : 2009 (2) Supreme 422.

26. Cruelty and dowry death—Distinction between.—Secs. 304-B and 498-A, IPC cannot be held to be mutually inclusive. These provisions deal with two distinct offences. It is true that cruelty is a common essential to both the Secs. and that has to be proved. The Explanation to Sec. 498-A gives the meaning of 'cruelty'. In Sec. 304-B there is no such explanation about the meaning of 'cruelty'. But having regard to common background to these offences it has to be taken that the meaning of 'cruelty' or 'harassment' is the same as prescribed in the Explanation to Sec. 498-A under which 'cruelty' by itself amounts to an offence. Under Sec. 304-B it is 'dowry death' that is punishable and such death should have occurred within seven years of marriage. No such period is mentioned in Sec. 498-A. Rajendra vs. State, AIR 2009 SC 855 : 2008 (15) Scale 371 : 2009 (16) SCR 1005 : 2008 (1) SLT 283.

Consequences of cruelty which are likely to drive a woman to commit suicide or to cause grave injury or danger to life, limb or health, whether mental or physical of the woman are required to be established in order to bring home the application of Sec. 498A IPC. Cruelty has been defined in the Explanation for the purpose of Sec. 498A. Substantive Sec. 498A IPC and presumptive Sec. 113B of the Evidence Act have been inserted in the respective statutes by Criminal Law (Second Amendment) Act, 1983. A person charged and acquitted under Sec. 304B can be convicted under Sec. 498A without that charge being there, if such a case is made out. If the case is established, there can be a conviction under both the Sections. See Akula Ravinder and others v. The State of Andhra Pradesh. AIR 1991 SC 1142, Sec. 498A IPC and Sec. 113B of the Evidence Act include in their amplitude past events of cruelty. Period of operation of Sec. 113B of the Evidence Act is seven years, presumption arises when a woman committed suicide within a period of seven years from the date of marriage. *Gopal v. Cruelty to wife is distinct offence from offence of dowry death. Consequences of cruelty which are likely to drive a woman to commit suicide or to cause grave injury or danger to life, limb or health, whether mental or physical of the woman are required to be established in order to bring home the application of Sec. 498-A, IPC. Cruelty has been defined in the Explanation for the purpose of Sec. 498-A. It is to be noted that Secs. 304-B and 498-A, IPC cannot be held to be mutually inclusive. But having regard to common background to these offences it has to be taken that the meaning of "cruelty" or "harassment" is the same as prescribed in the Explanation to Sec. 498-A under which "cruelty" by itself amounts to an offence. Satish Kumar Batra and Ors. v. State of Haryana., AIR 2009 SC 2180 : 2009 (5) SCR 451 (SC) : 2009 (12) SCC 491 : 2009 (5) JT 403 (SC) : 2009 (5) Scale 280 (SC) : 2009 (3) SLT 379 (SC) : 2009 CrLJ 2447 (SC) : 2009 (2) JCC 1341 (SC).

Accused persons can be convicted under Section 498-A even if a charge under Section 304-B fails. On reappraisal of the evidence on record in the considered opinion of this Court there being no clear, cogent and credible evidence on record with regard to death of the deceased by any burn or bodily injury otherwise than the normal circumstances and also the deceased was subjected to torture by the appellants for non-fulfillment of their demands of dowry and much less being the evidence that any torture had any live link to the death of the deceased. In such premises, the judgment of conviction recorded by the trial Court in this case appears to be indefensible and as such liable to be set aside.—Khetramohan Panda and Ors. vs. State of Orissa, 2010 (1) Cri LJ 498 (Orissa).

27. Cruelty, soon before death of deceased.—There was an unrelenting demand for dowry and Asha Devi-deceased was persistently subjected to cruelty and harassment for and in connection with the demand. Both her parents and her brother deposed before the Court that Appellant had once again raised his demand when he had gone to their house to bring deceased to his place. Their inability to meet his demand had caused him annoyance and anger. Asha Devi was naturally apprehensive and was very reluctant to go with him. But they somehow prevailed upon her and made her depart with him. There is thus direct and positive evidence of her being subjected to harassment. There is nothing to show that after she was brought to the appellants' place and till her death merely about two months later the situation had radically changed, the demand of dowry had ceased and relations had become cordial between the deceased and three appellants. In the facts and circumstances of the case, we are satisfied that in connection with the appellants' demand for dowry deceased was subjected to cruelty and that was the proximate cause of her homicidal death. Deen Dayal vs. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 2009 SC 1238 : 2009 CrLJ 1119 : 2009 (1) Crimes 243 (SC) : 2009 (11) SCC 157 : 2009 (1) JT 170 : 2009 (1) SCR 56 : 2009 (1) Scale 408 : 2009 (1) SLT 341 : 2009 (1) JCC 540.

Soon before death must be proved. To allow the benefit of doubt to the Appellants having particular regard to the fact that except for certain bald statements made by mother and brother of deceased alleging that the victim had been subjected to cruelty and harassment prior to her death, there is no other evidence to prove that the victim committed suicide on account of cruelty and harassment to which she was subjected just .prior to her death, which, in fact, are the ingredients of the evidence to be led in respect of Section 113-B of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, in order to bring home the guilt against an accused under Section 304-B, IPC.

In order to hold an accused guilty of an offence under Section 304-B, IPC, it has to be shown that apart from the fact that the woman died on account of burn or bodily injury, otherwise than under normal circumstances, within 7 years of her marriage, it has also to be shown that soon before her death, she was subjected to cruelty or harassment by her husband or any relative of her husband for, or in connection with, any demand for dowry. Only then would such death be called "dowry death" and such husband or relative shall be deemed to have caused the death of the woman concerned.

In this case, one other aspect has to be kept in mind, namely, that no charges were framed against the Appellants under the provisions of the Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961 and the evidence led in order to prove the same for the purposes of Section 304-B, IPC was related to a demand for a fan only.

In Biswajit Halder's @ Babu Halder vs. State of W.B., 2008 (1) SCC 202 = 2007 AIR SCW 2189, was rendered in almost similar circumstances. In order to bring home a conviction under Section 304-B, IPC, it will not be sufficient to only. lead evidence showing that cruelty or harassment had been meted out to the victim, but that such treatment was in connection with the demand for dowry. In our view, the prosecution in this case has failed to fully satisfy the requirements of both Section 113-B of the Evidence Act, 1872 and Section 304-B of the Indian Penal Code. Durga Prasad & Anr. vs. State of M.P., 2010 (3) CrLJ 3419 (SC).

28. "Husband"—Need not be legally wedded person.—Word "husband" in Sec. 498-A is not limited to cover only those persons who have entered into legally valid marriage. The thrust of the offence under Sec. 498-A is subjecting of the woman to cruelty. Likewise, the thrust of the offence under Sec. 304-B is also the "Dowry Death". Consequently, the evil sought to be curbed are distinct and separate from the persons Committing the offending acts and there could be no impediment in law to liberally construe the words or expressions relating to the persons committing the offence so as to rope in not only those validly married but also any one who has undergone some or other form of marriage and thereby assumed for himself the position of husband to live, cohabitate and exercise authority as such husband over another woman.

The purpose for which Secs. 498-A and 304-B, I. P. C. and Sec. 113-B of the Evidence Act, 1872 were introduced cannot be lost sight of. Legislations enacted with some policy to curb and alleviate some public evil rampant in society and effectuate a definite public purpose or benefit positively requires to be interpreted with certain element of realism too and not merely pedantically or hyper-technically. The obvious objective was to prevent harassment to a woman who enters into a marital relationship with a person and later on, becomes a victim of the greed for money. Can a person who enters into a marital arrangement be allowed to take a shelter behind a smokescreen to contend that since there was no valid marriage the question of dowry does not arise. Such legalistic niceties would destroy the purpose of the provisions. Such hairsplitting legalistic approach would encourage harassment to a woman over demand or money. The nomenclature 'dowry' does not have any magic charm written over it. It is just a label given to demand of money in relation to marital relationship. The legislative intent is clear from the fact that it is not only the husband but also his relations who are covered by Sec. 498A. Legislature has taken care of children born from invalid marriages. Sec. 16 of the Marriage Act deals with legitimacy of children of void and voidable marriages. Can it be said that legislature which was conscious of the social stigma attached to children of void and voidable marriages closed eyes to plight of a woman who unknowingly or unconscious of the legal consequences entered into the marital relationship. If such restricted meaning is given, it would not further the legislative intent. On the contrary, it would be against the concern shown by the legislature for avoiding harassment to a woman over demand of money in relation to marriages. It would be appropriate to construe the expression 'husband' to cover a person who enters into marital relationship and under the colour of such proclaimed or feigned status of husband subjects the woman concerned to cruelty or coerce her in any manner or for any of the purposes enumerated in the relevant provisions (Secs. 304-B/498-A), whatever be the legitimacy of the marriage itself for the limited purpose of Secs. 498-A and 304-B, I. P. C. Such an interpretation, known and recognized as purposive construction has to come into play in a case of this nature. Koppisetti Subbharao alias Subramaniam v. State of A. P., AIR 2009 SC 2684 : 2009 (7) SCR 157 (SC) : 2009 (12) SCC 331 : 2009 (4) SLT 687 (SC) : 2009 (6) JT 212 (SC) : 2009 (6) Scale 528 (SC) : 2009 (3) Supreme 688 (SC) : 2009 CrLJ 3480 (SC) : 2009 (4) JCC 3061 (SC).

29. Dowry Prohibition Act.—The accused married Kantaben (deceased). Soon after two years of his marriage, the accused started in flicting mental and physical torture on her and she was taunted by the accused for not bringing sufficient dowry in the marriage. He also demanded from the victim an amount of Rs. 40,000/- for the purpose of purchasing a house. He even wrote letters to the in-laws and demanded Rs. 40,000/- for purchasing the house. The demand was persistent. Even threats were administered to the deceased and her family members. Thus, the accused inflicted mental and physical torture on the victim which prompted her to commit suicide by burning herself after pouring kerosene on her body. Thus, as per the prosecution case, the appellant has committed the offence punishable under Secs. 498-A and 306 IPC read with Secs. 3 and 7 of Dowry Prohibition Act.

The complaint was given and on the strength of the complaint given by the complainant investigation was carried out. It is pointed about that the accused himself had taken the deceased to the hospital and from his conduct it clearly shows that the accused was not guilty. In essence, it is submitted that the commission of alleged offences has not been established by the prosecution.

The conviction so far as it relates to Sec. 306 IPC, therefore, cannot be sustained in view of the background facts and is set aside. But the materials on record particularly the letters on which specific emphasis has been led by the trial Court and the High Court amply demonstrate the commission of offences punishable under Sec. 498-A IPC and Sec. 3 of DP Act. The convictions are sustained. But the sentence in respect of Sec. 3 of DP Act is reduced to three years. Kishangiri Mangalgiri Goswami v. State of Gujarat, AIR 2009 SC 1808 : 2009 CrLJ 1720 : 2009 (4) SCC 52 : 2009 (2) JT 84 : 2009 (2) Scale 31 : 2009 (1) Supreme 491 : 2009 (1) SLT 698.

It is clear from the evidences of the two witnesses, especially the father that the demand of motorcycle and Rs. 25,000/- was made only by the accused and as per the statement of witness the only torture that they give medicine for abortion which has not been found true by the Court below by the doctor.

The conviction of in-laws have not been proved beyond reasonable doubts by the prosecution and accordingly, they are acquitted from the charges made against them under Section 498A of the IPC and their conviction and sentence is set aside.

However, the conviction of the appellant has been proved beyond reasonable doubt by the evidence that he was demanding Rs. 25,000/- for purchasing motorcycle and when the same was not given, he left his wife in the hospital and while she was in hospital, he conducted second marriage. In that view of the matter, his conviction and sentence is maintained. Raju Mahto vs. State of Jharkhand, 2010 (3) CriLJ 3362 (Jhar).

Demand of dowry—What is not.—Accused Geeta had no issues and she was insisting the deceased Ratnavva to give her son in adoption to her, to which she refused and so accused No. 4 started ill-treating her. This version is unbelievable, simply because, accused No. 4 has no issues, it does not mean that she same will insist her brother or her brother's wife to give their only son in adoption to her. Even assuming that she has demanded so, it does not mean that is demand of dowry so as to attract the provisions of Section 498-A IPC. Bhaskar Ramappa Madar vs. State of Karnataka, 2009 (11) SCC 690 : 2009 CrLJ 2422 : 2009 (2) Crimes 80 (SC) : 2009 (4) JT 640 : 2009 (5) SCR 256 : 2009 (5) Scale 100 : 2009 (3) Supreme 5.

30. Difference between Sec. 306 and 498-A.—One other provision which is relevant to be noted is Sec. 306, IPC. The basic difference between the two Sections i.e. Sec. 306 and Sec. 498-A is that of intention. Under the latter, cruelty committed by the husband or his relations drag the woman concerned to commit suicide, while under the former provision suicide is abetted and intended. Satish Kumar Batra and Ors. v. State of Haryana., AIR 2009 SC 2180 : 2009 (5) SCR 451 (SC) : 2009 (12) SCC 491 : 2009 (5)

JT 403 (SC) : 2009 (5) Scale 280 (SC) : 2009 (3) SLT 379 (SC) : 2009 CrLJ 2447 (SC)
2009 (2) JCC 1341 (SC).

The charges under Sections 306 and 498-A of the IPC are independent of each other. Under Section 498-A of the IPC, the cruelty is committed by the husband and his relations dragging the woman to commit suicide. While under Section 306 of the IPC suicide is abetted and intended [Giridhar Shankar Tawade vs. State of Maharashtra 2002 (5) SCC 177 = 2002 Cri LJ 2814, referred to]. However, in the statutory provision under Section 498-A of the IPC, two specific instances have been taken note of in order to ascribe a meaning to the word "cruelty", where explanation (a) involves three specific situations viz. (1) to drive a woman to commit suicide, or (2) to cause grave injury, or (3) to cause danger to life, limb or health, both mental and physical. In explanation (b) there is an absence of physical injury that includes coercive harassment which obviously is equally heinous to match the physical injury, where one is patent, the other one is latent, but equally serious in terms of the provisions of the statute since same would also embrace the attributes of cruelty in terms of Section 498-A of the IPC. Jamnalal Pande vs. State of MP, 2010 (1) CrLJ 538 (MP).

31. Harassment of wife and bigamy by husband—Scope.—Section 494, IPC, inter alia, requires the following ingredients to be satisfied, namely, (i) the accused must have contracted first marriage; (ii) he must have married again; (iii) the first marriage must be subsisting and (iv) the spouse must be living. Insofar as present case is concerned the appellant's marriage was not subsisting on 02.01.2002 when he is said to have married second time. Pertinently before the High Court, along with reply, the complainant annexed copy of an affidavit filed by Kamaljeet Kaur which states that she was not aware of the divorce proceedings filed by her husband. However, from this affidavit, it is apparent that her husband has obtained a divorce judgment. There is nothing in the affidavit that divorce judgment has been stayed or set aside. On the face of the allegations made in the first information report, therefore, ingredients of the offence under Section 494, IPC are not satisfied. Moreover, in the affidavit there is not a word about demand of dowry or harassment on account of dowry by the appellant. Pashaura Singh vs. State of Punjab and Anr., AIR 2010 SC 922.

Accused treated wife with cruelty for bringing insufficient dowry and also performed another marriage. Statement of witnesses showed that bigamy was in vogue in that place and was recognized as custom.

The proceeding under Section 125 Cr.P.C was compromised between the accused and Sangya Devi wife and at their instance consent order was passed by learned Chief Judicial Magistrate. The learned Sessions Judge has also observed that in view of second marriage of appellant with Sumitra Devi the accused has abetted the suicide of Sangya Devi. Sangya Devi was aware of the marriage of Sumitra Devi with accused and the fact that the accused had married second time with Sumitra Devi has been pleaded in the maintenance application. The maintenance application was prepared on 25.5.1999 and Sangya Devi had committed suicide in the intervening night of 26/27.08.1999. Therefore, it cannot be said that second marriage of accused with Sumitra Devi is the immediate cause of committing suicide by Sangya Devi and in other words by second marriage the accused had abetted suicide of Sangya Devi.

It has come on record that in the area to which the accused and Sangya Devi belong, it is not uncommon for a male to solemnize more than one marriage. Psyche of individual is influenced by the culture of the society in which he or she lives. PW-2 Shyama Nand aged 82 years who remained member of Gram Panchayat has stated that bigamy is prevalent in Kinnaur District and is recognized by custom as well. It is thus clear that for a male to have more than one wife was a part of custom and culture of the society of accused and deceased. In these circumstances, it cannot be said that the second marriage of the accused was the cause for Sangya Devi to commit suicide and for this reason appellant cannot be blamed to have abetted the suicide of Sangya Devi. The prosecution has not brought on record evidence so as to bring the case within the ambit of abetment as provided in Section 107 IPC. Surendra Kumar vs. State of HP, 2010 (2) CriLJ 1356 (HP).

Accused husband subjected victim, second wife, to physical and mental torture and attempted to kill her. Evidence of witnesses that accused used to beat victim under influence of liquor.

Initially the defence case was that the victim had herself poured kerosene oil. However, the suggestion was changed during the cross-examination of the victim. I have already mentioned earlier that the victim was given a suggestion that kerosene oil fell on her body accidentally in the midst of scuffle. Strangely, while giving statement under Section 313, Cr.P.C., accused neither pleaded that the victim had herself poured kerosene oil to make out a false case or that the said petroleum product had accidentally fell on her body.

Be that as it may a good number of independent witnesses from the locality have deposed in chorus that the victim came running to the house of P.W. 3 and was found terrified and reported that her husband had attempted to kill her by setting her afire. No prosecution witness was given any suggestion that he or she was giving a tainted testimony due to any enmity or grudge against the accused. At any rate, the suggestion given to the victim that kerosene oil fell on her body in the midst of scuffle is somewhat an admission of the accused and the same can be considered as corroborative evidence under Section 21 of the Evidence Act, 1872.

In the cross-examination, has deposed that she herself was tortured by her step-mother and that she did not have good relation with her. In my considered opinion, this might be the reason for giving a twisted testimony to defend her father. I am also of the view that the defence story of pouring kerosene oil just to teach a lesson to the husband, who was already in an angry mood and physically powerful, is inconceivable. In ordinary course, in such a situation, a battered and mentally week woman would run for cover instead of challenging a physically sound and intoxicated person.

Section 307, I.P.C. relates to the offence of attempted murder. Under this provision of law, if any act is done with such intention or knowledge that the act was likely to cause death, if not prevented or intercepted, it would constitute the offence of attempt to murder. In the case before me, large quantity of kerosene oil, was poured on the body of the victim woman. Had the appellant been successful to ignite the wearing apparels of the victim there would have been every possibility of her death. Hence, conviction of the appellant under Section 307, I.P.C., having based on evidence does not call for interference. Sri Maran Nama vs. State of Tripura, 2010 (2) CriLJ 1594 (Gau).

32. Circumstantial evidence.—The accused did not make an effort to save th deceased but was shown to have been abusing the deceased and his relatives, tried t prove his innocence by manipulating records of a nursing home. The obvious attemp was to show that he could not have looked after the treatment of the wife as he himse was undergoing treatment. Several other factors throw considerable light relating to th absence of any material to show that a stove had burst which resulted in causin injuries on the body of the deceased. Unfortunately, the High Court did not eve analyse the circumstances but came to an abrupt conclusion that the circumstances d not constitute a complete chain.

As noted above, the circumstances point to only one conclusion, i.e. guilt of th accused. The judgment of the High Court impugned in this appeal is set aside and tha of the trial Court is restored. The Respondent shall surrender to custody forthwith t serve remainder of sentence if any. State of West Bengal vs. Dipak Halder, AIR 2009 S 1883 : 2009 (2) Crimes 484 (SC) : 2009 (7) SCC 288 : 2009 (7) JT 444 : 2009 (7) Scal 596 : 2009 (8) SCR 530 : 2009 (5) SLT 282.

33. Dying declaration—When reliable.—Prosecution case that husband an appellant, wife of brother of husband demanded dowry and subjected deceased t torture in that connection after the marriage. Allegations that there was illic relationship between appellant and husband of deceased. While in hospital, decease disclosed before her parents and other relatives that appellant not only poured th kerosene oil on deceased and lit fire but also closed the door after going out of the sai room where the deceased was left to burn by the fire.

The judgments of the Courts below clearly indicate that endorsements at the tim of the admission of the deceased in Dhenkanal Hospital made in Ext. A as well as i Cuttack Hospital made in Ext. 9 indicate that the cause of injury received by the patien was mentioned to be an accident due to bursting of stove, but that the sai endorsements do not indicate nor the evidence of witnesses adduced during the cours of the trial show that the aforesaid endorsements were recorded on the basis of th statements made by the deceased. On the other hand it is indicated therefrom that Be Head Ticket (Ext. 9) proves and establishes that on 09.02.2000, as per the history give by the deceased herself the treating physician had endorsed that it was a case c homicidal burn due to ignition caused by spilling of kerosene. Further, though n specific endorsement has been made on the dying declaration but there i contemporaneous evidence in the form of Ext. 9/1 which makes it clear that the Docto recording the dying declaration had recorded that the patient was oriented to time an place and mentally clear at the time of recording of the dying declaration.

We have scrutinized the contents of the recorded dying declaration which wa recorded by the doctor of the hospital where the deceased was treated for her bur injuries. On going through the same we find no infirmity in the said dying declaratio as the said dying declaration vividly mentions the manner in which the decease suffered the burn injuries on pouring kerosene oil on her by the appellant who als lighted the matchstick which caused the fire and burnt the deceased. The appellant nc only poured the kerosene oil on the deceased and lit the fire but also closed the doc after going out of the said room where the deceased was left to burn by the fire. Th said description given by the deceased in the dying declaration recorded by the doctor i clear, unambiguous and there is no reason why we should not accept the said dyin declaration as correct and true version of the incident.

The objections raised by the Counsel appearing for the appellant which are of technical nature with regard to recording and admissibility of the aforesaid dying declaration. We are however, of the considered opinion that the said dying declaration recorded by the doctor is also corroborated by the oral dying declaration made before PW-1 and PW-3 and the said fact also finds corroboration from the statement of PW-1 and PW-3 and also from the FIR which were proved through the evidence of PW-1.

The aforesaid principles which are laid down are fully applicable to the facts of the present case as in this case the dying declaration was recorded by a doctor who was most disinterested witness. It was also categorically stated by the doctor that at the time when she made her dying declaration, she was in a fit state of mind.

Both the Courts were totally justified and also right in relying upon the two dying declarations one recorded by the doctor (PW-10) and the other i.e. oral dying declaration made to PW-1 and PW-3. The two technical objections which were raised by the Counsel for the appellant, one regarding the doctor's certification and endorsement as to mental fitness of the deceased, the same was held by this Court to be a rule of prudence and not the ultimate test as to whether or not the said dying declaration was truthful or voluntary.

The doctor who recorded the dying declaration was examined as a witness and he had in his deposition categorically stated that the deceased while making the aforesaid statement was conscious and in a fit mental condition to make such a statement. The aforesaid position makes it, therefore, clear that the aforesaid dying declaration could be relied upon as the same was truthfully recorded and the said statement gave a vivid account of the manner in which the incident had taken place.

Therefore, taking an overall view of all the facts and circumstances of the case and the evidence on record, we find no ground to interfere with the order of conviction and sentence recorded by the trial Court and confirmed by the High Court holding the appellant guilty of the offence under Sec. 302 IPC. Sukanti Moharana vs. State of Orissa, 2009 (3) Crimes 271(SC) : 2009 (9) SCC 163 : 2009 (9) JT 697 : 2009 (10) Scale 246 : 2009 (11) SCR 996 : 2009 (5) Supreme 636 : 2009 (4) JCC 2585.

34. Investigation—Slip-shod investigation.—Under Sec. 157 Criminal Procedure Code, the copy of the FIR has to be sent to the Magistrate. This never happened. However, seen from the records, this FIR reached the Magistrate only on 22.06.1994. This is extremely suspicious. In his deposition, the Investigating Officer proved that the FIR was chalked out in writing by Maheshwari Mandal, the SHO. Very significantly, this SHO or any other officer never examined the house thoroughly nor have they examined the inner rooms for ascertaining as to whether the doors and the latches were intact or not. This was a typical dumb investigation. Investigating Officer has not even bothered to draw a spot Panchnama. Though he stated that the accused were not present, he did not suggest any efforts having been made for their arrest. In his cross-examination, he admitted that in the case diary, he had not recorded as to which officer received information in the police station or was it mentioned in the case diary as to which lady was referred to in the telephonic information. Even the name of the informer was admittedly not there in the case diary. Specific questions were put as to whether he inspected the rooms at the place of occurrence or not. He admitted that it was not so recorded in the case diary. Even the time of sending the dead body for post-mortem was not mentioned. He admitted that when he reached the spot, neither the accused nor his parents were present. Then he asserted that their luggage was there. It is ver significant to note that he admitted that Anil Kumar had not stated about the time o occurrence nor did he state the fact of beating Sushma with fists and slaps. Ver significantly, he admitted that Anil Kumar had not stated about this meeting with Om Prakash Vidyalankar on the way. He had also not stated that his sister was murdere on account of not giving the colour television and motor cycle. He further admitted tha Anil Kumar (PW-1) had not stated that his father had told him while he went for tuitio that some articles were to be delivered to his sister. The witness admits "on enquiry b us, he remained silent".

The investigating agency would have done well in examining at least th neighbours but that does not seem to have been done. DW-2 was also a neighbour i the sense that she stayed very near to the house of the deceased. It is not known as t why the Investigating Officer did not examine neighbours, one of whom was the relativ of the deceased. The apathy on the part of the Investigating Officer to examine th house closely creates suspicion. This is an unfortunate case where due to the slip-sho investigation the death of a young woman has to go unpunished.

35. Cruelty and harassment—Elements of.—Cruelty has been defined by th explanation added to the Section itself. The basic ingredients of Section 498-A IPC ar cruelty and harassment. The elements of cruelty so far as Clause (a) is concerned, hav been classified as follows :

(i) any 'wilful' conduct which is of such a nature as is likely to drive the woma to commit suicide; or

(ii) any 'wilful' conduct which is likely to cause grave injury to the woman; or

(iii) any 'wilful' act which is likely to cause danger to life, limb or health, whether physical or mental of the woman.

(I) The harassment of a married woman.

(II) With a view to coercing her or any person related to her to meet the unlawful demand of dowry or for any property or valuable security or on account of her failure or failure of any person related to her to meet such a demand.

Therefore, it is evident that the charge under Section 498-A can be brought home i the essential ingredients either in Clauses (a) or (b) or both are found duly established. Undavali Narayana Rao vs. State of Andhra Pradesh, 2009 (3) Crimes 265 (SC) : 2009 (9) JT 573 : 2009 (10) Scale 125 : 2009 (5) Supreme 608 : 2009 (11) SCR 660 : 2009 (6) SLT 795.

36. Inherent Powers.—Complainant and accused had entered into registered agreement of divorce as per custom. The customary divorce may be legal or illegal. The fact that such an agreement had been entered into or the appellant had received a sum by way of permanent alimony, however, stands admitted. The document is a registered one. Appellant being in the legal profession must be held to be aware of the legal implication thereof. If the contents of the said agreement are taken to be correct. indisputably the parties had been living separately for more than ten years. How then a case under Sec. 498A of the Indian Penal Code can be said to have made out and that too at such a distant point of time is the question, particularly in view of the bar of limitation as contained in Sec. 468 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Even otherwise it is unbelievable that the appellant was really harassed by her husband or her in-laws.

We are not oblivious of the fact that there does not exist any period of limitation in respect of an offence under Sec. 494, as the maximum period of punishment which can be imposed therefor is seven years.

But no allegation has been made out in regard to commission of the said offence so far as the respondents are concerned. If even for exercising its jurisdiction under Sec. 482 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the High Court has taken into consideration an admitted document, we do not see any legal infirmity therein. If it is a case of customary divorce, the question in regard to the existence of good custom may have to be gone into in a civil proceeding. But a criminal prosecution shall not lie. It was initiated mala fide. Thus, it is allowed to continue, the same shall be an abuse of the process of court. M. Saravana Porselvi v. A. R. Chandrasekar and Ors., AIR 2008 SC 2462 : 2008 (9) SCR 937 (SC) : 2008 (11) SCC 520 : 2008 (7) JT 245 (SC) : 2008 (9) Scale 411 (SC) : 2008 (4) Supreme 7 (SC) : 2008 CrLJ 3034 (SC) : 2008 (2) Crimes 301 (SC) : 2008 (3) JCC 1597 (SC) : 2008 (3) Recent CR 454 (SC).

37. Complaint for Cruelty—Taking cognizance.—Limitation for taking cognizance is three years. Complaint filed beyond period of three years was barred by limitation. Satish alias Rajendra Harbans Tiwari & Ors vs State of Maharashtra & Anr., 2010 (4) CriLJ 4089 (Bom).

38. Matrimonial cruelty.—In the context of offence of "matrimonial cruelty" one has to consider family status of the parties. The deceased was well educated, sensitive and newly married young woman. The incident of frequent beatings, denial of conjugal rights, returning of the husband to home under spell of liquor and that he had kept a mistress, considered together, would indicate that the sensitive woman was unable to bear with the regular trouble. The accused husband could have gathered her mental state when she had once attempted to self inflict injuries to her palms. Even so, he continued to tell her to die. This is the conduct which is no short of matrimonial cruelty of high degree as contemplated under sub-clause (a) of S. 498-A of the Penal Code. Sanjay Baburao Pathrale v. State of Maharashtra, 2009 CriLJ 2165 (Bom).

39. Past ill-treatment.—In the matter at hand cause of death of wife is fact in issue. Relatives claim deceased to have made a statement that husband demanded Rs. 50,000/-. But, it is not the case of prosecution, which mainly relies upon the two dying declarations and the oral dying declaration that soon before the incident of burning there were expressions on the part of the husband which could relate his annoyance the spur of moment to demand Rs. 50,000/- for the purposes of purchasing motorcyc and the demand of Rs.50,000/- or ill-treatment, if any, on that count to which deceas was subjected during two years preceding the death, therefore, cannot be termed "cause of her death" or "circumstances of the transaction which resulted in her death All the claims of the relatives of this past ill-treatment, therefore, cannot be admissib pieces of evidence and the prosecution, therefore, cannot rely upon that evidence f bringing home the guilt under Section 498A of I.P.C. Shivkumar Maruti Umardand State of Maharashtra, 2009 CriLJ 2549 (Bom).

A judge censuring in good faith the conduct of a witness, or of an offence of the Court, a head of a department censuring in good faith those who are under his orders : a parent censuring in good faith, a child in the presence of other children : a school-master, whose authority is derived from a parent, censuring in good faith, a pupil in the presence of other pupils ; a master censuring a servant in good faith for remissness in service ; a banker censuring in good faith the cashier of his bank for the conduct of such cashier as such cashier—are within this exception.

Accusation preferred in good faith to authorised person.—Eighth Exception.—It is not defamation to prefer in good faith an accusation against any person to any of those who have lawful authority over that person with respect to the subject-matter of accusation.

Illustration

If A in good faith accuses Z before a Magistrate ; if A in good faith complains of the conduct of Z, a servant, to Z's master ; if A in good faith complains of the conduct of Z, a child to Z's father—A is within this exception.

Imputation made in good faith by person for protection of his or other's interests.—Ninth Exception.—It is not defamation to make an imputation on the character of another, provided that the imputation be made in good faith for the protection of the interest of the person making it, or of any other person, or for the public good.

(a) A, a Shopkeeper, says to B, who manages his business.—"Sell nothing to Z unless he pays you ready money, for I have no opinion of his honesty". A is within the exception, if he has made this imputation on Z in good faith for the protection of his own interests.

(b) A, a Magistrate, in making a report to his own superior officer, casts an Imputation on the character to Z. Here, if the imputation is made in good faith, and for the public good. A is within the exception.

Caution intended for good of person to whom conveyed or for public good.—Tenth Exception.—It is not defamation to convey a caution, in good faith to one person against another, provided that such caution be intended for the good of the person to whom it is conveyed, or of some person in whom that person is interested, or for the public good.

1. Principle.—"The offence of defamation, as it is defined in this Code, consists in the injury offered to reputation, not in any breach of the peace or other consequence that may result from it. The essence of the offence consists in its tendency to cause that description of pain, which is felt by person who knows himself to be the object of the unfavourable sentiments of his fellow creatures and those inconveniences to which a person who is the object to such unfavourable sentiments is exposed. No distinction is made between written and spoken defamation. The offence is committed whether the words are spoken, written, printed or engraved, or in whatever manner the words, signs, or visible representations conveying the imputations are expressed".— Morgan and Macpherson.

2. Scope.—In criminal prosecution question whether statement is made on privileged occasion is to be decided with reference to Section 499. AIR 1931 Rang 83 : 32 Cr LJ 934 : 1931 Cr C 371 : 132 Ind Cas 553. Defamation in civil and criminal law is quite distinct. 128 Ind Cas 371 : 32 Cr LJ 132 : 8 Rang 359 : AIR 1931 Rang 81. Mere assenting to a third party's report of what one had said may be defamation. 85 Ind Cas 361 : 26 Cr LJ 521 : AIR 1925 Mad 320 : 47 MLJ 746. Defamatory statements by a party to a civil proceeding is punishable. 16 SLR 150 : 84 Ind Cas 58 : 26 Cr LJ 234. But Courts should be careful when a complaint of defamation is filed with respect to proceedings in a Civil Court to see whether the provisions of Section 209. Cr. Pro. Code, generally have not been evaded. 86 Ind Cas 1005 : 26 Cr LJ 941. Statements in course of judicial proceedings as such have no absolute privilege. 84 Ind Cas 977 : AIR 1925 Rang 15. Publishing an imputation intending to harm and knowing and having reason to believe, that such imputation would harm the complainant's reputation is enough. 27 Cr LJ 868 : 22 Bom LR 1224. The rules of the English common law apply to question of civil liability for defamation in India, but criminal liability is determined exclusively by the Penal Code. A defamatory statement whether on oath or otherwise, or contained in a plaint falls within Section 499, and is not absolutely privileged. 7 Pat LT 587 : 40 Cal 438 : 48 Cal 388 : 24 ALJ 329 : 92 Ind Cas 429 : 97 Cr LJ 253. A person may be defamed by scurrilous attack on his wife's character. AIR 1949 Cal 567 : 50 Cr LJ 972.

When defamatory questions are put to a witness by the advocate of the accused a complaint against him is premature when the case is still pending. 48 Cr LJ 997 : AIR 1948 Pat 56. The prosecution under Section 171-G, is not obligatory when the offence committed is also one under Section 600. AIR 1940 Nag 249 : 44 Cr LJ 734 : IL 1942 Nag 208. Where a notice published in the newspaper contained an imputation that the complainant has been dishonest in the management of the affairs of a company and was trying to conceal that dishonesty by methods that were themselves dishonest, the imputation is defamatory. 97 Ind Cas 431 : 27 Cr LJ 1119. A newspaper is not a person and therefore it is not a criminal offence under Section 499, to defame a newspaper. 99 Ind Cas 347 : 28 Cr LJ 139 : AIR 1927 Rang 43 ; but see AIR 1933 All 434 : 34 Cr LJ 926 : 1933 Cr C 740. An imputation of insolvency against a person in the way of his trade is per se defamatory. 21 SLR 130 : 98 Ind Cas 124 : 27 Cr LJ 1276 : AIR 1927 Sind 54. Calling a person a discharged, bankrupt and gambler in an affidavit amounts to defamation. 96 Ind Cas 409 : 27 Cr LJ 247 : 1927 Sind 58.

Publication is sufficiently proved when it is shown that the accused did the act which has the quality of communicating to third persons. 27 Cr LJ 1276 : 21 SLR 130 : 98 Ind Cas 124. A plea that though there was publication of the statement, there was no publication to person mentioned in the charge, is a highly technical plea and the defect in the charge is curable under Section 537, Cr. Pro. Code. 96 Ind Cas 496 : 27 Cr LJ 947. Prosecution must make out a case for conviction but the accused must prove that this case comes within the exceptions under Section 105, of the Evidence Act. AIR 1928 Nag 58. Imputation to a Hindu that he is an outcaate is defamatory and is not covered by Section 95. AIR 1928 All 213. There is a distinction between "fair comment" based on well known or admitted facts and the assertion of unsubstantiated facts for comment. Where comment is made on allegations of fact which do not exist, the very foundation of the plea disappears. A wilful misrepresentation of fact or any mis-statement which an editor could have discovered to be a mis-statement if he had made proper enquiries cannot support the plea of "fair comment" as an editor must make due enquiries as to its truth before disseminating the statement of those facts. 116 Ind Cas 99 : 23 SLR 216. Comment based on mis-statement of facts is not protected. AIR 1927 All 116 : 27 Cr LJ 1361 : 98 Ind Cas 481. Editor should make enquiry before publishing defamatory matter. 145 Ind Cas 126 : AIR 1933 All 434 : 34 Cr LJ 926. Truth is not an absolute defence to a prosecution for defamation. 17 NLJ 66 : AIR 1934 Nag 129.

Every defamatory statement not coming within any of the exceptions is punishable under Section 500. None of the exceptions exempts a defamatory statement from punishment on the ground of privilege. AIR 1930 All 623 : 1960 All Cr R 118 : 1960 Cr LJ 1296.

Section 499 makes no distinction between an ordinary citizen and the editor of a newspaper does not enjoy greater freedom in the matter of giving expression to his opinion than an ordinary citizen. ILR (1957) 2 Cal 181 : AIR 1958 Madh Pra 216 : 1958 Cr LJ 1036 (degree of care and caution of the editor of the newspaper) : (19 57) 2 All ER 385. A witness cannot be prosecuted for demotion in respect of statements made by him when giving evidence in a judicial proceeding. This protection is not available to a complainant when he deliberately makes a defamatory statement without the slightest justification. AIR 1955 Punj 142 : 1955 Cr LJ 991 : AIR 1962 MP 241 : 1962 (2) Cr LJ 193.

Publishers, Editors, Journalists and Reporters forming part and parcel of freedom of speech and expression, which no doubt includes freedom of press as well, are entitled to ventilate the views only within the permissible limits, permissible by law and not beyond thereto. They are expected to be careful and cautious while proceeding with publication of the matter and they cannot claim any special privilege as far as the law relating to defamation is concerned. It may be part of their lawful duties, but at the same time they also owe a duty to be careful and diligent in verifying such statements with care and caution before publishing them. Negligent and reckless allegations constituting defamatory statements can never be protected under the guise of any of the Exceptions. At the same time, proof of Exceptions and discharge of burden in relation thereto and the standard of proof required cannot be weighed in golden scales and the discharge of burden in such a case just cannot be equated with that of discharge of burden on the part of the prosecution. It is no doubt true that even in the case of reproduction of article by yet another newspaper, care should be taken to scrutinize the same. Sultan Salahuddin Owaisi v. Syed Vigaruddin, 2005 Cr LJ 2726 (AP) : 2006(1) ALD (CRL) 190 : 2006(1) AndhLT(Cri) AP 45 : 2005(3) Rec Cri R 874.

A superior officers noting that a subordinate had used objectionable language in the file would not, in any manner, bring the remarks within the ambit of defamation punishable under Section 500, IPC. M.S. Ahuja v. Ami Chand, 2006 Cr LJ 1503 (P&H).

The members of the Legislative Assembly and of the Parliament are absolutely privileged and they can make with impunity libellous statements while participating in the deliberation of the House and the Court has no jurisdiction to entertain an action in respect of defamatory utterances by them, despite the fact that the statements are grossly defamatory and deliberately false. This privilege, however, does not extend to a statement published by a member outside the House even though it may be a reproduction of what was said during the debate. AIR 1961 Punj 215 : 1961 (1) Cr LJ 710.

Neither ill-will nor malice is an ingredient of the offence of defamation, and absence of either cannot serve as a defence. An unproved plea of injudicious cross-examination of the person aggrieved, and obstinately persisting in the libellous charge withoutany sufficient reason, may be taken into consideration, as evidence of malice. AIR 1961 Punj 215 : 1961 (1) Cr LJ 710.

Intention on the part of the accused to harm the reputation or the knowledge or reasonable belief that the imputation will harm the reputation of the person concerned is an essential ingredient of the offence under the section. 1983 Cr LJ 772 : 1983 Rajdhani LR 58.

Even a Corporation be punished for libel published by its authority. AIR 1926 Ker 264 : 1966 Cr LJ 1299. A wife can complain against her husband in India. AIR 1961 Mad 230.

Mere feeling of involvement cannot constitute a case of defamation and cannot be an actionable wrong. The imputation made in newspaper against president and director of the society cannot be said to be defamatory to the society. Defamatory purpose wil not render the accused person liable if the statement has defamatory significance fo others. Homen Borgohain v. Brahmaputra Valley Regional Handloom Weavers Co operative Society Ltd., 1995 GLR 401 (Gau).

In a case where the article published only highlighted ideological differences existing between the members of SF Group and the petitioner and the members of the Christian Fellowship Centre, it was held that the expression of the petitioners view who was having different religious belief did not amount to defamation. JAC Poonen v. Hedlden Treasure Literature Incorporated in Canada, 2002 Cri LJ 481 (Kant).

The defamatory imputations against a collections of person thus falls within the definition of defamation. The language of the explanation is wide, and therefore, besides a company or an association, any collection of persons would be covered by it, but such a collection of persons must be an identifiable body so that it is possible to say with definiteness that a group of particular the community, was defamed. Therefore in a case where explanation (2) is resorted to, the in entity of the company or the association or collection of persons must be established so as to be relatable to the defamatory words or imputations. Zac Poonen, v. Hidden Treasure Literature Incorporated in Canada and another, 2002 Cri LJ 481. (Kat) : AIR 2002 Kant HCR 33 (Kant) : 2002(2) All Cri LR 771 (Kant).

3. Harm the reputation..—"In order to establish the offence under this section, it is not necessary to prove that actual harm has been caused. It is sufficient to show that harm was intended to the complainant's reputation or that the accused person knew or had reason to believe that the imputations made by him would harm his reputation. 9 Ind Cas 775. If an imputation has no tendency to harm a person in his reputation, it will not amount to defamation although its effect may be to cause that person to suffer in his interest. An imputation which is defamatory when directed against the person, is not necessarily defamatory when directed against another person".—Morgan and Macpherson.

The respondent in a letter addressed to his wife was described as her ADC, by the accused who sought protection in a revision from Exception 9 to Section 500, IPC. Held, the alleged material contained not the ingredients of defamation and as such its protection is not available to him. (1986) 2 Crimes 564 (Cal).

The expression measure on imputation reaching a third person or rather shown to have reached such a person. 1986 Cr LJ 1121 (Mad) : 1985 LW (Cr) 148.

Imputations in the offending article must be directed against a definite person. Offending article aiming at a particular community in general. No personal injury caused to the complainant—Complaint, held, not maintainable. Vishwa Nath v. Shambhu Nath Pandeya, 1995 Cr LJ 277 (Alld).

The accused, a barrister and the complainant, a pleader, were engaged in a criminal case. The latter made a remark conveying an imputation on the former upon which the former called the latter a liar. Held, that even if the expression made use of by the appellant amount to defamation in point of law, the case came under the provisions of Section 95. AWN 1883. 46. The use of common abusive terms does not constitute an offence under the section. AWN 1883. 36. Although the language of Section 499, IPC, is open to the most elastic application, yet Magistrate will act wisely in refusing to adopt it to cases in which no real harm has been done or where civil remedy might more appropriately be sought. AWN 1883, 167. The accused referred to the complainant, who was a Porsutia Kaisth, as a Kari Chamar with the result that none of the priests attended the religious ceremony which had to be performed at the complainant's house. Held, that the accused were guilty of an offence under this section. 6 Ind Cas 876 : 11 Cr LJ 413. The headman of a caste issued a notice to a member of that caste, intimating that a complaint had been received by the caste that his daughter had committed adultery with a certain person and requiring him to appear before the caste with his daughter in order to clear her character. Held, that the notice would not furnish the basis of charge of a defamation, as it contained no imputation by the persons who signed it, against the daughter. Rat Un Cr C 387. Although a person who defames another may so compose himself that little injury results from his offence, yet, he is not accused from the penalties attached to the offence. 1 Weir 594. What the imputation was which a man intended to convey who did not directly express it, and whether he believed or had reason to believe that the imputation should produce a particular sentiment or opinion on the part of those to whom the communication was made are matters of fact, or inference from fact belonging where the judicial functions are divided, to the province of jury. Rat Un Cr C 140. An imputation charging a woman of being pregnant by adultery is defamatory. Rat Un Cr C 474. An expression of opinion by the members of a caste that their caste is superior to another caste is not such an imputation as would warrant a conviction under Section 500, Penal Code. 1 Weir 575. When the question arises whether the words used were intended to harm or had the effect of harming the reputation the Court must be in possession not only of the words used but also of the context in which they were used in order to find the intention and effect of the words. 51 All 313 : 26 ALJ 1334 : 30 Cr LJ 101 : 113 Ind Cas 213 : AIR 1929 All 1. A mere abuse is not ordinarily a defamation but the fact that the words used were those of abuse does not of itself take the article out of the definition of defamation, if, taken as a whole it was calculated to harm the reputation of the complainant. 112 Ind Cas 772 : 30 Cr LJ 4 : 30 Cr LJ 379 : AIR 1929 Lah 234. In the matter of a case under Section 500, when it is said to rest upon allegation made in petition to a Court in determining whether due care was taken by the accused, allowances should be made for the intelligence of the accused, his capacity to reason, the circumstances under which he was placed, and the occasion which necessitated his making the imputation. AIR 1929 Cal 779. The essence of the offence of defamation in the publication of a imputation with the knowledge that it will harm the reputation of the person defamed. A distinction should be made between a statement made by a person in an attempt to praise one's own self and statement calculated to cast reflection on another. A statement in praise, even exaggerated praise of one self, does not necessarily imply a-reflection on some other. What the complainant has to establish is not that the accused have indulged in exaggeration, or even falsehood, in respect of their own position and importance but that the defamatory statement contains an imputation concerning him calculated to harm his reputation. 160 Ind Cas 230 : 37 Cr LJ 258 : 1936 A Cr C 63 : 1936 ALJ 66 : 1936 Cr C 71 : AIR 1936 All 143.

The word "Black-marketeer" used at a public gathering is per se defamatory under the section and hence it is not necessary that actual harm should be caused but it was sufficient if it is proved that harm to the reputation of the person was intended. AI 1952 Mys 123 : 1952 Cr LJ 1633.

By the mere use of the words 'dishonest and fraudulent' the accused committed r offence of defamation. For making out an offence of defamation it is necessary that b using certain expressions the intention is to harm the reputation of a certain person c the person using those expressions knew or had reason to believe that such imputatio would harm the reputation of such person. 1953 Raj LW 203.

5. Cases.—A complaint of defamation cannot be dismissed on the technical grou that the offence of defamation charged against the accused merged in an offen punishable under Section 182, for which previous sanction was required under Secti 195. Cr. Pro. Code. 1 Weir 585; 1 Weir 580. Where a defamatory poem was contribut to newspaper and the accused, the Editor, Printer and Publisher of the newspap refused to give up the name of his correspondent, but contended that the poem was satire on ultra pursuits and did not refer to any individual, held, that the jury must lo at the whole poem and must take it as a whole, and that they must read the poem reasonable men, and should see whether it was capable of the construction put by t prosecution. Held, also that it was necessary that the whole world should read it as lil but, it is sufficient that those who knew the accused would consider it refer to the complainant by putting reasonable construction on the poem. 1 CWN 465. The Indian Penal Code, makes no exception in favour of a second or third publication of a defamatory statement as compared with the first. Such an exception would obviously be made a means of defeating the principal provisions of the law of defamation. 12 Bom 167. In reply to a book written by the complainant attacking Vaisnavism and its Founders, the accused resorted by a similar publication and both books dealt with highly controversial religious matters. Very violent language was used in the latter about the complainant. Held, it did not amount to defamation, as the personal character or responsibility of the complainant was not in any way assailed. 47 MLJ 664 : 1924 Mad 898 : 1924 MWN 768. Where the articles in question described the girls in a particular college that they were habitually misbehaving. Held, that the inevitable effect on the reader must be make believe that it was habitual with the girls of the college to behave in this way ; that being so all the girls in the college individually must suffer in reputation and not a complaint by some of them was competent. The news item about the insufficiency of sandalwood pieces at the cremation of the prescribed of the party has not affected the reputation of the first respondent either in his personal capacity or as a member of the National Party. As the alleged defamatory statement refers to unidentified party-leaders in Delhi and as it does not refer to any definite and determinate person or persons, it is indeed difficult to hold that the first respondent is in any way aggrieved by it. The first respondent has no locus standi to file the complaint against the news item regarding some event which happened at New Delhi. Karunakaran v. C. Jayasooryan, 1992 Cr LJ 3540 at 354 L, 3541 (Ker).

In order to bring defamatory imputation within the meaning of Section 499 of the Indian Penal Code, ill will or malice on the part of the writer or publisher is not necessary to be proved. The complainant also need to prove that he suffered on account of the publication. It is enough if it is shown that the accused intended or knew or at least had reason to believe that the defamatory imputation made by him would harm the reputation of the complainant. M.P. Narayana v. M.P. Chako, 1986 Cri LJ 2002 (Kerala). Dhyandevrao L Waghmode v. Allaabuksh Gulab Nadab 1999 Cri LJ 1754 (Bom).

6. Intention.—The essence of the offence is the intention or knowledge of the offender that the imputation may harm some person's reputation. Where no such intention or knowledge exists, the offence of defamation is not committed. The journeyman printer may be acquitted of defamation on the ground that in setting the types for printing defamatory matter and so aiding towards the circulation thereof, he had not the intention described in the definition, while the person who wrote the defamatory matter, for printing which the journeyman ignorantly set the types, may h convicted, because it may be clear that his purpose was to defame".—Morgan an Macpherson, 442. It is not necessary to constitute an offence under this section tha there should be evidence to show that the complainant has been injuriously affected b such alleged defamation. The law requires merely that there should be an intent an the person, who makes or publishes any imputation, should do so intending to harm o having reason to believe that such imputation will harm the reputation of such person 28 Cal 63 : 5 CWN 819 : 1 Weir 575 : 6 NWP 66 : 21 Ind Cas 478 : 14 Cr LJ 606 : 8 Ind Cas 503 : 22 Bom LR 1224 : 59 Ind Cas 202 : 22 Cr LJ 58 : 43 Ind Cas 403 : 19 C LJ 115.

7. Makes or publishes any imputation concerning any person.—In a case o defamation it must be proved that an alleged libel was made or published. 27 Mad 238 The defamatory matter must be published, i.e., it must be communicated to som person other than the person to whom it is addressed. 1 Weir 579 ; 7 CWN 74 : 30 Ca 402. But it cannot be laid down as a general rule that in no cas can a defamatory statement contained in a communication addressed to the perso defamed justify a conviction. The only rule is that there can be no offence of defamatio unless the defamatory statement is published or communicated to a third party, that is to a party other than the person defamed. The question whether there is suc publication or not is one of fact and the question may be decided either by direc evidence or on the circumstances of the case. 1937 ALJ 128 : 169 Ind Cas 622 : 38 C LJ 806 : 1937 AWN 77. 8. Explanation 1.—It is defamatory libel and crime, though not actionable wro [Broom v. Richie, (1905) 6 F 942 ; 5 Bom 580], to write and publish words injurious the reputation of any deceased person, provided it is done with a malevolent purpose vilify the memory of the deceased and with a view to injure the posterity and theref with a design to break the peace. Per Lord Kenyon in Rex v. Topham, 41 TR 126; see also R. v. Labouchere, (1884) 12 QBD at p. 322. In the last named case, Lord Coleridge observed :"The locus classieus on this subject in Rex v. Topham, (1791) 4 TR 126" ; see also R. v. Ensar, 3 TLR 366, where Stephen, J., said : "There must be a vilifying of the deceased with a view to injure his posterity." So "publication tending to disturb the minds of living individuals and to bring them into contempt and disgrace by reflecting upon persons who are dead, is an offence against the law". Per Abbot, C.J., in Rex v. Hunt, (1824) 2 St 2 Tr NS at p. 98. Here the essence of the offence consists in its tendency to cause that description of pain which is felt by a person who knows herself to be the object of his fellow-creatures and in those inconveniences to which a person who is the object of such unfavourable sentiments is exposed. 41 All 311 : 17 ALJ 214 : 49 Ind Cas 855 : 20 Cr LJ 231.

9. Explanation 2.—This explanation is intended to include a company or an association or collection of persons as such with the word "person" as used in the definition so that the latter should not be limited to individuals. In a case in which the explanation is properly called into use the identity of the company or association or collection of persons must be maintained throughout with reference to the imputation said to have been made concerning them as such with intention of harming their reputation so that thereby they are defamed. 29 CWN 904 : 42 Cr LJ 178 : 26 Cr LJ 1539 ; see also 55 Cal 1280 ; 1 Pat 414. According to Explanation 2, if a collection or company of persons as such is defamed, one of their members may make a complain on behalf of the collection or company of persons as a whole but the defamation must be shown to be of all the persons in the association or collection as such ; the defamation is of the collection or association as such. Where the complaint is the complaint of an individual as such, Explanation (2) has no application. 175 Ind Cas 9 : 39 Cr LJ 518 : AIR 1938 Sind 88.

According to English Law, it is also a defamatory libel and a crime to write and publish words injurious to the reputation of anybody of individuals without referring to any individual in particular. Rex v. Obbom, W. Kel. 230 ; Rex v. Williams, 2 B. & Ald. 595 ; Rex v. Gathercole. 2 Lowein CC 237 ; see also South Hilton Coal Co. v. N.E. News Association, (1894) 1 QB 133. An imputation against a company or an association or collection of persons as such amounts to defamation. Therefore, the mere fact that the reputation of a Bank is sought to be affected by the publication does not take it away from the mischief of a defamatory publication. AIR 1950 Pat 545. Each and every member can file a complaint. AIR 1938 Sind 38 : 39 Cr LJ 518 ; AIR 1935 All 743 : 36 Cr LJ 816. Having regard to the provisions of Section 499 with Explanation 2 and the definition of person in Section 11 of the Penal Code, it cannot be said that a complaint for defamation is not maintainable at all by a Corporation. 1952 All LJ 64 : 1952 Cr LJ 282 : AIR 1952 All 114. In respect of an association of persons the law of defamation in India is not the same as the English law of defamation relating to a trading Company or Corporation. 66 CWN 24. If the words complained of contain no reflection a particular individual or individuals, but may equally apply to other belonging to the same class an action for defamation will not lie. 1962 Ker LT 538 : 1962 Ker LJ 796.

The language of Explanation 2 is general and any collection of persons would be covered by it. Of course, the collection of persons must be identifiable in the sense that one could, with certainty say that the group of the particular people has been defamed as distinguished from the rest of the community. (1965) 1 SCWR 571 : 1965 SCD 600 1965 (2) Cr LJ 434 : AIR 1965 SC 1451.

Prosecution against company. It cannot be said that corporate body cannot commi offence of defamation.

The argument that there cannot be vicarious liability relating to offence punishable under the Indian Penal Code beyond application of Sections 34, 109, 14 and 120-B, IPC is not correct because persons representing a company may commi offences punishable under provisions of the IPC in the name of company itself.

In Municipal Corporation of Delhi vs. J.B. Bottling Company Pvt. Ltd., 1975 CrL 1148, Full Bench of the Delhi High Court held that where only a corporal punishment is prescribed, an artificial body like a company cannot be prosecuted, since it cannot b punished. Of course, this legal decision is subsequently stated to have been altered t the effect that even for the offence wherein corporal punishment is prescribed, artificia body like a company can be prosecuted but it can only be punished with fine Therefore, Court is of the opinion that simply because A. 1 is corporate body, it canno be said that it cannot commit offence of defamation defined under Section 499, IPC.

In the present case, A. 1 is being represented by its Managing Director. In fact, A. is Managing Director of A. 1 company. But the lower Court did not take cognizance o the case as against A. 3 in his individual capacity, but it took cognisance of the cas against A.1 company represented by its Managing Director, who is A. 3. Therefore Court finds that A. 1 cannot escape liability by simply pleading that it is a corporat personality. Rallis India Ltd. & Ors. vs. K.T. Vijay Kumar and Ors., 2010 (2) CrLJ 248 (AP).

In the news item there are no defamatory words or imputations against th National Political Party. As the report does not mention the name of any leader of th party and as it does not disclose any defamatory statement against that party, it has t be held that the complaint is ill-conceived.

The person aggrieved must have a legal grievance. There cannot be any grievanc merely on account of a fanciful or sentimental attitude. As the complaint does no disclose any specific defamatory statement against any specific and identifiable body o persons, it cannot constitute any offence or defamation. P. Karunakaran v. C Jayasooryan. 1992 Cr LJ 3540 at 3541, 3542 (Ker).

10. Explanation 3.—This explanation has followed the English law on the subjec where it has been held that ironical phrase may amount to a libel. Boydell v. Jones, M. & W. 446.

11. Explanation 4.—"It will be the duty of the Judge in the trial of cases o defamation not to decide the question whether an imputation is or is not defamatory b reference to any particular standard, however correct, of honour, or morality, or o taste; but to extend as impartial protection to opinions which he regards as erroneous and to feelings with which he has no sympathy. India is inhabited by races which diffe widely from one another in manners, tastes and religious opinions. Practices which ar regarded as innocent by one large portion of society, excite the horror of another larg portion. A Hindu would be driven to despair if he knew that he was believed by person of his own race to have done something which a Christian or a Mussalman woul consider as indifferent or as laudable. Where such diversities of opinion exist, that part of the law which is intended to preventpain arising from opinion ought to be sufficiently flexible to those diversities."—Morgan and Macpherson, 440.

An imputation that a Mahommedan had killed a cow in his compound cannot be said to harm his reputation, or lower his moral or intellectual character, or lower his character in respect of his caste or calling or lower his credit within the meaning of this section. 5 CPLR 53. It must lower him in other people's estimation. Anything which lowers him in his own estimation is not defamation. 7 All 205 (FB). It is defamatory to say without cause that any one is ex-communicated. The fact that all Muhamadans are generally speaking, of one caste does not make it any the less defamatory, and the word "caste" is not entirely confined to Hindus. It refers to any class who keep themselves socially distinct or inherit exclusive privileges. 25 LW 357 : 99 Ind Cas 943 : 28 Cr LJ 217 : AIR 1927 Mad 397.

This explanation does not apply where the words used and forming the basis of a charge are per se defamatory. 9 All 420.

Section 499, Explanation (4) seems to imply that what constitutes defamation has to be determined not upon an interpretation that may be found for a word by a laborious research in a Court of law but upon the meaning that might be conveyed by the word to a reasonable and fair minded man. ILR (1957) 2 Cal 181.

The prosecution must specifically establish the field in which the reputation has fallen or could fail in the eye of the reasonable man. The fields have been enumeration in Explanation 4 to Section 499, I.P.C. and for the purpose of Section 500 an imputation which does not refer to any of such fields cannot be regarded as defamatory. 1971 ALJ 1005 ; see also 1961 ALJ 769. Character is an expression of wide import which takes in all the traits special and particular qualities impressed by nature or habit ; includes reputation but is not synonymous with it. 1970 Cr LJ 83 : 1969 MPLJ 805 : 1969 Jab LJ 968 : (1970) 1 Cut WR 74 : 1969 Cr LJ 571 (imputing unchastity to a woman).

This Explanation makes it clear that harm referred to in the Explanation has reference to the imputation on a man's character made to lower him in the estimation of others and not of himself. 1962 Cr LJ 699 ; AIR 1963 SC 1317 : (1963) 2 Cr LJ 345 (a woman of loose character).

12. Exceptions.—The exceptions to Section 499, IPC, would seem to have been drafted with reference to the question of qualified privileges as recognised by the law of England, omitting all reference to the question of privilege in connection with statements made in judicial proceedings or to other classes of absolute privilege recognised by the law of England. The provisions of the IPC and also those of the Evidence Act of 1872 are mainly based upon the English law. Whenever the Legislature in this country intended to depart from the English law, they made their intention clear by express enactment. In considering the intention of the Legislature, the Law of England at the time of passing of the Indian enactment can be taken into consideration. The cannons of construction laid down by Lord Herschell are applicable only where it is intended to codify existing law but not where new law is created. The English common law right of absolute privilege in respect of judicial proceeding is inapplicable to India. 14 Ind Cas 659 : 13 Cr LJ 275 : 23 MLJ 39 : 36 Mad 216. Even where the accused deny having made the statements alleged to be defamatory, they are entitled to call evidenc to prove that the allegations if made by him would bring them within one of th exceptions of the section. AIR 1928 Rang 167. Although it is for the prosecution t make out of a case for conviction, the accused person must prove the existence o circumstances bringing the case within the exceptions to Section 499. 105 Ind Cas 12 : 28 Cr LJ 996 : AIR 1928 Nag 58. No man can ever be justified in disseminatin defamatory matter unless he can bring himself within one of the exceptions to Sectio 499, IPC, or unless his action is privileged in other respects. AIR 1938 Rang 394 : se also ILR 1936 Nag 217. In a trial under Section 500, the burden of proving th exception lies upon the accused. AIR 1939 Rang 371 : 41 Cr LJ 46 ; AIR 1937 Nag 122 ILR 1936 Nag 217. In order that a comment be fair, the following conditions must b satisfied ; (a) It must be based on facts truly stated ; (b) It must not contain imputation of corrupt or dishonourable motives on the persons whose conduct or work is criticised save in so far as such imputations are warranted by the facts ; (c) It must be the hones expression of writer's real opinion. ILR 1943 Nag 347 : 43 Cr LJ 856 : AIR 1942 Nag 11 : 202 IC 543.

13. Good faith is of the essence of exceptions.—A mere perusal of exceptions 2 3 and 9 is sufficient to show that these exceptions which embody the defenc compendiously known as "fair comment" apply only to expression of opinion o imputations on character, and not to assertions of fact. AIR 1959 Ker 100 : 1959 ML (Cr) 930 : 1959 Cr LJ 464. To say something of a person which holds him to contempt is defamatory. If what is said is true then that is a defence. On the other hand if there is a doubt as to whether it is true or not there is no defence at all and as the matter tends to bring the person defamed into contempt is defamatory under Section 500, Indian Penal Code." 15. Second Exception.—The public conduct of public functionaries is allowed to be discussed, provided that such discussion is conducted in good faith. It will be observed that in this and generally in the following exceptions, it is not required that an imputation should be true. It is requisite only that it should be made in good faith. 'To require in these cases that the imputation should be true, would be to render these exceptions mere nullities. Where a public functionary is or is fit for his situation—Whether a person who has bestirred himself to get up a petition in favour of public measure, ought to be considered as an enlightened and public spirited citizen or a foolish meddler— Whether a person who has been tried for an offence was or was not guilty—Which of two witnesses who contradicted each other on a trial ought to be believed—Whether a portrait is alive—Whether a song has been well sung— Whether a took is well written—These are questions about which honest and descrying men may hold opinion diametrically opposite ; and to require a man to prove to the satisfaction of Court of law that the opinion which he has expressed on such a question is a right opinion, is to prohibit all discussion on such questions".—Morgan and Macpherson, 444. One of the essential conditions for the application of Exceptions 2 and 9 to Section 499, IPC is that the accused should have acted in good faith. 1952 Cr LJ 1553 : AIR 1952 Pepsu 165 ; see also AIR 1962 Ori 197 : 1962 (2) Cr LJ 617 (imputation against the Governor untrue and made without verification). Whoever fills a public position must accept an attack as a necessary, though unpleasant, appendage to his office. 16. Third Exception.—"Third exception applies to public men who are not public functionaries. Persons who hold no office yet take a very active part in urging or opposing the adoption of measures in which the community is deeply interested. Every person is allowed to comment in good faith on the proceedings of these volunteer servants of the public with the same freedom with which he is allowed to comment on the proceedings of the official servants of the public."—Morgan and Macpherson, 444. Every subject has a right to comment on those acts of public men which concern him as a subject of the realm, if he does not make the commentary a cloak for malice and slander. 1 BHC App 85. The word "malice" in the legal sense of the term, is not limited to hostility of feeling, but by virtue of its etymological origin, extends to any state of the mind, which is wrong or faulty (whether exercised in action by excess of defect), such as would be unjustifiable in the circumstances, and incompatible with thoroughly innocent intentions. It is not necessary that such impropriety of feeling should in all cases be established by evidence extrinsic to the comment, which is the subject of the complaint. 31 Bom 293. It is impossible to justify allegation of defamation on the ground of fair comment, the moment it is shown that the allegation is based upon a misstatement of facts. 98 Ind Cas 481 : 27 Cr LJ 1361 : AIR 1927 All 116. 17. Fourth Exception..—"The privilege is given to report of proceedings in the Court as it is for the public benefit that they should be informed of what took place substantially as if they were present." Per Sir Corell Barnes, P., in Furniss v. Cambridge Daily News Ltd., (1907) 23 TLR at p. 706. So "a full and faithful report may be considered are enlarging the Court and allowing the great body of the public to be present at the trial." Per Lord Campbell, C.J., in Andrews v. Chapman, 3 C & K 289. But the report must be confined strictly to what actually took place in Court. Furniss v. Cambridge Daily News Ltd., 23 TLR 705 (CA). A report need not be a verbatim production of what took place in Court but it must be substantially a fair account of what took place in Court. Andrews v. Chapman, 3 C & K 289. A fair abstract can be published. Millissilah v. Lloyds, 46 LJCP 404. If any comments are made, they should not be made a part of the report. The report should be confined to what took place in Court and the two things, report and comment, should be kept separate. Andrews v. Chapman, 3 C & K 288.

Under the Fourth Exception to Section 499, it is not necessary that th proceedings of a Court of Justice should be published contemporaneously. All that required is that the publication should be substantially true report. 56 CWN 705.

Unless a person makes or publishes any imputation concerning any perso intending to harm or knowing or having reason to believe that such imputation wi harm, there is no offence of defamation. In the instant case if two other persons rea the letter as stated by complainant it was surely an accident and it cannot be said tha the accused intended to harm or knew or had reason to believe that imputation woul harm the reputation of the complainant. No offence was committed. Acquittal cannot b interfered. N. Mounagurusamy v. K.C. Palanichamy, 1994 MLJ (Cri) 216.

20. Fifth Exception.—"All persons are allowed freely to discuss in good faith th proceedings of Court of law, and the characters of parties, agents and witnesses, a connected with those proceedings. It is almost universally acknowledged that th Courts of law ought to be thrown open to the public. But the advantage of throwin them open to the public will be small indeed, if the few who are able to press their wa into a Court are forbidden to report what has passed there to the vast numbers wh were absent, or if those who are allowed to know what has passed are not allowed comment on what has passed."—Morgan and Macpherson, 445.

A libellous reflection upon the conduct of Judge in respect of his judicial duti may certainly come under Section 499 of the Indian Penal Code and it may be open the Judge to take steps against the likeller in the ordinary way in vindication of h character and personal dignity as a Judge. AIR 1952 SC 149 ; AIR 1968 Punj 217.

21. Sixth Exception.—The object of this exception is that the public should aided by comment, in its judgment of the public performance submitted to i judgment. Comment otherwise defamatory is justified on this ground alone. Th comment must, therefore, make it clear to the public that decision is invited, only such evidence as is supplied by the public performance. It follows that an imputati on an author made by a critic, without reference express or implied, to the work und criticism, if in terms so general as to be capable of conveying an unfavourab impression of him, apart from what appears in his work, cannot be justified by t critic, on the ground that his intention was to base his imputation solely on the wo reviewed, and that he had in his mind passages therein supporting the imputation. T responsibility of the critic is to be gauged by the effect, which is comment is calculat to produce, and not by what he says was his intention. It is not enough that he shou intended to form his opinion on the work before him ; he is also found, in the words the exception to express his opinion with due care and caution, and to give the pub no ground for supposing that he is speaking of anything but the performance submitt to its judgment. 31 Bom 298. The word "malice" in the legal use of the term is n limited to hostility of feeling, but by virtue of its etymological origin, extends to any sta of the mind, which is wrong or faulty (whether evinced in action by excess or defe such as would be unjustifiable in the circumstances, and incompatible with thoroughly innocent intentions. It is not necessary that such impropriety of feeling should in all cases be established by evidence extrinsic to the comment, which is the subject of the complaint. For, whether fair comment is to be regarded as following under a branch of the law of privilege or not, it cannot excuse an injury, arising not from the mere act of criticism, but from a state of mind in the critic, which is in itself unjustifiable. And the excuse may be so forfeited, either by reason of an evil intent in him or by reason of mere recklessness in making an unwarrantable assertion. For, then, the comment would not be fair comment at all. The right of fair comment involves two essentials ; first, that the imputation should be comment on the work criticised ; and second, that it should be fair ; and is to say, if it professes to be an inference drawn from the contents of that work, it must be an inference which it is possible to draw therefrom. Good faith requires not logical infallibility, but due care and attention. But how far erroneous actions or statements are to be imputed to want of due care and caution must, in such case, be considered with reference to the general circumstances and the capacity and intelligence of the person whose conduct is in question. It is only to be expected that the honest conclusions of a calm and philosophical mind may differ very largely from the honest conclusion of a person excited by sectarian zeal and untrained to habits of precise reasoning. At the same time, it must be Bome in mind that good faith in the formation or expression of an opinion, can offer no protection to an imputation, which does not purport to be based on that which is the legitimate subject of public comment. (Ibid.)

In the case of defamation complainant opposite-party alleged that charge-sheet accusing him of stealing papers has lowered down his prestige in the estimation of other employees. It was observed that imputation had an admitted factual basis. Papers in question were actually found .with the papers of complainant opposite party. Petitioners had every right to react for protection of its own interest. It was covered by ninth exception to Section 499 which laid down that imputation made in good faith for protection of one's own interest was not defamation. According to seventh exception censure passed in good faith by person having lawful authority over another was not defamation, which also applied. Held, that there was no want of good faith in the case. 1987 Cri LJ 2074 (Cal).

Petitioner contributed his 'Foreword' to a novel. Novel and "Foreword" came in for bitter criticism at the hands of petitioner. It was observed that the words (datru) and (Kshudurudu) used by the petitioner were per se defamatory and the same were calculated to harm the reputation of the complainant. It was further observed that the words employed by petitioner were not in good faith. They wholly unrelate to the contents of the "Foreword". Held, that petitioner was not protected either under sixth exception or under the ninth exception. The concurrent finding of guilt recorded against petitioner by both Courts below was, therefore, unassailable. 1987 Cri-LJ 2000 (AP).

In the case of defamation complainant opposite-party alleged that charge-sheet accusing him of stealing papers had lowered down his prestige in the estimation of other employees. It was urged by opposite party that application of exceptions to Section 499 could not be ascertained unless evidence had been gone into. It was observed that argument did not hold good when very facts forming the basis of complaint attract application of an exception. Held. that exceptions actually were applicable to the facts of the case even without going into any evidence. 1987 Cri LJ 2074 (Cal).

22. Seventh Exception..—"By this exception we allowed a person under whose authority others have been placed, either by their own consent or by the law, to censure, in good faith, those who are so placed under his authority, as far as regards matter to which that authority relates." Note R. Report of the Law Commissioners. Caste associations are autonomous ; the powers vested in their constituted heads being, subject to any special custom, those necessary for the protection of the interest committed to their charge. The Court's only duty is to see that these powers are exercised in accordance with the principles of natural justice that is, in the majority of cases, after the person to be affected by their exercise has been heard and his defence has received fair consideration. 45 MLJ 116 : 72 Ind Cas 165 : 24 Cr LJ 325 : 1923 Mad 587. 23. Eighth Exception.—Two ingredients are essential to be establishing of the protection under Section 8 (1) that the accusation must be made to a person having authority over the party accused ; and (2) that the accusation must be preferred in good faith, that is to say, with such reasonable care and attention on the part of the person making it, in first satisfying himself of the truth and justice of the charge, as an ordinary man should be expected to exercise. 6 All 220 : AWN 1884, 53 ; see also SBHC Cr 168. It is desirable that a father should caution his son against marrying a woman of bad character. But if the merchant is permitted to say to his partners, if the father is permitted to say to his son, only what can be legally proved before a Court, it is evident that the permission is worth nothing. Tenth exception.—To bring this case within Exception 10 of Section 499, of the Indian Penal Code, it must be proved that the accused intended in good faith to convey a caution to the person against another, that such caution was intended for the good of the person to whom it was conveyed, or of some person in whom that person was interested or for the public good, and that the caution should be conveyed by the proper means". Rat Un Cr C 392 : Cr Reg 48 of 1888. The word "aggrieved" in Section 198, of the Code of Criminal Procedure in cases of defamation must be treated as equivalent to the expression "person injured", the object of the section apparently being to limit the right of complaint to person who has suffered the injury. The collocation of the words by some person, aggrieved definitely indicates that the complainant need not necessarily be the defamed person himself. Whether the complainant has reason to feel hurt on account of the publication is a matter to be determined by the Court depending upon the facts of each case. If a company is described as engaging itself in nefarious activities its impact would certainly fall on every Director of the company and hence he can legitimately feel the pinch of it. Similarly, if a firm is described in a publication as carrying on offensive trade, every working partner of the firm can reasonably be expected to feel aggrieved by it. If K.J. Hospital is a private limited company, it is too far fetched to rule out any of its directors feding aggrieved, on account of projoratives hurled at the company. Johan Thomas v. K. Jagadeesan 2001 Cri LJ 3322 (SC) : AIR 2001 (SC) 2651 : 2001(6) SCC 30 : 2001(5) JT 398 : 2001(4) Scale 323 : 2001(5) Supreme 106 : 2001(3) Crimes 270 (SC) : 2001(2) JCC (SC) 39.

32. Right of corporation to maintain action.—A corporation may maintain a prosecution or an action for a libel affecting its property, but not for a libel merely affecting personal reputation, as a corporation has no reputation apart from its property or trade. The words "complained of must reflect on the management of its business and must injuriously affect the corporation, as distinct from the individuals who compose it. The alleged libel must attack the corporation in its method of conducting its affairs, must accuse it of fraud or mismanagement, or must attack its financial position. It cannot bring a prosecution for words which merely affect its honour or dignity. Moreover it cannot maintain a prosecution for words which reflect, not upon it as a body, but upon its members individually, unless special damage has thereby been caused to it. 13 Rang 297 : 156 Ind Cas 441 : 36 Cr LJ 953 : 8 RR 1 : 1935 Cr C 317 : AIR 1937 Rang 108. Where a letter suggests that a company gives guarantees which are worthless and that it endeavours to avoid its liability under the guarantees given, it suggests that the company is a deceitful company and that persons dealing with that company should be on their guard and take particular care to see that they are not cheated. Such imputations are undoubtedly defamatory. 1935 Cr C 1295 : AIR 1935 Rang 509.

33. Publication—In a case where the accused to have made an offending speech if the witnesses are agreed in a substantial measure on the words of imputation uttered. It is not necessary to reproduce every word or expression. ILR (1961) 2 Ker 431 : 1962 All Cr R 278 : 1962 (1) Cr LJ 644. To bring the publication of a scandalous imputation under the Penal Law it is not necessary to prove that it was done out of any ill will or malice or that the complainant had actually suffered from it. It would be sufficient to show that the accused intended or knew or had reason to believe that the imputation made by him would harm the reputation of the complainant. The burden lies on the accused person to make out that his case comes within any of the exceptions to Section 499. 1962 Ker LT 502 : 1962 Ker LR 47 : 1962 Ker LJ 1147.

Evidence of bad general reputation but not of particular facts is admissible in an action for damages for libel under Section 55, of the Evidence Act AIR 1961 Punj 215 : 1961 (1) Cr LJ 710.

There is universal rule that in a defamation case the accused cannot be convicted unless the actual words used by the accused are proved. No doubt when the question whether certain words used are defamatory depends solely on the shade of their meaning in the context in which they were used then it is very essential to prove that the exact words used by the accused as also the exact context in which they were spoken. AIR 1958 MP 83 : 1958 Cr LJ 520. Where some passages in a petition are alleged to be defamatory, the document should be read as a whole with a view to find out the main purport, and too much importance should not be attached to a few isolated passages here and there. AIR 1959 Ori 141 : 25 Cut LT 16 : 1959 Cr LJ 1006.

It must be proved that the defamatory matter was intended to be read by the person or persons other than the person to whom it is written and that it was published. 68 CWN 654 : 1964 (1) Cr LJ 367. 34. Defamatory Letter.—There is nothing per se defamatory in the letter. However it is important to note that copies of the letter in question were forwarded only to the Principal of ITI, Bhavnagar and to the Commissioner of concerned Department having office at Sachivalaya, Gandhinagar. Mere sending of copies to the Principal of ITI at District Headquarter, Bhavanagar and to the Secretary of the concerned Department, cannot be taken adversely to the accused that these copies were sent with a view to see defamatory statement is published or widely spread amongst circle where the complainant is known. An element of mens rea and intention of defamation, of course can be assumed but in the present case, relevant circumstances are not available. Dilip Ranjan Sinha and others v. Manojbhai, Bhai Shankar Chandalia, 2002 Cri LJ 3239 (Guj.).

35. Pleadings were not per se defamatory.—It is evident that the criminal case is filed by the 2nd respondent with a mala fide intention and with a view to harass the petitioner and to coerce him for terms in the pending appeal and also with oblique motive. Without the petitioner contending in the suit that revenue records filed by the 1st respondent as false, fabricated and forged, there is absolutely no other case which can be put forward by the petitioner in the civil suit in order to attack claim of the 1st respondent therein. Prima facie, such allegations in the pleadings in civil suits are not per se defamatory, unless the petitioner had any previous score with the 1st respondent. Except this civil litigation, which the 1st respondent himself started, the petitioner has no other dispute with the 1st respondent. Therefore, it cannot be said that the petitioner had any intention to defame the 1st respondent or that the petitioner maliciously made those allegations in his pleadings. Secondly, those allegations in the petitioner's pleadings and affidavit in the suit cannot be termed as defamatory. Thirdly, it is not a case where the alleged defamatory statements were published by way of any public notice or public statement or in any public meeting. They were made in Court proceedings in writing and no outsider had any occasion to read the same.

The advocates appearing on both sides have no independent interest or entity in Court proceedings except as representing the parties for whom they are appearing. They are only agents of the parties who engaged them. Thus, there is absolutely no general publication of the alleged imputations when they were made in pleadings and evidence in a Court of law. Further, Section 499 of the Indian Penal Code contemplates making or publication of imputation with an intention to harm reputation of the other person. In the case on hand, intention of the petitioner is evident that he made the same with an intention to preserve the disputed site to the deity and not with an intention to harm reputation of the first respondent. In that view of the matter, pleadings i.e., written statement, counter and appeal grounds and evidence by way of affidavit in this case cannot be defamatory in nature. G. Janardhana Reddy vs. A. Narayana Reddy and Anr., 2010 (3) CrLJ 2660 (AP).

36. Freedom of speech and expression.—Even though the constitutional freedom of speech and expression is not absolute and can be subjected to reasonable restrictions on grounds such as 'decency and morality' among others, there is need to tolerate unpopular views in the socio-cultural space. The framers of our Constitution recognised the importance of safeguarding this right since the free flow of opinions and ideas is essential to sustain the collective life of the citizenry. While an informed citizenry is a pre-condition for meaningful governance in the political sense, we must also promote a culture of open dialogue when it comes to societal attitudes. The appellant's remarks did provoke a controversy since the acceptance of pre-marital sex and live-in relationships is viewed by some as an attack on the centrality of marriage. While there can be no doubt that in India, marriage is an important social institution, but there are certain individuals or groups who do not hold the same view. Even in the societal mainstream, there are a significant number of people who see nothing wrong in engaging in pre-marital sex. Notions of social morality are inherently subjective and the criminal law cannot be used as a means to unduly interfere with the domain of personal autonomy. Morality and criminality are not co-extensive. If the complainants vehemently disagreed with the appellant's views, then they should have contested her views through the news media or any other public platform. The law should not be used in a manner that has chilling effects on the 'freedom of speech and expression'.

Dissemination of news and view for popular consumption is permissible under our constitutional scheme. The different views are allowed to be expressed by the proponents and opponents. A culture of responsible reading is to be inculcated amongst the prudent readers. Morality and criminality are far from being co-extensive. An expression of opinion in favour of non-dogmatic and non-conventional morality has to be tolerated as the same cannot be a ground to penalize the author. Criminal proceedings initiated against appellants liable to be quashed. S. Khushboo vs. Kanniammal and Anr., 2010 (3) CrLJ 2828 (SC).

37. Defamation—Ingredients.—In order to constitute offence of defamation the words, signs, imputation made by accused must either be intended to harm the reputation of a particular person or the accused must reasonably know that his/her conduct could cause such harm. The appellant giving statement to news magazine that pre-marital sex must be socially accepted neither intended to cause harm to the reputation of the complainants nor any actual harm done to their reputation could be discern. Both the elements i.e. mens rea and actus reus are missing. The appellants' statement published in news magazine is a rather general endorsement of pre-marital sex and her remarks are not directed at any individual or even at a 'company or an association or collection of persons'. It is difficult to fathom how the appellant's views can be construed as an attack on the reputation of anyone in particular.

When the statements in question are not directed against any person or against an identifiable group of individuals, the complainants cannot be said to be an aggrieved persons. The complainants have alleged defamation in respect of imputations against the character of Tamil-speaking women, which could be viewed as a class of persons. However, the appellant's remarks did not suggest that all women in Tamil Nadu have engaged in pre-marital sex. In fact her statement in News Magazine did not refer to any specific individual or group at all.

It is not the task of the criminal law to punish individuals merely for expressing unpopular views. The threshold for placing reasonable restrictions on the 'freedom of speech and expression' is indeed a very high one and there should be a presumption in favour of the accused in such cases. It is only when the complainants produce materials that support a prima facie case for a statutory offence that Magistrates can proceed to take cognizance of the same. Initiation of a criminal trial is a process which carries an implicit degree of coercion and it should not be triggered by false and frivolous complaints amounting to harassment and humiliation to the accused. S. Khushboo vs. Kanniammal and Anr., 2010 (3) CrLJ 2828 (SC).

38. Mens rea.—Bank have made defamatory communication with complainant. Communication through telegram expressed concern of Bank to get dues cleared in time. 'Mens rea' for an offence of defamation was missing. Action of Bank was in good faith.

Besides, requirement of publishing any imputation concerning the complainant is also missing in this case. This telegram was sent to the complainant only. The alleged information by accused to the wife of the complainant cannot in any manner be considered as defamatory. The intimation communicated to the wife of the complainant was that there were no dues left to be claimed in the account of the complainant and in case any communication was received from the bank in future, the same should be ignored.

Undisputedly, the petitioner is a bank incorporated in England with limited liability by Royal Charter, 1853 and, therefore, is a corporation/company. A company cannot be in any case held to have committed an offence under Section 500 IPC because, most essential ingredient of the said offence i.e. 'mens rea' would be missing as a company is a juristic entity or an artificial person, whereas a Director is not a company. The company may be made liable for offences, however, if there is anything in the definition or context of a particular Section of a particular statute which would prevent the application of the said section to a limited company, the limited company cannot be proceeded against. There are number of provisions of law in which it would be physically impossible by a limited company to commit the offence. A limited company, therefore, cannot generally be tried for offences where mens rea is essential. Similarly, a company cannot face the punishment of imprisonment for obvious reasons that company cannot be sent to prison by way of a sentence. Standard Chartered Bank vs. Vinay Kumar Sood & Ors., 2010 (2) CriLJ 1277 (Del).

Allegation that news reader of T.V. Channel while narrating reaction of complainant on murder of political leader said that complainant rebuked media in filthy language lowering down dignity of complainant and defamed him in public.

It should be noted that the complainant is alleging criminal defamation against the accused, as distinguished from civil defamation. In order to constitute offence of defamation under criminal law, Section 499. In the entire complaint, the complainant/1st respondent did not allege that the accused who is Chief Executive Officer of T.V.-9 channel telecast the news item or permitted to telecast the news item with such state of mind (Mens rea). Except as Chief Executive Officer of the T.V. news channel, the complainant did not allege any other connection for the accused with telecasting of this news item. It is not as if the accused was news reader or voice over artist or editor or news reporter in relation to this news item or the news bulletin in which this news item was telecast. In the absence of any such connection for the accused with this news item and in the absence of any such mens rea or state of mind for the accused in relation to this news item, simply because the accused happened to be Chief Executive Officer or Proprietor or Partner or Managing Director of the T.V. News Channel, no criminal case can lie against him for offence punishable under Sec. 500, IPC. Ravi Prakash vs. J.C. Diwakar Reddy and Anr., 2010 (3) CrLJ 2558 (AP).

Any principle of journalistic ethics according to which the editor of a newspape refuses to disclose the name of the writer of a defamatory article, which is devised t defeat the ends of justice, cannot be accepted as ethical by any Court of law. The onl conclusion that a Court can draw from such a conduct is that the publisher was i entire agreement with the writer and he was willing to take the full responsibility for th publication and face the consequences himself. 1962 (1) Cr LJ 122 ; see also 1963 (1 Cr LJ 609 : AIR 1963 Punj 201 (use of the freedom of press is not allowed so as t constitute infraction of the law relating to defamation).

As a publisher of a newspaper makes known to the people in general and give publicity to the news item printed in the newspaper the case against the publisher fo the publication of a defamatory news items printed in that newspaper would legally an logically amount to defamation simpliciter and as such would be punishable unde Section 500 of the Indian Penal Code. It may be that the publisher is also the printer o the newspaper, the case against him would be covered by Section 501, but it would no in any way affect the liability under Section 500 as publisher. In the instant case there are allegations in the complaint to the effect that Accuse namely, Managing Editor, Editor, Execution Editor and Executive Editor are parties to the conspiracy to defame the complainant his father and other family members, knowing that the publications contain defamatory imputations, they have deliberately published in the news papers, the imputations found in two books by printing and publishing the said news items and they have committed the offences punishable under Section 500 and 501, IPC under Section 120-B. By entering into criminal conspiracy to defame the complainant and his family members and in pursuance to the said conspiracy, the two books are published and contents of the same are again republished in the Indian Express. Application for quashing of proceedings on ground that only Editor was responsible for the publication, was not allowed. K.V. Ramesh v He Ramesh 2001 Cri LJ 3556 (Kant).

The accused was charged for having published a book in which some defamatory material was alleged to have been published against the complainant. Accused published a biography of a poet with help of sister of the poet. In the book he described a girl "Liani" as poet's lover who had love affairs with the poet. In the book she was stated to have married an army compounder ignoring the poet. The petitioner-complainant, one Mrs. Lalliani alleged that she was the girl described as "Liani" in the book the lover of the poet and that imputations were defamatory. It was observed that the girl referred to might have been an imaginary figure. No direct reference to Lalliani was found. Held, that there was no material to connect the complainant with the girl "Liani" and "Liani" described in the book was either an imaginary person or some one else than the complainant. For the reason there was no merit in the application and revision against the order of acquittal to be dismissed. 1987 Cri LJ 1295 (Gau).

2. Defamation—Connotation of.—In the case of defamation in explaining 'defamation' it was made clear that publication of defamatory words or uttering defamatory words, heard and listened to by people taking place in a proceeding in a Court rooms or outside the Court precincts did not matter as long as the defamatory words were intended to harm reputation of the other. 1987 Cri LJ 1795 (Bom).

The only effect of an imputation being per se defamatory is that it would relieve t complainant of the burden to establish that the publication of such imputations h lowered him in the estimation of the right thinking members of the public. Howev even if the imputation is not per se defamatory, that by itself would not go to t advantage of the publisher, for the complaining person can establish on evidence th the publication has in fact amounted to defamation even in spite of the appare deficiency. So the appellant cannot contend, at this stage, that he is entitled discharge on the ground that the imputations in the extracted publication, were not p se defamatory. Johan Thomas v. K. Jegadeesan 2001 Cri LJ 3322 (SC) : AIR 2001 (S 2651 : 2001(6) SCC 30 : 2001(5) JT 398 : 2001(4) Scale 323 : 2001(5) Supreme 10 2001(3) Crimes 270 (SC) : 2001(2) JCC (SC) 39.

4. Sentence.—Where the defamation was an extremely malicious one, and means of publication employed were chosen with great cunning. Held, that the senter of fine of Rs. 400 in default of six months' imprisonment, was not excessive. 1935 Cr 1258 : AIR 1935 Rang 484. The character and reputation is no less important than body and there is no reason why those who maliciously cast grave aspersions agai his character and reputation should be treated differently and merely fined, 1962 (1) LJ 122. The defence of justification of libel has always been considered to be perilo because where there is failure of proof the plea is deemed as aggravation of the offen AIR 1961 Punj 415 : 1961 (1) Cr LJ 710. But in a case where the accused was prompted by any ill will or malice a lenient sentence of fine of Rs. 50/- was conside to be sufficient. AIR 1958 MP 216 : 1958 Cr LJ 1036 : 1958 Jab LJ 252 ; see 1974 LJ 1158 (in case of scandalous articles, mere fine will not be adequate) ; 1982 All C 1983 : 1982 Cr LJ (NOC) 156 (publication was for public good, hence sentences alre gone were sufficient).

5. Procedure.—Notcognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable —Triable Court of Session in case of public servant and by Magistrate of first class in any ot case.

6. Special period of limitation.—A special period of limitation has b prescribed under Section 199(5) of the Criminal Procedure Code for filing a petitio complaint namely six months from the date of the offence. See AIR 1978 SC 986 : 1 Cr LJ 764, where it was held that limitation comes from the date of filing compl under Section 406/420, I.P.C., and not for the date of his acquittal.

7. Charge.—Where charge of defamation was clear and unambiguous and the accused was not liable to be misled, the accused was held to be, in no way, prejudiced even though the charge did not contain the exact words of defamation. AIR 1932 Nag 158 : 34 Cr LJ 154 : 1932 Cr C 863 : 141 Ind Cas 438 ; see also AIR 1938 All 222 : 30 Cr LJ 533 : 26 ALJ 196 ; but see 47 CWN 555 : AIR 1943 Cal 478.

The charge would be as follows :—

I (name and office of Magistrate/Session Judge etc.) hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows :

That on or about the .... day of .... at ....you made or published the following imputation concerning A.B., to wit .... (here set out the defamatory matter) intending to harm or knowing or having reason to believe that it would harm the reputation of the said A.B. and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 500 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

In a trial for defamation it is essential that the words complained of as being defamatory in character should be precisely set out and when the charge is against more than one accused, they should be individually given notice of what each is charged with. 1952 Cr LJ 1640 : AIR 1952. 9. Intention.—In a case of libel there must be mens rea. The firm not being a physical embodiment can have any mens rea and as such no process can be issued against the firm. The impugned order so far as it relates to issuance of warrant of arrest and the proclamation of attachment relating to firm is set aside. M/s. Magnum Enterprises v. State, (1994) 2 CHN 282.

10. Quashing of proceedings.—The cases based on direct imputation and cases which are based on imputation by innuendo had to be given due consideration. For the purpose of finding out whether the imputations are sufficient to attract the provisions of Section 499 of Penal Code a judicial inquiry has to be made prima facie by the concerned Magistrate. It cannot be dismissed at the threshold without application of judicial mind and without due judicial enquiry. When it is a case of direct imputation, the matter becomes simple but when it is based on innuendo defamation the trial magistrate has to be given sufficient scope to exercise his rightful jurisdiction and discretion. In such cases High Court should be cautious in interfering and should not interfere unless it is satisfied at least reasonably. Mamman Mathew v. Kuneel Kumar, 2004 Cr LJ 852 (Bom) : 2004(7) All MR (Cri) 1844.

In an Allahabad case where the leader of a political party was alleged to have defamed the complainant by addressing in a public meeting that a person with long moustache in party was corrupt, but this fact was not reported in newspaper. It was held that the Court belo was right in exercising his discretion to fresh the order issuing the process against th accused. Valmiki Faleiro v. Mrs. Laurina Fernandes, 2005 Cr LJ 2498 : 2005 All M (CRI) 2509 : 2005(2) Bom CR (Cri) 465.

The accused was alleged to have published a defamatory news item in hi newspaper for which process was issued against him as he was managing director However there was no positive averment in the complaint that managing director wa having knowledge of or he was directly responsible for publication of said imputation Since managing director was not concerned with publication of news items, process issued against him was liable to be quashed. Vivek Goenka v. State, 2003 Cr LJ 405 (Bom) : 2003 All MR (Cri) 1735 : 2003 (4) Mah LJ 880.

The High Court refused to quash the proceeding as magistrate had committed no error in issuing the process against the petitioners and observed tha people or accused against whom process is issued must appear before Court an uphold their case. Unless such course is adopted complainant has no prima facie righ to make prayer for quashing the Complaint. *V.M. In a case, the Court observed that the allegation in the complaint are of very serious nature and whether the allegations are false a true, could be decided on substantial evidence. The Court was of the opinion that the allegations in the complaint prima facie constituted offence punishable under Section 500, IPC and at this juncture it could not be decided that the allegations were made in good faith. Complaint was not quashed. K.A. Ravindranathan v. K. Ravindra Nair, 2005 Cr LJ 3828 (Chattisgarh) : 2005 CgLJ 98 : 2005(32) AllIndCas 350.

Where the affidavit filed by the petitioner in reply against Textile Labour Association mainly contained the details of the facts stated by the complainant on the complaint. Since certain allegation were made against the office bearers of Association and other workers only to bring the correct facts of the case before the Court. Moreover, the averments were made in good faith and without any malice. The averments were covered by exceptions 7, 8, 9 to Section 499 and hence the complaint was quashed. Damsing Durgasing v. State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 720 (Gujarat).

11. Errata.—Publishing errata is not proper by the accused without expressing any regrets for the original publication. In case, the accused realized their mistake in original publication, the Editor should have published a notice expressing regrets or sorry or pleading excuses for the mistake in original publication; and the said notice should have been signed by the Editor. Without following such known and desirable practice, the accused showed their indifference for their earlier mistake and published only errata instead of notice of regrets. Tankasala Ashok & Anr. vs. State of A.P., 2010 (2) CrLJ 2074 (AP).

12. Wrong News item in News Paper.—Accused persons published news item in their newspaper that Constable committed rape on his daughter with wrong Roll Number which was that of complainant.

This Court is of the opinion that having regard to giving name of the culprit and describing the culprit as suspended constable, there is no imputation against the 2nd respondent/complainant in the news item in question even though roll number of the suspended constable was wrongly given. Further, there is absolutely no averment in the complaint that mentioning of wrong roll number by the accused in the news item was intentional. Further, there was nothing to show that Editor had control over selection of publication. Proceedings against accused Editor liable to be quashed. Tankasala Ashok & Anr. vs. State of A.P., 2010 (2) CrLJ 2074 (AP).

13. Mens rea.—Allegation that news reader of T.V. Channel while narrating reaction of complainant on murder of political leader said that complainant rebuked media in filthy language lowering down dignity of complainant and defamed him in public.

It should be noted that the complainant is alleging criminal defamation against the accused, as distinguished from civil defamation. In order to constitute offence of defamation under criminal law, Section 499.

In the entire complaint, the complainant/1st respondent did not allege that the accused who is Chief Executive Officer of T.V.-9 channel telecast the news item or permitted to telecast the news item with such state of mind (Mens rea). Except as Chie Executive Officer of the T.V. news channel, the complainant did not allege any other connection for the accused with telecasting of this news item. It is not as if the accused was news reader or voice over artist or editor or news reporter in relation to this news item or the news bulletin in which this news item was telecast. In the absence of any such connection for the accused with this news item and in the absence of any such mens rea or state of mind for the accused in relation to this news item, simply because the accused happened to be Chief Executive Officer or Proprietor or Partner or Managing Director of the T.V. News Channel, no criminal case can lie against him for offence punishable under Section 500, IPC. Ravi Prakash vs. J.C. Diwakar Reddy and Anr., 2010 (3) CrLJ 2558 (AP).

CHAPTER - XXII

OF CRIMINAL INTIMIDATION, INSULT AND ANNOYANCE

This Chapter is to some sort supplementary of the Chapter of Defamation. An imputation which is not defamatory under the definitions, explanations and exceptions in that Chapter may, under certain circumstances, be punishable on other grounds. For example, an imputation which is insulting though not defamatory, may be uttered in the hearing of the person who is the object of it, for the purpose of provoking that person to break the public peace. If so, it is punishable under Section 504. "There are many cases in which it is fit that unpleasant truth should be told respecting an individual. But there is no case in which it is desirable that such truth should be told in such a way that the telling of it is gross personal outrage. A person who has detected or thinks that he has detected, a dishonest misrepresentation in a book, has a right to expose it publicly. But he cannot be allowed to intrude into the presence of the author of the book, and to tell him to his face that he is a liar. A person who knows that the mistress of a female school to be a woman of infamous character, deserves well of society if he states what he knows. But he cannot be allowed to follow her through the streets calling her by opprobrious names, though he may be able to prove that all those names were merited. A person who brings to notice the malversation of a public functionary deserves applause, but a person who hangs a public functionary in effigy at that functionary's door, with an opprobrious label, does what cannot be permitted, even though every word on the label, and every imputation which the exhibition was meant to convey, may be perfectly true."—Morgan and Macpherson, 449.

Sec. 503. Criminal intimation.—Whoever threatens another with any injury to his person, reputation or property, or to the person or reputation of any one in whom that person is interested, with intent to cause alarm to that person, or to cause that person to do any act which he is not legally bound to do, or to omit to do any act which that person is legally entitled to do, as the means of avoiding the execution of such threat, commits criminal intimidation.

Explanation.—A threat to injure the reputation of any deceased person in whom the person threatened is interested, is within this section.

Illustration

A, for the purpose of inducing B to desist from prosecuting a civil suit, threatens to burn B's house. A is guilty of criminal intimidation.

Comments

Scope.—Where the threats are intended to put a person in fear and thereby to dishonestly induce a person to deliver property, they amount to offences punishable under Sections 385 or 389. Such threats as the following would fall within the present definition—threats to a person or to his child, wife, relative, etc., threats to cause mischief on property or to kill or wound any animal which is property, or to commit the offence of house-breaking, or to commit any mischief of trespass by means of a riotous or unlawful assembly; threats to impute unnatural lust to a person, etc.

The threat must be made either with intent to cause alarm to the person threatened or to overcome his free will and to induce him to do or omit to do something which he is not legally bound to do or omit. The question whether the threat amounts to criminal intimidation or not does not depend on the nerves of the individual threatened ; if it is such a threat as may overcome the free will of a firm man, or whatever the nature of the threat, if it is made with intention mentioned in the section, it is an offence. A threat of trivial kind, calculated perhaps to give pain, but not to cause alarm, will probably be deemed to fall within the exception in Section 95. If the intention of the person threatening is to cause the person threatened to do an act which he is bound to do, such as to pay a just debt or demand, it may nevertheless amount to criminal intimidation if the intention is to cause alarm to that person by a threat of injury.—Morgan and Macpherson, 450. In order to constitute the offence of criminal intimidation, the harm threatened must be illegal. UBR (1897-1901) Vol. I, p. 359. A threat will not amount to an offence unless made with intent to cause alarm to the complainant. 2 Bom LR 55. There can be no criminal intimidation where the injury of which complaint is made is the hardship arising from conventional punishment which a spiritual superior, acting in the exercise of his authority as regulated by the custom of the cast is competent to inflict. 6 Mad 681 ; see also 1933 MWN 736. The offence seems to require both a person to be threatened and another in whom he is specially interested. There must be the intent to cause alarm to the former by a threat to him of injury to the latter. 11 Bom 376. The gist of the offence is the effect which the threat is intended to have upon the mind of the person threatened and is equally clear that, before it can have any effect upon the mind, it must be either made to him by the person threatening or communicated to him in some way. In other words it must be a threat communicated or uttered with intention of its being communicated to the person threatened for the purpose of influencing the man's mind. 15 Cal 671 ; AIR 1949 Mad 233 : 50 Cr LJ 258. An advice given to others not to trade with a particular individual is indeed an injurious act. But it is no threat and the harm caused is only to his opportunities of future gain and not to property already possessed by him. SC 146 Oudh. Where the accused, Mussalmans threatened the Hindu population (1) to obstruct and stop the Hindu religious procession ; (2) to commit a riot ; (3) to do that in or by which people might happen to be killed. Held, that such a threat was one contemplated by Section 503, IPC. Rat Un Cr C 273. Where the accused threatened the complainant that he would get him imprisoned for six months if he continued to detain his adult sister in his house, held, that this did not amount to the offence of criminal intimidation. 8 BHC Cr 101. The words "threatened another" in Section 503 show that the threat must be made to the complainant personally, or, if made to a third person, must be made with intent that he should communicate to the complainant. 5 CPLR Cr 50. Where a person complains to a Magistrate that he is threatened with an illegal sentence of ex-communication, which will at least injure his reputation unless he abstains from acts which he is legally entitled to do, the allegation, if established, might constitute the offence of criminal intimidation. 8 Mad 140 : 2 Weir 249. The accused told the complainant, a member their caste, that he should give up held or else they would put him out of caste. Held, that this did not amount to criminal intimidation within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code, the injury threatened not falling within the definition contained in Section 44 of the Indian Penal Code. Rat Un Cr C 27.

A threat to commit suicide, if another person refuses to do a particular act is not criminal intimidation unless the person be interested in the person making the threat. 109 PR 1866 Cr. There must be a threat to another person of injury to his person, reputation or property, or to the person or reputation of any one in whom that person is interested. 30 Cal 418 : 7 CWN 116. Where a Municipal Commissioner threatens a butcher that, if he bought a cow, he would have him sent to jail and that he would make it impossible for him to continue to live in the town. Held, that the use of the words did constitute criminal intimidation as defined in Section 503. 102 Ind Cas 557 : 28 Cr LJ 589 : 8 AI Cr R 148. The words of this section seem to imply that the threat must be one which can be put into execution by the person threatening. It is not necessary that the injury should be one to be inflicted by the offender; it is sufficient if he can cause it to be inflicted by another, and the infliction of it could be avoided by some act or omission that the person threatening desires. 48 Mad 774 : 21 LW 174 : 48 MLJ 190. A threat by a President of a self-constituted arbitration Court is a threat of harm to an individual in his person, reputation or property and it is immaterial that the tribunal is incompetent to execute its own decree. 37 Cr LJ 26 : 27 CWN 479 : 72 Ind Cas 508. The accused demanded of the complainant certain property of theirs in the possession of the latter and used threats. Held, the offence of criminal intimidation was complete even if the object of getting possession was not achieved. 21 ALJ 877. In a case where accused was abusing complainant and complainant running away pursued by accused with brick bat is hand, the act amounts to criminal intimidation. 1953 BLJR 258 : 1953 Cr LJ 1132 : AIR 1953 Pat 188 : 32 Pat 436.

The most important ingredient of the offence of criminal intimidation as defined in Section 503 is that there should be the intention to cause alarm or to cause the person threatened to do any act which he is not legally bound to do. 1961 Jab LJ 557 : 1961 MP LJ 1190.

The section is in two parts, the first part refers to the acts of threatening another with injury to his person or reputation or property or to the persons or reputation of any one in whom that person in interested ; the second part refers to the intent with which the threatening in done and it is of two categories. 1960 Cr LJ 377 : AIR 1960 SC 154. A mere threat does not constitute an offence under this section. (1969) 35 Cut LT 681 : 1980 Cr LR (Mah) 146 : 1980 Cr LJ 210. Intention is an essential ingredient of the offence under the section. Even if it be said that it was a threat to third person the case comes under the words "whoever threatens another with any injury to the reputation of anyone, in whom that person is interested in Section 503. 1964 (2) Cr LJ 85, see also 1964 (1) Cr LJ 255 (where the intention was not proved).

It was held that the said act of the accused attracted the ingredients of the offence under Section 503, IPC punishable under Section 506, IPC. Kalla Srinivas v. State of AP, 2005 Cr LJ 2440 (AP) : 2005(2) ALD (CRL) 250 : 2005(2) Andh LT (Cri) AP 36 : 2005(4) Crimes 395.

Sec. 504. Intentional insult with intent to provoke breach of the peace.—Whoever intentionally insults, and thereby gives provocation to any person, intending or knowing it to be likely that such provocation will cause him to break the public peace, or to commit any other offence shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

2. Insult—Breach of peace 3046
3. Cognizance of offences 3047

1. Scope.—The insults, however deliberate and intentional, are only punishable as offences when they are intended to provoke a breach of the peace or an affray (Section 159). The Court must be satisfied not merely that there has been intentional insult and provocation, but also that the offender gave the provocation intending or knowing it to be likely that it would cause a breach of the peace. Ordinarily such an intention may be inferred from the circumstances attending the insult. The offences is not made to depend upon the sensitive feelings or excitable temper of the person insulted, but on the intention or knowledge of the offender."—Morgan and Macpherson, 450 : see also 48 Cr LJ 974 : AIR 1948 Mad 9 ; AIR 1949 Mad 760 : (1949) 1 MLJ 455 ; 4 DLR (Cal) 115 : 3 AI Cr D 288 ; (1949) 2 MLJ 767. An offence under this section may be committed, although the person, to whom the insult is directly offered, is not a person likely to be provoked to commit a breach of the peace ; and an offence may be committed under this section although the person likely to be provoked to commit a breach of the peace is not in fact provoked. 1 Weir 622. To charge a person with an offence is sufficient. UBR (1892-1896) Vol. I, 220. it is sufficient for the prosecution to prove that the abusive language used is ordinarily sufficient to provoke a man of his position and character to commit a breach of the peace. 1 Weir 620; UBR (1897-1901) Vol. I, 67 : see also 11 Mys LJ 167.

The essence of the offence consists in the effect it is likely to produce the person to whom the provocation is addressed, not upon any other person who may come to know it. UBR (1897-1901) Vol. I, 360. The intention required for the offence under Section 504, IPC, may be inferred from the circumstances attending the insult. But the offence under the section does not depend upon the mere sensitive feeling of the offended person. It depends upon the knowledge or intention of the offender. In the absence of proof of such intention or knowledge, there can be no conviction under the section. 159 Ind Cas 527 : 62 CLJ 205 : 1935 Cr C 1188 : AIR 1935 Cal 736. For the offence under this section it is necessary that the insult should be delivered to the person insulted with the intention that he may then and there be provoked to commit an offence. AIR 1939 Pat 27 : 177 Ind Cas 896 : 1938 PWN 812 : 39 Cr LJ 890 : 19 PLT 892. An assault causing a breach of peace may be of spoken words only or of conduct or actions of men 18 Cr LJ 463 : 1 Pat LW 536 : 39 Ind Cas 303. Under Section 504 there must be an intentional insult. When the charge is of an insult by words, the word must amount to something more than what in English law is called "mere vulgar abuse". Per Beaumont, C.J., in 56 Bom 196 : 34 Bom LR 282 : 33 Cr LJ 463 : AIR 1932 Bom 193. But in the same case Broomfield, J., said, "Words which do not amount to more than vulgar abuse may nevertheless amount to an insult within the meaning of Section 504. Provocation of complainant is not essential. Intentional use of provocation and abusive language is enough. AIR 1932 Lah 480 : 1932 Cr C 618 : 33 PLR 695 : 33 Cr LJ 548 : 138 Ind Cas 120.

Section 504 provides a remedy for abusive and insulting language and it requires an intention to insult and thereby to give provocation to the person insulted and an intention that such provocation should cause or the knowledge that. that provocation is likely to cause the person so insulted to break the public peace or commit any other offence. AIR 1935 Sind 107. There is nothing in this section which confines the insult to spoken words and would not cover words written in a letter. A person is within the ambit of the section not only if the provocation offered by him is of such a character as to cause the person provoked to commit a breach of the peace but even if it is of such a nature as to cause him to commit any other offence. 32 Bom LR 103 ; AIR 1930 Bom 120 : 1930 Cr C 195. Mere abuse unaccompanied by an intention to cause a breach of the peace or knowledge that a breach of the peace is likely does not come within Section 504. Ibid. In dealing with this section the Court has not to judge the temperament or the idiosyncrasies of the individual concerned. It should try to find out what in the ordinary circumstances would have been the effect of the abusive language used. AIR 1930 Lah 344. An insult is no less intentional because it is incidental to another insult or even to another statement or proceedings which is not insulting. But to insult another intentionally is not an offence punishable under Section 504. IPC, unless the offender intends by that insult to provoke the other person into breaking the peace by assaulting him or getting him assaulted on reviling him in loud and angry tones or in any other way or to least knows that such a disturbance is a probable result. 7 NLJ 124 : 81 Ind Cas 903. Where the affairs is a trivial one a conviction under this section is not proper. 4 Lah LJ 230 : 65 Ind Cas 635.

Under this section, it is necessary that the insult should have been intentionally caused, and thereby provocation given with the intention or knowledge that such provocation was likely to cause the person provoked to break the public peace or to commit any other offence. 18 ALJ 515 : 56 Ind Cas 435 : 21 Cr LJ 51 ; see also AIR 1935 Sind 107 : 36 Cr LJ 1461 : 158 Ind Cas 608 ; AIR 1935 Pesh 122 : 36 Cr LJ 1210 : 157 Ind Cas 773. Mere vulgar abuse is no offence. AIR 1950 MB 25. No offence under this section has been committed when insulting words have been uttered in the absence of the person concerned. AIR 1950 Mad 273. An insult, even if gross insult, is not an offence in itself under this section. What is punished under this section is something very much graver than that. 44 Cr LJ 10 : AIR 1942 Mad 622 ; AIR 1941 Mad 683 : 42 Cr LJ 827 : 196 IC 117 ; AIR 1940 Mad 681 : 42 Cr LJ 48 ; 39 Cr LJ 980 : AIR 1939 Pat 27 ; 37 Cr LJ 296.

To constitute an offence under this section, it is sufficient if the insult is of a kind calculated to cause the other party to lose his temper and say to do something violent. The public peace can be broken by angry words as well as by deeds. 4 Bom LR 71 ; 10 M 353 : 1 Weir 620 ; 1 Weir 621. In an offence under this section fine should be imposed. 11 Ind Cas 619 ; see also 2 Pat LT 482 ; 65 Ind Cas 635 ; 7 ALJ 124 : 5 Ind Cas 1002 ; 18 ALJ 515. But where the alleged insulting photo was brought by the agent of the person who was insulted by it and who was subsequently shown to the person concerned, there is no delivery of the insulting photo to the person insulted and hence no offence is committed under Section 504, Penal Code. 19 Pat LT 892 : 39 Cr LJ 980 : 177 Ind Cas 896 : 1938 PWN 812. When a person pulls a Mahommedan by his beard in a public place he intentionally insults him and is guilty of an offence under this section. 23 ALJ 73 : 86 Ind Cas 79 : 26 Cr LJ 703. When the failure of a Magistrate to specifically mention the objectionable words in the charge has caused no prejudice to accused, conviction is not bad. 104 Ind Cas 437 : 28 Cr LJ 821 : AIR 1927 Lah 702.

A person comes within the ambit of Section 504, if the provocation offered by him is of such a character as to cause the person provoked to commit any other offence. The provocation need not be likely to cause a breach of the peace. 99 Ind Cas 604 : 28 Cr LJ 172. Insult may be inferred from tone and manner of spoken words and consists in provoking the person insulted though he might not commit a breach of peace. 36 Ind Cas 849 : 21 CWN 95 : 18 Cr LJ 17. Calling a man "baiman" and "badmash" would fall under Section 504. AIR 1922 Lah 459 : 4 Lah LJ 480 : 51 PLR 1922. The word behaya is an offensive expression particularly when it is uttered in the course of a debate. 35 Cr LJ 1320 : 17 NLJ 131 : 1934 Cr LJ 1091 : AIR 1934 Nag 239. Sanction of Local Government is necessary for complaint against Magistrate for using insulting language to a witness. 4 AWR 666.

Section 504 requires two essentials. There must be intentional insult of a person and thereby due provocation to him or to her and secondly the person must be intended or knew it to be likely that such a provocation would prejudice to public peace. 1952 MWN 336 : (1952) 1 MLJ 470. Before an accused can be found guilty of an offence punishable under Section 504, IPC for insulting a person by the use of words, it must be shown that he used those words intending or knowing it to be likely that it would result in such provocations as would cause that person to break the peace etc. 1952 Cr LJ 721 : AIR 1952 Cal 288 ; AIR 1955 Cr LJ 1282.

The essential ingredients of the offence under Section 504 are : (1) intentionally insult any person and (2) to provoke such person intending or knowing it to be likely that such provocation will cause him to break the public peace to commit any other offence. So far a finding under the section, it is necessary to know as to what were the actual words which were uttered. The High Court, in a case where the accused stated that he was not agitated or excited when abused and still the Magistrate frames a charge under Section 504, quash the charge. 1962 (2) Cr LJ 543 (relying in AIR 1960 SC 866 ; AIR 1952 Cal 288 ; AIR 1948 Mad 9.

The offence under this section can be made out only on proof of the aforesaid elements. the closing intention or knowledge of the offender that provocation given b his will cause complainant to break public peace, beyond all reasonable doubts eithe by positive evidence or by such evidence from which those facts can be conclusivel inferred. (1969) 35 Cut LJ 7784 ; AIR 1964 Mys 785.

Abuses involving aspersions on chastity of complainant's mother and siste also fall within the section. AIR 1956 Bom 239 : 1956 Cr LJ 500. Gesture accompanying words used, object of insult, etc., are all to be taken into consideration 20 Cut LT 180.

The question arises whether the complainant's reaction to the insult is material See in this connection. 2. Insult—Breach of peace.—The allegations in the complaint do not also mad out the ingredients of an offence under Section 504 of the Penal Code. Section 50 refers to intentional insult with intent to provoke breach of peace. The allegation in th complaint is that when he enquired with accused about the sale deeds, they asserte that they will obtain possession of land under the sale deeds and he can do whatever h wants. The statement attributed to appellants, it cannot be said to amount to an "insu with intent to provoke breach of peace". The statement attributed to accused, even if was true, was merely a statement referring to the consequence of execution of the sa deeds by first appellants in favour of the second appellant. Ms. Ibrahim & Ors. vs. Sta of Bihar & Anr., 2010 (2) CrLJ 2223 (SC).

3. Cognizance of offences.—Informant a member of the Scheduled Caste community alleged that he was accosted in way by number of accused persons including petitioners and was brought in a room where he was intimidated, assaulted, insulted and was abused. Accused persons alleged to have intimidated and abused informant in a room and not within public view. Cognizance taken under provisions of SCST Act is quite bad. 1. Amendment.—This section has been substituted by the Indian Penal Cod Amendment Act, 1898 (4 of 1898), Section 6, and the words within quotations in thi section have been substituted by the Repealing and Amending Act, 1927 (10 of 1927 Section 2 Sch. I. The words "for in the Royal Indian Marine" after the word "Majesty have been repealed by the Amendment Act, 1934 (35 of 1934), Section 2 and Schedul I. The words "Her Majesty or in the Imperial Service Troops have recently bee successively substituted by the words "India" by the Indian Adaptation of Laws Order 1950, and Act 3 of 1951, Section 3 and Schedule. The words "three years" wer substituted for the words "two years" by Act 41 of 1961 and sub-section (2) and (3) wer inserted by Act 35 of 1969, Section 3(i).

2. Principle of construction.—This section and other sections of the same kin which deal with the liberty of the subject must be construed very strictly in favour the defence. 40 CWN 1218.

3. Constitutionality of the section.—Clause (2) of Act 19 clearly saves from th vice of unconstitutionality. (1962) 2 SCR 769 : AIR 1962 SC 955 : (1962) 2 Cr LJ 603.

4. Scope.—"This statement, rumour or report, whether it is circulated or made public by words, by writings or by signals or otherwise, if it is known by the person who publishes it to be false and it is intended to cause mutiny (see Chapter VII, of offences relating to the Army and Navy is punishable as an offence under this section. It is also punishable if it is intended to cause fear or alarm to the public, or to any class of the public, or any community (see Section 12) and thereby to induce any person to commit any offence within the sixth or eighth Chapter of the Code".—Morgan and Macpherson, 451. The mere causing of fear or alarm to the public or to a section of the public does not constitute an offence under this section ; but it is necessary that the fear or alarm should be caused in such circumstances as to render it likely that the fear or alarm to commit an offence against the State or against the public tranquility. Account can not be taken of a vague possibility that the state of mind which is caused by alarm may easily induce a person to commit an offence against the public tranquility. 3 CWN 1.

5. Clause (c).—"Clause (c)" is a very narrow one, intending to be directed towards preventing classes between rival communities and rival classes. It is intended to deal with real classes and real communities and does not apply to purely imaginary people. A person who delivers a speech inciting would be strikers against black-legs, is not guilty of an offence under Section 505 (e) and cannot be convicted under it. 40 CWN 1218.

This clause penalises the publication or circulation of any statement with intent to incite or which is likely to incite any class or community of persons to commit any offence against any other class or community. 1. Amendment.—The words "imprisonment for life" were substituted for transportation by Act 29 of 1955, Section 117 and Schedule (w.e.f. 1.1.1956).

2. Criminal Intimidation.—In regard to the charge of criminal intimidation it was explained that the words "your days are numbered" used by the accused for complainant opposite-party were to be understood in the context of the circumstances in which they were uttered. The words meant that service of the complainant opposite party under the company might be terminated. Held, that there was, therefore, no criminnl intimidation. 1987 Cri LJ 2074 (Cal).

Death of complainant. Admittedly, complainant had died after recording of his pre-charge statement. Not only the respondents had the right as well as the opportunity to cross-examine him, they did actually cross-examine him. Therefore, the statement of complainant recorded at pre-charge stage is relevant in view of the provisions contained in Section 33 of the Evidence Act.

The learned Metropolitan Magistrate has not taken the pre-charge statement of complainant into consideration. In view of the mandate of Section 33 of the Evidence Act, it was obligatory for him to take the statement of late complainant into consideration before passing judgment on the merit of the case. Failure of the learned Metropolitan Magistrate to take the statement of complainant into consideration has resulted in failure of justice and, therefore, the order passed by him cannot be sustained. Surjit Kaur vs D. S. Kapoor & Ors., 2010 Cri LJ 1008 (Delhi).

Since no threat was issued by accused to cause death or grievous hurt to complainant, accused not guilty under Section 506. Mohinder Singh v. State of Haryana, 1993 Cri LJ 85 (P&H).

Admittedly, the occurrence did not take place in a public place, but it took place in the garden belonged to one P.K.N. Murthy, who stated to have purchased the said property from one Thangavelu without the knowledge of the petitioners, who are wife and son of the said Thangavely respectively. Under those circumstances, the proceeding for the offence under Section 294 (b), I.P.C. is not maintainable. Even with regard to the offence under Section 506(1), I.P.C. the allegations asking a person not to work in the garden, which originally belonged to them and threatening that person to go away from the garden, would not satisfy the main requirement of Section 506, I.P.C. Saraswathi and another v. state, 2002 Cri LJ 1420 (Mad) : 2002(3) CCR 446 (Mad).

3. Scope.—"If the criminal intimidation is aggravated by a threat of injury of the kind here mentioned, an increased punishment may be awarded. The offences which are punishable with death or transportation, or with imprisonment for seven years, are mentioned in different section".—Morgan and Macpherson, 452. To constitute an offence under this section, it must be shown that the person charged actually threatened another with injury to his person, reputation or property, or to the person or reputation of any one in whom that person is interested, with intent to cause hurt. 15 PR 1882 Cr : see also AIR 1933 Sind 196 : 27 SLR 214 : 145 Ind Cas 136 : 34 Cr LJ 711. Where a prosecution under Section 506, IPC, was based upon a letter written t the complainant by solicitor under instruction from the accused warning him of th consequences of continuing to issue circulars making defamatory accusations agains the accused and stating that he would refrain from instituting criminal proceeding against the complainant if he was prepared to give an undertaking to continue thos circulars. Held, that the letter could not be regarded as a threat within the meaning o Section 503, I. P. code, and the prosecution should therefore be quashed. 170 Ind Ca 367 : 38 Cr LJ 924 : 41 CWN 831 : AIR 1937 Cal 367. AIR 1931 Lah 288. Where a shopkeeper was asked not to import any foreign cloth for sale or in default threat held out to him that his shop would be picketted, an offence under this section has been committed. AIR 1931 All 263 : 1931 Cr C 423 : 130 Ind Cas 193. Where the accused are challaned under Section 341, IPC, only the trying Magistrate is justified in charging them under that section as well as under Section 506, IPC, and his procedure in doing so is perfectly regular. AIR 1931 Oudh 73. A deterrent punishment awarded for the offence of criminal intimidation under Section 506, IPC, where there is no evidence showing that at or in the neighbourhood of the locality where the incident happened there was any marked popular excitement creating or likely to create breaches of public peace, or public tumult, or disorder is inappropriate. 2 Pat LT 596 : 93 Ind Cas 615 : 22 Cr LJ 679.

Where there was substantially only one offence of criminal intimidation committed, and the Magistrate convicted that accused under Sections 506 and 507 of the Code and imposed sentences for both offences, held, that the conviction under one of the sections was bad. 4 BHC Cr 12. A threat to bring a false charge against a person and to support it by fabricating false evidence is criminal intimidation. 1 Weir 623. To constitute an offence under Section 506, Penal Code, it is not necessary that the threat should be uttered directly to the persons intended to be intimidated. 1 Weir 623 622. Intimidating a police constable, by holding out a threat of getting him dismissed from service, is not such a threat of injuring as is punishable under Section 506, 20 Bom 794. To constitute an offence described in Section 506, Penal Code, it must be shown that the person charged actually threatened another with injury to his person, reputation or property, or to the person or reputation of any one in whom that person is interested, with intent to cause alarm. 45 PR 1882 Cr. Recommendation by Managing Committee to general body to rescind grant made to member of society is illegal act and hence, does not come under Section 506. 145 Ind Cas 136 : 1933 Cr C 711 : 27 SLR 214 : 34 Cr LJ 884 : AIR 1933 Sind 196. The accused told the complainant that she would be beaten and then alone she would vacate the house in which she was living, held that it clearly amounted to an offence under Sec. 506, 1960 Jab LJ 449 : 1960 MPLJ 632 : 1960 MPC 303; AIR 1960 SC 154 : 1960 SCJ 195. Rape and outraging of modesty of woman.—The prosecution has clearly established commission of offence punishable under Secs. 354 and 506 IPC. So far as the offence punishable under Sec. 376 IPC is concerned, the basic ingredients are set out in Sec. 375 IPC. On a reading of the evidence of the prosecutrix, we find that a case of rape has not been established so far as the respondent is concerned.

That being the position, we allow the appeal of the State to the extent that the respondent is convicted for offences punishable under Secs. 354 and 506 IPC. The sentence are two years' and six months' rigorous imprisonment respectively. It is stated that the appellant has suffered more than that period of custody. If that being so, he need not surrender to custody. The appeal is allowed to the aforesaid extent. Accused in a case facing under the section may be released under the Probation of Offenders Act. AIR 1974 SC 35 : 1974 Cr LJ 153.

5. Permission of Magistrate—Necessity.—On careful perusal of the contents of the complaint and other documents, it appears that there is no question of any criminal intimidation by the applicants to the complainant. That apart, since the Part 1 of the said section is not cognisable, the permission of the Magistrate would be required to try the applicants under said section. In the instant case, it is admitted position that no such permission has been obtained by the prosecution from the Magistrate. Dr. Narendra Bhojram Patil vs. State of Maharashtra, 2010 (3) CrLJ 2762 (Bom) (Nagpur).

6. Procedure.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compounda-ble—Triable by Presidency Magistrate of the first or second class. If the threat be to cause death or grievous hurt, etc.—Not cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session.

1. 1. Scope.—"A intending to outrage the modesty of a woman, exposes his person indecently to her, or uses absence words intending that she should hear them, or exhibits to her absence drawing. A has committed this offence. If the intrusion upon the woman's privacy is by entering house or room, etc., the offence may come within the definition of criminal trespass (see Section 441)".—Morgan and Macpherson, 453. This section makes intention to insult the modesty of a woman the essential ingredient of the offence. 5 Bom LR 502. To constitute an intrusion upon the privacy of a woman, an offence under this section, the intruder must be intending to insult the modesty of such woman. 6 PR 1892 Cr ; 96 Ind Cas 968. An offence under this section is made out when the accused writes a letter to the complainant containing incident overtures. 82 Bom LR 90 : 93 Ind Cas 247 : 27 Cr LJ 445 : 50 Bom 246. In order to justify conviction under this section the modesty of some particular woman must have been outraged. 19 SLR 87. To abuse a woman in absence terms near a water tap would obviously amount to an offence falling under Section 509. (1961) 2 Guj LR 196.

The accused was charged of continuously subjecting deceased couple to mental agony on account of his unnatural conduct. The couple, who were son and daughter-in-law of appellant, committed suicide but no iota of material showed that immediately before incident deceased had given an inkling about their feelings of dismay and harassment on account of any conduct of accused which could have been ground to connect accused with said offence. Thus charge on said account (under Section 306) was liable to be quashed. Appellant wanted to establish illegal relations with his deceased daughter-in-law and evidence showed that unnatural conduct of appellant caused such mental agony to lady that she alongwith her husband committed suicide leaving behind them their only son. The prima facie material on record also showed that accused by words, gesture and act intended to insult modesty of deceased. As such it was held that framing of charges under Section 498A/509 needed no interference and trial of accused should continue. Om Prakash Agarwal v. State, 2003 Cr LJ 4138 (MP) : 2003(1) MPHT 127. Where an accused entered into a woman's apartment and tried to catch hold of her and persuade her by removing garments, an offence under the section is committed. AIR 1961 All 131 : (1961) 1 Cr LJ 330.

A lady police officer while working as District S.P. received some anonymous letter sent to her in her name address through courier service. Vulgar and obscene language was used in letters and those were written intending to insult her modesty. On inquiry it was found that the accused was the author of the said letters. It was held that "writing letter" to a woman intending to insult her modesty could be constituted as "making a gesture" under Section 509, IPC. It was also held that neither Section 292 nor Section 294 would be attracted in such cases and that though the specific section was not included in the charge-sheet, nothing prevented the lower court from proceeding against the accused for offence under Section 509, IPC. M.M. Hasies v. State of Kerala, 2005 Cr LJ 3314 (Ker) : 2005(4) All Cri R 533 : 2005(4) Crimes 153 : 2005(4) Cur Cri R 99 : 2005(4) East Cri C 511.

2. Procedure.—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable with Court's permission—Triable by any Magistrate.

3. Charge.—"I (name and office of the Magistrate, etc.,) hereby charge you (name of the accused as follows :

That on or about the....................day of...........at.............you (name of the accused) intending to insult the modesty of one A.B., uttered the words, to wit.....(or made some sound or gesture, to wit.......or exhibited some object to wit.........) intending that the same shall be heard (or seen) by the said A.B., and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 509 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

"And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge."

4. Benefit of doubt.—When there was enmity between complainant and accused and there contradictions in statements of complainant and her husband, accused entitled to benefit of doubt. Haridas v. State of Maharashtra, 1997 Cri LJ 122 (Bom).

5. Complaint—Dismissal by Magistrate—Validity.—In the instant case the accused in the complaint is the Principal of College, the husband of complainant is working as professor in said college. Their daughter 'I' was a student of that College and was also the Vice-Chairman of the College Union. It was alleged that High Court had permitted 'I' to appear for the University examination. When the complainant along with 'I' came to the college office and when they asked for the hall ticket, accused asked complainant whether her daughter has no father as he did not accompany them. It is alleged that accused also asked her whether her husband is not the father of her daughter and why he did not come along with them and is it because he is abusing the daughter, thereby implying that father is sexually illtreating the daughter. The complainant filed complaint but no action was taken by police. The complaint sought an order to forward the complaint for investigation. The Magistrate, however, recorded sworn statement and dismissed complaint under Sec. 203 as no offence under Sec. 509 IPC was attracted and there was no ground to proceed against the accused.

Held, when on the very face of woman and that too in the presence of her daughter, if the mother is asked whether her husband is not the father of the daughter, it is a remark aimed at the conduct and behaviour of that woman. It is definitely a remark on her chastity, one of the most cherished virtues of a woman. It is an insult on her modesty and that too in the very presence of her daughter. Thus, the finding of the Magistrate that ingredients of the offence is not made out is illegal. If the words spoken to by the accused as alleged in the complaint and the sworn statement is correct, it could only be an insult to the modesty of revision petitioner, who is the mother of a grown up lady and the wife of a Professor of the very same College. At the stage of inquiry under S. 200 or 202 of CrPC, it is not for the Court to decide whether the accused could be convicted or not but only whether there are sufficient grounds to proceed further. If the words are as spoken to by revision petitioner, it is not a case for discharge under S. 203. In the circumstance, Magistrate should have proceeded with the complaint by issuing summons as provided under S. 204 of CrPC. The dismissal of the complaint under S. 203 is illegal and liable to be set aside. Aloshia Joseph v. Rev. Dr. Joseph Kollamparambil and Anr., 2009 CriLJ 2190 (Ker).

1. Amendment.—Same as under Section 506.

2. Application.—This Chapter applies to offences punishable under Sections 121A, 294 and 304A. Vide Act 27 of 1875, Section 13.

3. Attempt.—"Attempt" means an act which if not prevented would have resulted in full consumption of the Act attempted. Aman Kumar v. State of Haryana, 2004 Cr LJ 1399 : (2004) 4 SCC 379 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 1266 : AIR 2004 SC 1497.

The word "attempt" consists in it the intent to commit a crime, falling short of, its actual commission or consummation/completion. There is difference between the cases of a mere preparation and an attempt. The dividing fine between a mere preparation and an attempt is sometimes thin and has to be decided on the facts of each case. There is a greater degree of determination in attempt as compared with preparation. Koppula Venkat Rao v. State of AP, 2004 Cr LJ 1804 : (2004) 2 Crimes 306 (SC) : (2004) 3 SCC 602 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 840 : AIR 2004 SC 1874.

An attempt is made punishable because every attempt, although it falls short of success, must create alarm which is by itself an injury, and the moral guilt of the offender is the same as if he had succeeded. Moral guilt must be united to injury in order to justify punishment. As the injury is not as great as, if the act had been committed, only half the punishment is awarded. Aman Kumar v. State of Haryana, 2004 Cr LJ 1399 (SC) : (2004) 4 SCC 379 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 1266 : AIR 2004 SC 1497.

In a case where the child aged 6 years who was the son of deceased had seen the occurrence but the prosecution failed to examine the person to whom child first met after incident, it was held that the fact of pending civil suit between both parties was not enough for committing ghastly murder. The conviction of accused was set aside. Bhagwan Singh v. State of MP, 2003 Cr LJ 1262 (SC) : AIR 2003 SC 1088 : 2003 AIR SCW 617 : 2003(2) Crimes 82 : 2003(1) Rec Cri R 660.

Failure of prosecution to examine any person from place of incident in support of allegation of ill-treatment cannot be a ground to reject evidence of large number of witnesses having deposed in support. State of Karnataka v. K. Gopal Krishna, 200 LJ 1436 (SC) : AIR 2005 SC 1014 : 2005 AIR SCW 949 : 2005(1) Crimes 271.

It is now well-settled principle of law that whom to cite as a witness and whom is within the domain of the prosecution. It is also well settled principle that prosecution evidence has to be weighed and not to be counted. It is just because other pedestrian or resident of the vicinity has not been cited as witnesses will be ground to throw away the otherwise reliable testimony of the eye-witnesses whic natural and inspires confidence. State of UP v. Ganga Ram, 2005 Cr LJ 4643 : 2006 MR (Cri) 2469.

It is not necessary for prosecution to examine somebody as a witness even tho the witness was not likely to support the prosecution version. Non-examination of so persons per se does not corrode vitality of prosecution version, particularly when witnesses examined have withstood incisive cross-examination and pointed to respondents as the perpetrators of the crime. State of MP v. Dharkole, 2005 Cr LJ 1 AIR 2005 SC 44 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 225.

Non-examination of independent witness by itself may not give rise to adve inference against the prosecution. However, when the evidence of the alleged e witnesses raise serious doubts on the point of their presence at the time of act occurrence, the unexplained omission to examine the independent witness 'K' wo assume significance. Hem Raj v. State of Haryana, 2005 Cr LJ 2152 : AIR 2005 SC 21 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1646.

The Illustrations above given are cases of attempts in which the offen contemplated cannot be committed (the box or pocket being empty), but the act do towards the commission has been carried to such a length as the offender consider sufficient to effect his purpose. He has used all such exertions for the purpose in vi as he would have used if he has been successful, but he was filled by something n dependent on his own will. It is the same as if he had fired a loaded gun at a m intending to murder him, but had missed his aim. The words "does any act towards t commission of the offence" may well include acts less near to the consummation of t offence than those just mentioned But these words must not, it seems, be construed include all acts. however remote which read towards the commission of the offence. T thing done may be too small or it may proceed too short a way towards t accomplishment of the offence for the law to notice it as an attempt. The following a Illustrations of the (see Section 307);

A. intending to murder Z, buys a gun for the purpose of loading it and firing at Z.

A, intending to murder Z by poison, purchases poison and has it in his possessio

A intending to commit a murder, is seen to walk towards the place of t contemplated murder.

Such acts are in themselves ambiguous, and are not so immediately connect with the offence as to make the doers punishable under this section.

Section 511 makes attempt to commit an offence punishable. The offen attempted should be one punishable by the Code with imprisonment. The conditio stipulated in the provision for completion of the said offence are : (1) The offend should have done some act towards commission of the main offence; (2) Such attempt is not expressly covered as a penal provision elsewhere in the Code. Thus attempt on the part of the accused is sine qua non for the offence under Section 511. Thus if the act of the accused asking wife to go and commit suicide had driven her to proceed to the railway track for ending her life then it is expressly made punishable under Section 498A, IPC. When it is so expressly made punishable the act involved therein stands lifted out of purview of Section 511 IPC. The very policy underlying in Section 511 seems to be for providing it as a residuary provision. The corollary, therefore, is that the accused, in this case, cannot be convicted under Section 511 on account of the acts alleged against him. Satvir Singh v. State of Punjab 2001 Cri LJ 4625 (SC) : AIR 2001 (SC) 2828 : 2001(8) SCC 633 : 2001(8) JT 208 : 2001(6) Scale 513 : 2001(7) Supreme 267 : 2001(4) Crimes 45 (SC).

It is impossible to lay down a clear rule on such a subject, or to define what is such an act done in furtherance of a criminal intent as will constitute an attempt. As it has been said, acts remotely tending towards the commission of an offence are not, it seems sufficient to bring a case within this section. On the other hand, acts immediately and necessarily connected with the commission of the offence, and which constitute a commencement of execution of the offence, not being completed only because, the offender is hindered by circumstances independent of his will, as by seizure by the police, etc., are attempts.

'The Court should be satisfied that the offender had in his mind the design to commit a certain offence, and that he had begun to move towards an execution of his purpose ; there must also be proof of some act, not of an ambiguous kind, but directly approximating to the commission of the offence. When the offender's design is made manifest by any such act, it becomes an attempt cognizable as an offence punishable under this section."—Morgan and Macpherson, 456. An attempt is an intentional preparatory action which fails in object, which so fails through circumstances independent of the person who seeks its accomplishment. In other words, when a man does an intentional act with a view to attain a certain end, and fails in his object through circumstances independent of his own will then that man has attempted to effect the object at which he aimed. 26 Cr LJ 1424 : 89 Ind Cas 848 : AIR 1949 Pat 326 : 56 Cr LJ 682 : 4 DLR (Pat) 90. Under the Penal Code all that is necessary to constitute an attempt to commit an offence is some external act, something tangible and ostensible, of which the law can take hold as an act showing progress towards the actual commission of the offence. It does not matter that the purpose was interrupted. 103 Ind Cas 408 : 28 Cr LJ 680. A person cannot be convicted of attempting to commit an offence, unless the offence would have been committed had the attempt proved successful. 22 Cal 131. The term "attempt" indicates the actual taking of those steps which lead immediately to the commission of the offence, although nothing be done, or omitted, which of itself is a necessary constituent of the offenc attempted. 4 NWP 46. In order to constitute an attempt, there must be an intention t commit a particular crime, a commencement of the commission, and an act don towards the commission. The act of raising a knife in a threatening attitude manifestin an intention to stab, but without actually trying to stab the complainant falls short c an attempt to stab. 1 LBR 264. The section was not meant to cover only the penultimate act towards th completion of an offence and not acts done precedent if those acts are done in th course of the attempt to commit the offence or done with the intent to commit it an done towards its commission. (1957) 8 STC 534 : 1957 BLJR 66. The crucial words i Section 511 are that the accused should have done the act towards the commission c the offence. There are three stages in the commission of a crime (i) intention to commit (ii) preparation to commit; and (iii) attempt to commit. If the attempt results in th actual commission of the offence, the crime is complete. But the Penal Code make th attempt an offence, if the accused does any act towards the commission of the offence AIR 1955 Andh 118 : 1955 Cr LJ 917. The distinction between preparation and attemp is very thin. The crucial test is whether the last act if un-interrupted and successfu would constitute a crime. Ibid. The ground of distinction will be merely evidential. 195 Mad WN 926. AIR 1951 Assam 17.

An accused is liable for attempt when his failure, to commit an offence is not due to any act or omission of his own, but to the intervention of some factor independent of his volition. ILR 1950 Nag 904 : AIR 1951 Nag 315 : 5 Al Cr D 149.

The conception of an attempt to commit an offence is a technical one. It is for the Court on a consideration of fact proved, to come to a conclusion whether there was an attempt to commit an offence. 1953 BLJR 455 : 1953 Cr LJ 1744 : AIR 1953 Pat 338. The mind of the person to whom the false pretence were made should be affected thereby is not an essential element of the offence. (1957) STC 534 : 157 BLJR 66.

5. Preparation.—Between the preparation for the attempt and the attempt itself, there is a wide difference. The preparation consists in devising or arranging means or measures necessary for the commission of the offence : the attempt is the direct movement towards the commission after preparation are made. The law allows a locus penitentia and will not held that a person has attempted a crime, until he has passed beyond the stage of preparation. 3 Mad 4 : 1 Weir 543 ; 65 Ind Cas 492 : 23 Cr LJ 108 ; Pak LR 1948 Lah 154. There is a distinction between the commission of an offence, the attempt to commit it and a preparation to commit it. Preparation or providing an opportunity to commit an offence, is a stage of the proceeding short, of attempt, and is not punishable. 7 PLR 1903 : 25 PR 1902 Cr. The real difficulty in distinguishing between preparation and attempt arises in determining where a given act or set of acts passes from the former stage into the latter whether the commission of an offence requires the performance of a series of acts and the person commences this series with a view to carry it out to its completion, he has in the language of Section 511. IPC, done an act towards the commission of the offence in the attempt to commit the offence. 5 NLJ 16 : 65 Ind Cas 994 : 23 Cr LJ 210 ; see also 7 PLR 1903 : 25 PR 1902 Cr. 24 Bom 287. Although the provisions of the section extend to a much wider range of cases than would be deemed punishable under the English Law, they would not extend to make punishable as attempt acts done in the mere stage of preparation. Although such acts are done towards the commission of the offence, they are not done in the attempt to commit the offence. The term "attempt" indicates the actual taking of those steps which lead immediately to the commission of the offence, although nothing be done or omitted, which of itself is a necessary constituent of the offence attempted. 4 NWP 46 ; see also 28 PLR 575 : 28 Cr LJ 663 : AIR 1927 Lah 580 : 103 Ind Cas 199. Preparation to commit an offence and an attempt are distinct ; if the actual transaction has commenced and would have ended in a crime, if not interrupted, there is an attempt. 18 PR 1868 Cr. Preparation consists in devising means necessary for the commission of the offence. 65 Ind Cas 492 ; see also 1923 Pat 307. An intent to commit an offence is not the same thing as an attempt to commit such an offence. Intent exists before attempt begins. A mere intent is not by itself an offence. 4 NLJ 245 : 37 CWN 1151. 20. Attempt to commit rape.—Degree of moral guilt of offender in case of attempt is same as if he had succeeded in his plan. The word attempt should be understood in its ordinary meaning and it is different from intention and preparation. Attempt means an act which if not prevented would have resulted in full consumption of act attempted. In this case the accused had forcibly dragged the prosecutrix to field and raped her but evidence of prosecutrix and the doctor did not specifically refer to penetration which is sine qua non for the offence of rape. Setting aside, the conviction of accused under Section 376 the Court convicted them under Section 354/34. It was not considered an attempt as accused were not determined to have sexual intercourse in all events. Aman Kumar v. State of Haryana, 2004 Cr LJ 1399 (SC) : AIR 2004 (SC) 1497 : AIR 2004 SCW 827 : 2004(2) Crimes 66 : 2004(2) Bom Cr (Cri) 267 : 2004(2) All Cri LR 476.

Intended to do. In order to find an accused guilty of an attempt to commit rape, the Court has to satisfy itself that the accused when he laid hold of the victim, not only desired to gratify his passions upon her person, but that he intended to do so at all events and notwithstanding any resistance on her part. Indecent assaults are often magnified into attempt at rape. In order to come to a conclusion that the conduct of the accused was indicative of a determination to gratify his passion at all resistance, then such materials must exist. Importantly, surrounding circumstances many times throw beacon light on that aspect. Kailash Laxman Khamkar vs. State of Maharashtra, 2010 (3) Cri LJ 3255 (Bom).

The accused attempted to commit rape. Section 375 IPC defines rape whereas Section 376 envisages punishment for rape. There is explanation in Section 375 IPC to the effect that penetration is sufficient to constitute the sexual intercourse necessary to the offence of rape. So, the natural corollary is that provisions of Section 376 / 511 IPC would be attracted in case the accused tried a penetrate his penis in the vagina of prosecutrix. In the present case, from the testimony of the prosecutrix, it is revealed that neither the accused undressed himself nor he undressed the prosecutrix. The only attribution to the accused is that he caught hold of the prosecutrix, laid her on the ground and then caught hold of her neck.

In the present case, there is neither allegation of ejaculation of accused nor undressing both the prosecutrix and himself. So, I am of the view that the finding of the learned trial Court whereby the accused stands convicted under Section 376 and / IPC is without any basis and the accused stands acquitted under the said provision of law.

The above said ingredients are complete, in the present case. By invoking the provisions of Section 222 Criminal Procedure Code, the accused stands convicted under Section 354 IPC. Pawan Kumar vs. State of Haryana, 2010 (2) CrLJ 2077 (P & H).

In the present case, the accused took the prosecutrix to lonely place inside a room where he undressed himself and also the prosecutrix. After laying her on the floor, the accused was just trying to sit over her, at that time, he was caught by the brother of the prosecutrix and other witnesses. This shows that with intention to commit the offence of rape the accused prepared himself by undressing himself and also undressing the prosecutrix and after laying her on the floor, he tried to sit over her. If he was not caught by the brother of the prosecutrix and others, he must have succeeded in the commission of offence of rape. Facts of the present case are suggestive of the fact that accused has not tried to, outrage the modesty of a woman, but had attempted to commit rape on her. Rupesh Kumar s/o Nischal Das v. State of Chhattisgarh, 2009 CriLJ 1822 (Chha).

Where trial court by ignoring unshaken evidence of prosecution witnesses with regard to dragging of deceased and recovery of his dead body from house of deceased, acquitted accused persons, remand of case to Sessions Court from retrial by High Court just and proper. Ram Briksh Singh v. Ambika Yadav, 2005 (3) East Cr C 60 (SC).

The accused persons armed with deadly weapons, petted stones, chased deceased, assaulted him on their coming back, they assaulted prosecution witness also. The mere fact that instead of the original intended victim somebody else was also assaulted and killed. It was held that the principle of malice would apply and all would be punished under Section 302/149, IPC. State of Maharashtra v. Kashirao, 2003 Cr LJ 4464 (SC) : AIR 2003 SC 3901 : 2003 AIR SCW 4492 : 2003(2) ALD (CRL) 798.

Doubtful evidence — Rape and murder. What has been stated above relating to the law on circumstantial evidence, only question to be examined is whether the presence of the injuries on the accused can be held to be sufficient to hold appellant guilty. The trial Court held that the accused was examined on 24.03.1993 by the doctor PW. 3 who found abrasions on the thighs and hip joints of the accused, as the injuries must have been received in a scuffle. This circumstance found supported from the finding of chappals and other articles. It was held that recovery of utensil and chappals of the deceased does not lead to the guilt of the accused but that circumstances show the involvement of the accused who was found to have injuries on the persons corresponding with the injuries on the deceased. The High Court noted as follows :

> "In our considered view, a very strong circumstance which connects the appellant with the commission of offence is the presence of injuries on his person especially thigh and hip joints."
> "This certainly is a very strong circumstance which by itself can be said to be conclusive in its nature pointing towards the guilt of the accused."
> "The recovery of chappals, Dolu (steel container) and certain other articles from the fields of the appellant speak volumes of the fact of a strong corroborative circumstance against the appellant."
> "The aforesaid strong circumstances can very well be taken in to account for upholding the conviction of the appellant."

Circumstances on which the trial Court and the High Court had relied to hold the accused guilty by no stretch of imagination can be determinative of the fact that accused was responsible for the commission of rape. Even if it is accepted that the chappals and the utensils were found in the fields of the appellant, the dead body was found by another place i.e. in the field of Sheo Ram.

Above being the position that the judgment of the trial Court affirmed by the High Court cannot be maintained and are set aside. The appeal is allowed. The appellant who is in custody shall be released forthwith unless required to be in custody in connection with any other case. Baldev Singh vs. State of Haryana, AIR 2009 SC 963 : 2008 CrLJ 948 : 2008 (14) SCC 768 : 2009 (2) SLT 243 : 2008 (15) Scale 366 : 2008 (16) SCR 826.

1st accused gave threat not to disclose the incident to anybody and left her. While she was returning, she met her mother and informed about this incident. So, the scrutiny of the evidence of victim and her mother reveal the only discrepancy with regard to an act of forcible sexual intercourse and whereas her mother informed the doctor that the injuries are due to fall from the bicycle. Excepting these two circumstances, there is no such inconsistency so as to disbelieve the evidence of the prosecutrix. So far as the act for the offence punishable under Section 376, IPC is concerned, it is evident from the certificates produced that the injuries were on the vulva region. On perusal of the evidence of victim, it reveals that at the time of the incident, the 1st accused placed his male organ on the private part and nowhere she states that there was penetration of the male organ. In the absence of any such material in the evidence of victim it cannot be said that there was penetration and commission of forcible sexual intercourse. In the circumstances, in my considered opinion, the offence falls within the purview of Section 376 read with Section 511, IPC. The medical evidence does not support the version of the prosecution so far as commission of forcible sexua intercourse and so also, victim does not say anything about the penetration.

The trial Court has convicted appellant for the offence under Section 376, IPC. Bu had failed to see that there was no penetration and the medical evidence does no support the version of the prosecution and so also, victim. In that view of the matter the conviction of the 1st appellant by the trial Court for the offence under Section 376 IPC is illegal and to that extent, his conviction is to be set aside. Channabasappa vs State by Honnali Police, 2010 (3) CriLJ 3369 (Karn).

21. Administering harmless substance believing it to be poison.—An attempt t commit an offence, as defined in Section 411, IPC, means not merely an act with th intention to commit an offence which is unsuccessful because it would not possibl result in the completion of the offence, but an act done towards the commission of th offence, that is to say, the offence remains incomplete, only because something ye remains to be done, which the person intending to commit the offence is unable to d by reason of circumstances independent of his own volition. An action complete in itsel and not constituting an offence did not constitute an attempt to commit an offence, e.g. as the administration of a harmless substance which the accused wrongly believed t be poison. 9 CPLR 14 Cr.

22. Attempt to export without permit.—See 1953 Cr LJ 1321 : AIR 1953 MI 216.

23. Procedure.—Cognizable or not—Warrant or the summons—Bailable or not— Compoundable or not—as in the offence attempted. Triable by the Court, by which the offence attempted is triable. If punishable with death, imprisonment for life o imprisonment for 7 years or upwards—Cognizable—Warrant—Not compoundable— Triable by Court of Session. If punishable with imprisonment for 3 years and upwards but less than 7 years—Cognizable— Warrant—Not bailable (except in cases under the Indian Arms Act, Section 19 which shall be bailable)—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class. If punishable with imprisonment for one year and upwards but less than 3 years—Not cognizable— Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by Court of Session. Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first or second class. If punishable with imprisonment for less than one year, or with fine only—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Triable by any Magistrate.

24. Charge.—I (name and office of the Magistrate, Session Judg) hereby charge you (name of the accused) as follows :

That on or about the ....day of ....at............. you attempted to commit (specify the offence attempted), and in such attempt did a certain act towards the commission of the said offence, to wit .... (mention it) and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under section ....(principal offence), and Section 511 of the Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

And I hereby direct that you be tried on the said charge.

25. Enhancement of sentence.—The Apex Court has laid down in Kamal Kishore of H.P. 2000 Cri LJ 2292, that as Parliament had disfavoured the sentence to plummet below the minimum limit prescribed, Parliament used the expression “shall not be less than" which is peremptory in tone; the court has normally no discretion even to award sentences which is less than the said minimum; nonetheless Parliament was not oblivious of certain situation, and hence to meet extremely rare contingency it made departure from the strict rule by conferring a discretion on the court subject to two conditions—one is that there should be "adequate and special reasons" and other is such reasons should be mentioned in the judgment. Barkatullakha, v. State of Maharashtra, 2002 Cri LJ 427 (Bom) : 2002(1) B Cri C 642 : 2002(2) Femi-Juris CC 168 : 2002(4) CRJ 117 (Bom).

26. Attempt to kidnapping.—Accused was caught red handed while trying to forcefully take away victim child from school premises i.e. lawful authority. There is nothing on record to show that the accused person had any intention to murder or to dispose of the victim child in a manner so as to put him in a danger of being murdered. The I.O. himself, stated that during the investigation he could not ascertain the purpose of kidnapping the boy. It has not been established that the attempt to kidnap was done with a view to murder or to dispose of the victim child in a manner so as to put him in danger of being murdered. It appears that the offence committed by the accused was an offence covered by the Section 361, IPC i.e. kidnapping from lawful guardian. Therefore, the conviction and punishment should have been made under Section 363, IPC for committing the offence under Section 361, IPC.

Therefore, in the absence of any ingredient regarding intention to murder, or to put the victim child in danger of being murdered, the conviction and sentence recorded under Section 364, IPC was not proper. However, as discussed above, from the evidence on record, it has been established that the appellant tried to take away the victim child, who was a minor at the relevant time from the lawful guardian. Therefore, by the alleged act, the appellant aforesaid tried to kidnap the said minor boy from his lawful guardian. Hence, it was a case of kidnapping simpliciter and as such the accused appellant committed the offence under Section 361, IPC, which is punishable under Section 363, IPC. The gravity and punishment of the offence under Section 363, IPC being lesser than the punishment prescribed by Section 364. Laxmi Chakraborty and etc vs State of Tripura, 2010 Cri LJ 1360 (Gauhati).

27. Attempt to commit robbery.—On careful reading of the evidence of, it could be seen that their evidence is not consistent with the allegations in the complaint. Further, though complainant P.S.I. has stated in his evidence that he secured the presence of panchas at the scene of offence itself and seized from the possession of accused panchas knives, the said panchas have not been examined to prove the seizure of knives under the panchanama have not stated anything about the Police apprehending the accused at the scene of offence itself and seizing from the person of accused, the two knives. Though it is alleged that the said four persons were holding knives and clubs also, no club is said to have been seized from any of the accused. Besides this, no evidence whatsoever is placed on record by the prosecution to establish that knives said to have been seized from the person of accused were deadly weapons so as to attract the penal provisions of Section 398 IPC. Arun Anthony Swamy vs. State of Karnataka, 2010 (2) CrLJ 1948 (Karn).

28. Rape and attempt to rape — Distinction between.—Distinction between an attempt to rape and rape is very suttle. When an attempt to penetrate is made, but no penetration takes place, it can be said to be an attempt to rape; but when an attempt to penetrate is made and a slight penetration takes place, the same would constitute rape. In the present case, the evidence on record does not suggest that there was an attempt to penetrate. That being the situation, there was no attempt to rape. Tika Ram Chettri vs State of Sikkim, 2010 (4) CriLJ 4025 (Sikkim).

29. Abetment of unsuccessful attempt to commit suicide.—Merely because S. 306 opens with the words "if any person commits suicide" it cannot be held that in a case of unsuccessful suicide there is no attempt to abet the commission of suicide. The abetment becomes complete only when suicide is committed and Section 306, IPC principally would come into operation only when suicide successfully takes place. The content and character of an offence of attempt to commit suicide is qualitatively different from the attempt to abet the commission of suicide. Suicide and its attempt on the one hand and abetment of commission of suicide and its attempt on the other are treated differently by law and, therefore, the one who abet the commission of an unsuccessful attempt to commit suicide cannot be held to be punishable merely under Section 309 r/w. 116, IPC, to implement the scheme of law he has got to be held to be punishable under Section 306 r/w. 511, IPC. Berin P. Varghese and Ors. v. State of Kerala, 2008 CriLJ 1759 (Ker).

30. Attempt to rape—Outrage Modesty of Woman.—An attempt to commit an offence can be said to begin when the preparations are complete and culprit commences to do something with the intention of committing the offence and which is a step towards the commission of the offence. The moment he commences to do an act with the necessary intention, he commences his attempt to commit the offence. This is what exactly provisions of S. 511 IPC require. In the present case accused has made preparations, his preparations were complete when he had put off his pant and took out his male organ in order to fulfill his lust, he put his male organ into the mouth of the prosecutrix and then struck against her private part or vice versa the accused had commenced his act and it was subjected towards the commission of offence, but in the meantime he was interrupted by the calls of the mother of the prosecutrix and fled away from the spot. Thus, series of acts inevitably leads to the commission of the offence which accused neither foresaw nor intended, happens to prevent this. Therefore, there is no escape but to hold accused guilty of the offence of attempt to rape and outraging the modesty of the prosecutrix. Kamal Kumar v. State of H. P., 2009 CriLJ 36 (HP).

Action of lifting victim, putting her on bed, removing her underwear and lifting her frock did outrage the modesty of victim. There was no attempt to rape as there was no attempt to penetrate. Held, offence under S. 354 made out. Tika Ram Chettri vs State of Sikkim, 2010 (4) CriLJ 4025 (Sikkim).
